WILSON TO LIMIT HUNT FOR VILLA

U. S. TROOPERS FOUGHT SECOND BATTLE AT PARRAL

MOBILIZES U. S. BIG INDUSTRIES FOR WAR NEEDS

AD MEN WILL ASSIST.

Within a few days' time 30,000 recruiting agents will begin mobilizing throughout the United States the largest army the world ever has known.

It will be the greatest step toward preparedness undertaken by any nation. It will be composed of the men who feed and clothe America and, for that matter, a major portion of the world. It will be a vast industrial army which, in event of war, will not bear arms but perform the equally important and patriotic duty of remaining at home and keeping the mines and factories in operation in order that the men in the field and on the seas may be adequately supplied with rations, uniforms, equipment of all kinds, and ammunition.

MARSHAL 30,000 MEMBERS.

Five of the largest engineering societies in the country have pledged the coöperation of every one of their 30,000 members in assembling the industrial forces to the naval consulting board, of which Thomas A. Edison is the head.

American Society of Civil Engineers.

American Institute of Mining Engineers.

American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

American Chemical society.

They will be supported in carrying out the plan by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

HIGHLY TRAINED FORCE.

Briefly, the plan is to make a thorough inventory of American manufacturing and productive sources and organize them into a highly trained force of patriotic citizens, who will stay on the job when war comes.

Two hundred and fifty of the most prominent engineers in the country have been organized into state committees of five by Howard E. Coffin, chairman of the committee on industrial preparedness of the naval consulting board. Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has appointed these men state directors. They will serve without pay and will automatically become associate members of the naval consulting board.

THESE ON COMMITTEES.

The names of the members of the committees of every state were made public in New York last night by Chairman Coffin. Those in the most important states follow:

ILLINOIS—R. W. Hunt, Frederick K. Copeland, P. Junkersfeld, William Hoskins, Chicago; Dr. W. F. M. Goss, Urbana.

INDIANA—William K. Hatt, Lafayette; George P. Hulst, East Chicago; George C. Lockwood, H. E. Barnard, Indianapolis; P. B. Hunting, Fort Wayne.

IOWA—George H. Boynton, Muscatine;

AVIATOR TELLS PLAN TO AWAKEN NATION TO PERIL

HE TELLS HIS PURPOSE.

BY DE LLOYD THOMPSON.
AVIATOR.

DE LLOYD THOMPSON

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—My purpose in making a raid tonight over the residential, business, and national building sections of Washington was to employ the most effective method of impressing officials and members of congress how absolutely at the mercy of hostile aircraft are the great cities of our country.

I could have blown the White House and capitol off the map had I been armed with the most deadly explosives, instead of fireworks bombs timed to explode 1,000 feet in the air.

My next raid will be far more spectacular than tonight's and will be unannounced. I will visit your city under the cover of darkness before I finish my campaign of acceleration of sentiment for preparedness.

From the viewpoint of the spectacular, my raid will be the nearest to a genuine Zeppelin demonstration that will be witnessed in time of peace.

My trip is being financed by a group of men who are sincere in their efforts to arouse the citizens of the entire country to the need for aerial preparedness. In our whole country we have not one anti-aircraft gun with which to combat the aerial enemy.

Mock Aerial Raid on Capital of U. S. to Test Defenses

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—An "enemy" aeroplane made a surprise attack on Washington tonight, dropped 600 pounds of high explosive and incendiary bombs on government property, and was endeavoring to destroy the bureau of engraving and printing when it was driven off by anti-aircraft guns at the Washington barracks.

This, theoretically, is what happened when the national capital was surprised by the sound of mock explosives and the purr of the aeroplane's motor.

It was a test conducted by the war department to ascertain whether the national capital could be protected from aeroplane attack. A board of officers will decide later whether the aeroplane succeeded or failed in its attack. The object of the anti-aircraft gunners, working in conjunction with powerful searchlights, was to drive the hostile aeroplane away or destroy it before serious damage could be accomplished.

At the Washington barracks officers said tonight that searchlights had picked up the invader without difficulty and that the guns could have riddled it before its object had been attained.

BREAKING OF SCHELDT DIKE FLOODS A LARGE DISTRICT.

Southern Holland and Northern Belgium Have Loss of $1,000,000 Because of Inundation.

AMSTERDAM, April 15.—The Scheldt dike has broken near Quatrecht, six miles east of Ghent, and a large area of southern Holland and northern Belgium is under water. The damage is estimated at $1,000,000. Thus far no loss of life has been reported.

BRING BREAK WITH GERMANY NEARER TO U. S.

Two New Attacks Are Reported as Wilson Pens Ultimatum.

AMERICANS IN PERIL.

EUROPEAN WAR SUMMARY

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—With the reported torpedoing of two more British merchantmen carrying Americans, the relations of the United States and Germany over the submarine issue took on a still more serious aspect today.

The news that German submarine commanders are continuing to sink enemy merchantmen with scant regard for the safety of Americans reached Washington, while President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing were making the final draft of the forthcoming note in which Germany is to be served with a notice, approximating an ultimatum, to reform the conduct of submarine warfare on commerce or suffer a break of diplomatic relations with the United States.

READY FOR "LAST NOTE."

The intelligence strengthened the determination of the president to carry out the purpose represented by what is heralded as "positively the last note" the administration will address to Berlin on the sinking of ships without providing adequately for the safety of all persons on board.

Administration officials said tonight that the note probably would be withheld a few days to permit the inclusion therein of a citation of the two incidents reported today. Some officials thought it possible that the detailed reports on these latest cases would cause the president to adopt a still more belligerent attitude and to decide to lay the whole matter before congress for action.

DOES NOT INFORM SENATORS.

The scheduled consultation between the president and members of the congress committees handling foreign affairs did not take place today. Mr. Wilson did not summon any senators or representatives.

At the White House it was stated that the president would not consult members of the congress committees until his "ultimatum" note is ready to send forward.

It was reiterated that the president is seeking neither the sanction nor the advice of congress in connection with the step he is about to take. He merely intends to communicate the purport of the note to the members of the committees "for their information."

MANY EXPECT EARLY BREAK.

Although it is not the present intention of the president to make demands upon Germany with a time limit for compliance specified—as would be the case with an actual ultimatum—there are many public officials here who believe that relations between the two countries will be severed within a fortnight.

They do not believe that Germany, intent on destroying the commerce of Great Britain and cutting off the war supplies of the allies, will abate the submarine campaign.

It is pointed out, therefore, that sooner or later a submarine commander will be likely to cause the death or injury of Americans and bring President Wilson face to face with the necessity of making good his threat to sever diplomatic relations or of backing down from his minatory policy.

In pro-British circles confidence is ex-

Machine Gun Used by Tompkins' Men on Mexican Mob

Effort to Recover Bodies of Slain Soldiers Causes Attack.

WOUNDED IN DANGER

BULLETIN.

El Paso, Tex., April 15.—The Mexican superintendent of one of the mining plants at Parral declared today that he had positive knowledge that a majority of the American forces were wiped out in the recent fighting.

BY E. T. CONKLE.
[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

El Paso, Tex., April 15.—A detachment of the Tenth United States cavalry, entering Parral to recover the dead bodies of two of their men who were killed when they hoped to obtain food supplies, opened fire with a machine gun when a mob rushed the detachment.

About forty-eight Mexicans were killed and between seventy and eighty wounded, according to the report of Wednesday's dash, made public here tonight by government officials.

TWELVE REPORTED INJURED.

Unofficial reports said twelve troopers were injured. They were said to be in grave danger from insufficient medical attention.

According to the official announcement here, Carranza troops were in the Mexican mob. The Tenth cavalry recovered the bodies of their dead and withdrew.

Seven Americans are reported to be besieged at the La Bouquilla del Carman mines, 200 miles east of Juarez, by bandits calling themselves Villistas. They have appealed to the border for help.

REPORT FROM GEN. PERSHING.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—The first official report on the clash Wednesday at Parral, reaching the war department late tonight from Gen. Funston, said two American troopers and forty Mexicans were killed. Secretary Baker made this announcement:

> A telegram from Gen. Funston quotes a telegram from Gen. Pershing to the effect that he has just received information of an unprovoked attack upon American soldiers who had entered Parral to buy supplies. His information is that two American soldiers and forty Mexicans were killed, but no further details had been reported at the time.

REPORTS MANY WOUNDED.

El Paso, Tex., April 15.—[Special.]—Although in the official report of Gen. Pershing regarding the Parral encounter there was no mention of wounded on either side, it is reported here that seven American troopers and more than 100 Mexicans were wounded.

The attack on the troops was described as an unprovoked assault. The Americans involved in the clash were a detachment of the Tenth cavalry (Negroes) under Col. W. C. Brown and not troopers of the Thirteenth cavalry under Maj. Tompkins, as stated in previous dispatches.

That reinforcements for Maj. Tompkins' command have reached the vicinity of Parral, probably Gen. Pershing's own command, was indicated tonight when it was stated by a military man that "there are enough troops within exchange of salutations of the citizens of Parral to cope with any trouble that may arise."

MORE TROOPS MADE READY.

Troop movements and preparations to send more forces into Mexico in the event the American line of communication is threatened continue along the border. A dispatch from Douglas today states that orders have been given to the Sixth infantry brigade and parts of three other regiments stationed in the city to be ready to move at a moment's notice.

The first battalion of the Twentieth infantry and two companies of the Twenty-fourth infantry are under arms to proceed into Mexico if needed.

MORE MEN ARE SENT.

San Antonio, Tex., April 15.—A message from Gen. Pershing received tonight said he had dispatched additional troops in the direction of Parral, but Gen. Funston withheld that part of the information relating to what units were being moved and the exact disposition.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—The weather bureau's forecast for the week beginning tomorrow says:

"A disturbance that was over the Rocky mountain region Saturday morning will move eastward and be attended by general rains the first part of the week over the region east of the Mississippi river.

Another disturbance will in all probability form over the southwest, the middle of the week, advance eastward and prevail over the middle west at the end of the week, attended by unsettled weather and local rains.

Temperatures during the week will average near the normal in practically all parts of the country, although a change to considerably cooler weather will overspread the northwestern states Tuesday and Wednesday.

"LASHT BUN," TRANSLATED, MEANS YOU'RE AN OLD MAN.

Chicago Professor Says When the "Call of the Spree" Quits You It Takes Youth Along.

St. Louis, Mo., April 15.—When you lean up against a post and stutter "my lasht bun," then you're through. You're an old man. When the desire of going on a spree leaves the manly breast it's an indication the youthful age is over. That's what Dr. Allan Hoben of Chicago university said today.

The professor said there were other sprees besides the alcoholic variety—namely, the little boy's desire to tie a few cans on the family dog's tail, and imbibing a chocolate ice cream soda.

There are but two ages, young and old, Hoben declared, throwing Shakespeare's periods of discretion, injustice, etc., into the discard. There is no second childhood.

When you no longer feel the pangs of thirst or the dog tail, tin cans and chocolate sodas no longer inspire you, then you have reached your limit.

$100,000 GIFT FOR ORCHESTRA

Pension Fund for Men Aided a Second Time by Mrs. Sprague Coolidge.

An additional $100,000 for pensioning superannuated members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will be contributed by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, daughter of the late A. A. Sprague, according to a telegram she sent yesterday to the orchestra.

The announcement of the new donation was made by Charles H. Hamill, vice president of the orchestra, to the audience at last night's concert in Orchestra hall. Every seat in the house was occupied. When Mr. Hamill made known the $100,000 gift the applause lasted forty seconds.

Mrs. Coolidge, who resides in Pittsfield, Mass., made a $100,000 pension gift to the orchestra when her father died a year ago. Her mother died a few weeks ago. Since the first Coolidge gift other persons had contributed a total of $37,500 for the same purpose.

Mrs. Coolidge's telegram of yesterday ordained that the fund be called the Albert and Nancy Sprague Memorial Pension fund.

Emmett Bradley, a senior in Northwestern university, who recently was found to be the most perfect male specimen, physically, in the university, has been found lacking otherwise.

He is accused of having visited the university library for some works on economics and of having taken with him a couple of small magazines, valued at 30 cents.

It being against the rules to remove certain magazines, of which these were a part, Bradley has been penalized by being refused a diploma with his class and denied entrance in any athletic affairs.

WOMEN SOLDIERS OF U. S. DECIDE TO WEAR TROUSERS.

Military Efficiency Wins Over Sentiment—Evening Gown Held to Be "Far More Immodest."

New York, April 15.—"Don't be ashamed of your arms and legs. Get acquainted with them. You are far more immodest in evening clothes than you would be in breeches."

That argument, backed up by a demonstration by Miss Anna Higgins, turned the tide and today the American Woman's League for Self-Defense decided in favor of adopting the garb of the male soldiers.

Military efficiency for a time seemed likely to be brushed aside by sentiment Mrs. General J. Hungerford Millbank asking the assembled women to ponder on the thoughts of "contemplative husbands and sweethearts" as they gazed at the skirtless ladies.

"Dresses belong to the women of the last generation," Miss Higgins countered. "Dresses have been the curse and the burden of women. Come forward and show that you have the courage to be a new woman."

DESERTERS DECLARE VILLA SUFFERS FROM HIS WOUND.

Seven Men Assert That Bandit Leader Is Crippled and Constantly in Great Pain.

El Paso, Tex., April 15.—Seven Villistas who voluntarily gave themselves up tonight to Gen. Gavira, commandant in Juarez, stated that when they deserted Villa at Satevo over a week ago, the bandit leader's wounded knee was badly swollen and giving him great pain.

The deserters said that on Villa's flight through San Andreas pass from Guerrero, where he was wounded in a battle with Carrancistas, he almost constantly screamed with agony in the jolting wagon.

The men said that they were forced to join Villa's band with forty others at San Buena Ventura. Villa lost a large part of his following in the Guerrero battle and by desertions, according to their stories.

ESTRANGED FROM WIFE, HE KILLS HER AND SELF.

Reported That She Refused to Live with Him Because of His Intemperate Habits.

William Graham, a painter, killed his wife and himself last night as the result of an estrangement that caused them to separate last summer.

The shooting took place in the home of the woman's father, Peter Rhode, 11533 Yale avenue. It is said that Graham had made several attempts to bring his wife back to live with him, but she had refused because of his intemperate habits.

There was no one in the house when the murder and suicide took place except Graham and his wife. The discovery was made by Mrs. Graham's father when he returned. Graham had been drinking, the police said.

WILL DISCUSS MEXICAN PLEA TO END CHASE

MEXICO CITY PLEASED.

MEXICAN WAR SUMMARY

President ready to discuss with Carranza question of limiting Villa hunt and eventual withdrawal.

Gen. Pershing makes official report that two Americans and forty Mexicans were killed at Parral. More troops sent there.

Senator Lewis, in senate speech, says mobile army should be sent into Mexico and national guard to border. Rodenberg in house introduces measure providing an embargo of arms to all Mexico.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—President Wilson has decided to inform Gen. Carranza, in response to his request for withdrawal of the American troops from Mexico, that the United States will negotiate for an agreement along these lines:

> The United States government is willing to agree to fix a limit on the distance the American troops now in pursuit of Villa shall proceed into Mexico, and to make that limit not much further south than the troops have proceeded.
> The United States government is willing to give assurances that the American troops will be withdrawn within "a reasonable time," or as soon as it is definitely established that Villa has reached a point where he can be dealt with better by the Carranza forces.

AID TO VILLA CHASE.

These points, it became known tonight, were discussed at yesterday's cabinet meeting. The president's advisers are said to have agreed on such a course in the belief that it would make stronger the chances of catching Villa. A reply to Gen. Carranza is said to be virtually completed and is expected to go forward in a short time.

Meantime the pursuit of Villa by the American troops will continue. Secretary Baker sharply outlined this today in a formal statement.

"The status of the expedition into Mexico is as it was at the beginning, in cordial coöperation with the de facto government of Mexico," he said. "That coöperation continues and the expedition continues. There has been no change in the orders and none is in contemplation."

ASK ADVICE OF MILITARY.

It is possible the opinions of the military advisers of the government, of the army general staff, and of Gen. Funston and Gen. Pershing already have been sought by the state department in its preparation of a reply to the Carranza request for withdrawal.

Movements of Carranza troops in and about the region in which the American forces are operating are being carefully checked by the general staff and Gen. Funston is transmitting information in this connection as rapidly as it reaches him. This may be of use to President Wilson's advisers in reaching a conclusion as to the ability of the Carranza forces to carry out alone the campaign against brigandage.

Announcement by Carranza officials of the close limits to which they will seek to have future expeditions across the border confined serves to show the probable course of the negotiations for the withdrawal of the American forces. Officials say it would have been manifestly impossible for 1,000 cavalrymen to accomplish anything whatever in checking border raids.

WILL POINT TO NECESSITY.

There are indications that the American note will contend that the present expedition is necessarily outside any such proposal as that suggested by Gen. Carranza since it had for its purpose the crushing of an organized and numerous force of bandits, not the pursuit and punishment of a marauding band of cattle thieves.

It is possible also that the American reply will lay stress on the fact that Gen. Carranza himself has ascribed to Villa no other purpose in his border operations than to precipitate a clash between the United States and the de facto government.

Under these circumstances, it will be argued, the United States was compelled to protect itself from incursions amounting almost to minor military invasions. The condition was recurrent and intolerable to the United States, it will be pointed out if this view is followed up, and made it necessary for the Washington government to go to the aid of its neighbor state with an expedition of such size and scope as to make certain that joint operations would accomplish what the de facto government forces had been unable to do alone.

MEXICO CITY PLEASED.

Mexico City, April 15.—The statement is published here and is given credence by the Mexican people that the United States has announced its intention of withdrawing the troops pursuing Villa. High officials of the government today expressed great pleasure at this, but neither Gen. Carranza nor any members of his cabinet would discuss the matter officially. They desire to await official advices, they said, from the Mexican ambassador at Washington, Eliseo Arredondo.

The newspapers, however, basing their comment on "the announced intention of the United States to withdraw," declare that the international crisis has passed, and that "the United States has once more shown its friendship and its desire not to violate the sovereignty or injure the susceptibilities of the Mexican nation."

In the war department assurances were given that there are sufficient Mexican troops now in the north to "wipe out" Villa and his followers, whose number is reported to have so dwindled as to make it insignificant.

Pledge of Friendship.

Latina Americana, an important review published here, commenting on "the United States' last declared intention," says:

"This act points toward a sure continuation of the policy of sincere friendship and respect based on the economy and liberty of Mexico as a free and independent nation."

In government circles it was said that Gen. Carranza probably would remain in Mexico City for a month, and that all the members of the cabinet would remain with him.

Special Envoy on Way.

San Antonio, Tex., April 15.—[Special.]—Duval West left here tonight for Washington in response to a message from President Wilson to confer on matters pertaining to the Mexican situation. Mr. West succeeded former Gov. John Lind as the president's personal representative in Mexico and made a tour of that country in January, 1915. He spent nearly two months in Mexico on this investigation a year ago, interviewing Villa, Carranza, and many other men.

THREE LINERS DELAYED BY THREATENED STRIKES.

New York, April 15.—Action which was believed to be the forerunner of an effort to cause a general strike among seamen of all classes on ocean going steamships resulted here today in one vessel, the American liner Mongolia, being delayed several hours in sailing and another, the New York and Porto Rico liner Brazos, being forced to anchor down the bay after leaving her pier.

The Mongolia crew, it was said, struck after a demand for higher wages had been refused by officials of the American line. When the vessel finally sailed it was explained that a "truce" had been effected, and that some of the demands of the strikers had been granted.

The Brazos and New York had made their way as far as the statue of liberty when delegations of firemen, coal passers, and sailors appeared before the captains and presented demands similar to those in the case of the Mongolia. The captains immediately anchored their ships and reported to the owners here. The latter declined to make any comment tonight.

REPORTED SLAIN; TWO SAFE.

El Paso, Tex., April 15.—Two Americans reported murdered by Villa's band near Guerrero last month are safe, according to General Supt. Ryan of the Cusi Mining company, who, however, confirmed the massacre at Minaca of Donald Bruo MacGregor, British subject, and Herman Blankenburg, German citizen. The Americans who are alive are Dr. A. T. Stell of Houston, Tex., and Bob Snell. A French merchant, Albert Pons, also reported killed, is safe, according to Ryan

SENATOR LEWIS TELLS OF DANGER THREATENING U. S.

Says Mobile Army Should Be Sent Into Mexico and National Guard to Border.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Congress became restive today under the restraint placed over it by President Wilson during his consideration of Carranza's demand that the American troops be withdrawn from Mexico immediately.

In the senate Senator Lewis of Illinois, the Democratic whip, in a brief speech, said the president should send the entire mobile army into Mexico to back up the force now there and that he should place the national guard on the border to protect it from raids or possible invasion.

For Ammunition Embargo.

In the house Representative Rodenberg of Illinois, a Republican, introduced a resolution to prohibit the further exportation of arms and ammunition to Mexico.

Senator Lewis astounded the senate when he made his reference to Mexico.

It was the first utterance from any administration senator on the floor.

Senator Lewis rose to reply to any attack on the national guard made by Senator Borah. He insisted the time had come for the senate to cease quarreling over the relative positions of the regular army and the national guard in the national defense program.

Says Guard Is Needed.

"Now, behold the situation in Mexico," Senator Lewis said. "Without assuming to pass judgment upon the manner in which the campaign in Mexico is being conducted, not assuming my judgment against those who are in command—for all of whom I have great respect—I do here prophesy that the moment will come when we must send our army in increased strength into Mexico rapidly to reinforce the force there at present in order that this reinforced number may move after the execution of the object which we assumed when we entered there—the punishment of Villa and his followers who murdered our citizens.

"But in order to have this force follow in sufficient number it will be necessary that the national guard of those states surrounding that border be called out. They are acclimated and particularly competent by virtue of their knowledge of the situation."

Want Troops to Do Work.

After he quit the floor Senator Lewis was asked by several administration senators what he meant by running the chance of precipitating a Mexican outburst in the senate at this time.

"It was not my intention," he said, "to do anything which might embarrass the administration. I was merely stating a perfectly obvious fact—that the president should send the regular army into Mexico and use the guard on the border.

"Also, it is my opinion that there are sufficient senators here who oppose the withdrawal of the American troops to prevent Mr. Wilson yielding to the Carranza administration at this time. The senate and the people want the troops to do their work in Mexico before they get out."

STATE DEPARTMENT SILENT ON ARMS GOING TO MEXICO.

Takes No Action on Big Shipments of Ammunition to "Loyal Carrancista Forces."

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.] Inquiry was made today at the state department about how long the department and the administration intend to continue shipping ammunition into Mexico.

Specific inquiry was made about the announcement from Douglas that 300,000 rounds of rifle ammunition have just been delivered to "loyal Carancista forces" and a shipment of 1,000,000 rounds is on the way.

The state department maintained silence. It continues following the policy of saying nothing about the heavy arming of Mexicans by grace of the administration and is doing nothing about stopping the Mexicans from getting all the arms and munitions they wish.

DENIES GIVING AID TO DIAZ.

GUATEMALA, April 15.—President Estrada Cabrera of Guatemala denies reports that he has assisted Gen. Felix Diaz with money and arms. He said that the reports of mobilizations on Guatemalan territory were false.

Larger Navy and Universal Drill Urged by Commerce Men

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, with 300,000 individual members and 700 organization members in all sections of the country, has come out with what it considers an adequate defense program. Chicago Commerce, the weekly publication of the local Association of Commerce, fairly bristles with the announcement of the man sized policy the committee of fourteen representative men has returned for consideration after months of study.

"The minutemen of nineteen hundred and something may prove as alert and resolute as the fathers of '76, but how shall they offer resistance?" Editor William H. Harper asks in presenting the proposals before the Chicago business men for ratification.

Here's the Program.

The program as outlined by the committee, of which Bion J. Arnold is the Chicago representative, is built around ten recommendations:

"Increase national defense forces on sea and land and coördinate with them our industrial and financial strength.

"Create a council of national defense to aid in developing of an adequate and continuing policy of defense.

"Create a staff of industrial mobilization to secure effective use of economic resources in war.

"Adopt at once such program of naval construction as would restore the United States at least to rank of second naval power in the Atlantic with 'surplus in the Pacific sufficient to protect its coasts, its possessions, its trade routes, the canal zone, and adjacent territory.'

"Create by law a general staff for the navy.

"Increase the regular army 'until it together with its trained reserves shall be sufficient to furnish the first line of land defense as recommended by the general staff of the army or by the council of national defense or similar body after it has been created by law.'

Favor Universal Training.

"Adopt universal military training as a 'fundamental democratic principle of our military policy,' to be enforced by law to furnish adequate land, sea, and industrial forces in peace and war.

"A fundamental feature of the national policy for supplying war material should be to educate private industry in time of peace in manufacture of such material under prearranged government regulation of prices, rather than to trust to protection in government plants alone.

"Educative arrangements with private manufacturers for war material in peace should serve not only current needs but should accumulate a reserve sufficient from the beginning of a possible war until the industries of the country can produce increased supplies then necessary.

"Add to the regular army adequate number of commissioned and noncommissioned officers for detached service and create a properly trained officers' reserve corps enough to officer the many men to be raised at once in case of war."

Heads of the Movement.

The following committee formulated the program:

Bascom Little, president of the Cleveland chamber of commerce, chairman; Bion J. Arnold; Hugh Chalmers, president of the Chalmers Motor company; D. S. Chamberlain of Des Moines, head of the Chamberlain Medicine company; W. H Cowles, editor of the Spokane Review; Prof. Henry C. Emery of Providence Louis T. Golding, editor of the News Press of St. Joseph, Mo.; Capt. Matthew E. Haana, U. S. A., New York, retired; Dr. Ira N. Gifford Heads Survey.

The work of making the survey will be superintended by W. S. Gifford, supervising director of the committee.

"In my judgment they form a vast, inflexible organization, the like of which has never been known in this or any other country in the world," said Chairman Coffin in announcing the appointments. "Moreover, it is an organization which from top to bottom is absolutely nonpartisan."

The state directors have been instructed to organize as speedily as possible and begin taking stock of industries in their states which can be used in time of war. They will be assisted by field aids chosen from the membership of the engineering societies, men thoroughly familiar with the state's factories, mills, and mines.

D. K. French, secretary of the Chicago section of the American Chemical society, outlined the plan before that organization at its monthly dinner Friday evening at the Hotel Sherman, and the society unanimously pledged itself to aid in perfecting the plan.

Ad Men Offer Services.

Herbert S. Houston, president of the advertising men's organization, wrote to President Wilson, Secretary Daniels, and Chairman Coffin offering the aid of the members of the ad clubs throughout the country. Secretary Daniels wrote:

"Through the assistance rendered the naval consulting board by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in the accomplishment of industrial mobilization, which lies at the root of any and every plan for true preparedness, a patriotic service will be rendered to this country that is beyond price."

Mr. Coffin, in accepting the offer, wrote that the advertising men "with a clean record and splendid trained personnel, can render an incalculable service to the nation."

"This is not a war measure, but a peace measure," said Mr. Houston. "The militarist will support it and so will the pacifist, and we have adopted as our slogan: 'National defense and international peace.'

"Publishers of leading newspapers, magazines, and farm papers, poster men and electric sign men, trade paper publishers and others representing different advertising interests have already offered space to carry the advertising without cost to the government.

Prepare for Conscription.

"While the primary thing, of course, is service to this country, it is manifest that this work of the engineers will be of the greatest service to industry in times of peace.

"If industry is mobilized for defense it will be placed on a basis of efficiency to meet the keen competition that surely will follow the present war.

"We are enlisting the services of the most distinguished illustrators in the country, of the best copy writers and engravers, and it is our purpose to have a campaign of advertising that will be commensurate in quality and power with the great national task which the government has asked us to join the engineers in undertaking."

BORAH CHARGES VICIOUS WASTE OF GUARD FUNDS

Federal Money Embezzled in Some Cases, He Says in Attack on Officer Pay.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Federal appropriations for national guard maintenance have been "shamefully and disgracefully wasted or in some instances actually embezzled," Senator Borah charged today.

He attacked on the senate floor an amendment by Senator Reed to give officers above the rank of captain in state militia $500 annually. The bill is a political measure, he declared, but it was passed 41 to 14.

The senate also passed an amendment providing that all guardsmen on enlistment be required to take an oath to obey orders from the president as well as the governors of their respective states.

Cites Figures as Proof.

"While these funds may have been paid out within the law, technically, the manner in which they were utilized and taken charge of for the benefit of the officers to the exclusion of enlisted men is shameful," Borah said.

Senator Borah cited figures to show how a great proportion of funds allotted the guard in various states had been paid out to the officers. Figures shown were:

Answers Defenders of Guard.

Senator Borah stood by his statement in spite of a rush of senators to defend the guard of their own states.

"I do not know that there are any officers of the national guard whom I would distrust personally," he said.

"I call the attention of senators that I have not made a general charge. I have said that the money appropriated under the Dick law has been shamelessly used and not used as it would have been if the officers drawing it had been paying the taxes creating it.

"This may not be technically a crime, but morally it is, and until these figures are corrected or withdrawn by the war department I will stand on my statement that there has been a shameless waste of public money."

Urging his amendment, Reed said:

"We may need the national guard within thirty days. We should maintain the guard at the highest stage of efficiency. The commanding officers—colonels, lieutenant colonels, and majors—are the brains and directing force of the guard."

The Chamberlain bill allows $500 annual pay for militia captains, $300 for first lieutenants, and $250 for second lieutenants. Reed's amendment would give higher officers $500 a year.

Reed asserted that if the funds had been misappropriated some one in the war department permitted it and should be made to answer in court martial.

An amendment by Senator Sutherland of Utah for an addition increase of 5,112 men in the coast artillery, making the total strength of that organization 30,000, was defeated, 30 to 27.

In the nine days previous to yesterday noon 1,048 men were enlisted in the campaign to raise an additional 20,000 soldiers for the regular army.

San Francisco led with 101; Chicago was second with 80 and New York third with 59. The total of recruits for the last thirty days is 3,927.

Senator Reed introduced an amendment to provide schools to train young men as reserve officers for the army and navy.

WINNETKA COPS CAN'T TALK WAR

Chief Will Fire Men Who Fight Battles at the Stoveside.

HE MEANS BUSINESS.

If the Winnetka police force desires to hold its job any longer it will have to stop arguing about the war.

The other night William M. Peterson, chief of the force dropped into the village station to see how things were getting along. He found the entire force of nine men in the midst of a heated word battle concerning the respective causes for which the Germans and the allies are fighting.

"I'd hate to tell you what I think of the Dutch," Policeman Charles Cooper was observing.

"Go take a jump in the lake and be a bloody Englishman," was the retort of Policeman Uedelhofen.

A Man of Few Words.

Chief Peterson didn't say anything at the time, but yesterday the following notice appeared tacked to the walls of police headquarters in the village hall:

> After today no more arguments as to any foreign countries will be tolerated in the police department.
> Our flag is red, white, and blue, and if you want to fight for some other, just leave at once, for they need you more than we do.
> This applies to all members of the police department, whether on or off duty. Any violation of this notice will mean a thirty day lay-off without pay.

The Lineup.

In addition to Policeman Cooper, the pro-ally supporters were said to be Policemen William Gorman, Michael Cunies, and Patrick Murphy. Pro-German cohorts of Policeman Uedelhofen were declared to be Policemen Fred Winter, John Demolow, John Schultz, and William Bergdorf.

Residents of Winnetka gasped in amazement on looking out of their windows last night. The policemen were traveling their beats!

LETTER FROM FALL DEPICTS REIGN OF LOOT IN MEXICO.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—A gloomy picture of interior Mexican conditions was painted in another telegram received today by Senator Gallinger from Senator Fall, who is on the border. Fall's dispatch said Mexican officials are looting in all sections "in every imaginable way." He urged formation of three citizen regiments from New Mexico and Texas for Mexican duty. The men, he says, would furnish their own arms and mounts. He says he got his information from his ranch employés.

Freshness

One of the first things you'll notice about Sulzer's Honey-Rice Bread is its extreme freshness. It is so soft and white, with a fine, flaky texture which you cannot resist. And it has such a good, substantial body and wholesome flavor that you'll realize why Honey-Rice is taking the place of homemade bread in many homes where women USED to labor all day baking a few loaves of bread.

It is good to know that you can get such splendid bread and get it absolutely fresh every day—morning and afternoon. And it adds much to the meal when you serve good bread, fresh. Try Honey-Rice with your family TODAY—note the satisfaction of every one—then ask yourself if it pays to bake all day at home to produce a few loaves of bread.

HOYNE TRACES VICE BRIBES TO SIX SERGEANTS

Says "Higher Up" May Be Indicted in New North Side Expose.

Another sensational north side shakedown exposé is coming.

Detectives from State's Attorney Hoyne's office, coöperating with investigators employed by the Committee of Fifteen, have uncovered what they describe as a graft ring of six detective sergeants and a civilian go between or fixer who for the last eight or ten months have collected tribute from more than fifty north side resort owners and dive keepers.

Have Dictagraph Records.

A mass of evidence, including dictagraph records of conversations between keepers of disorderly flats and collectors of protection money, is now in the state's attorney's office ready for presentation to the April grand jury.

Announcement of the exposé was made by Mr. Hoyne following a conference with Samuel P. Thrasher, superintendent of the Committee of Fifteen. The names of the policeman, formerly attached to the East Chicago avenue station, and the "fixer" are in the state's attorney's hands, but he refuses to reveal them for the present.

"Higher Up" Periled.

Mr. Hoyne declared he was so sure of the evidence he expects no trouble in obtaining the indictments of the principals on charges of conspiracy and bribery. He also said some persons higher up in the police department may be hit before the investigation is through, but as yet no substantial evidence has been gathered against any save those mentioned.

Still another ring on the north side which is said to have even taken resort keepers to the city hall in order to point out to them attachés of the Morals court and detectives from Second Deputy Funkhouser's office is being investigated, but the evidence against them is not yet in shape for presentation to the grand jury.

None of the detectives involved in the ring of seven are still at the Chicago avenue station, while some are at the detective bureau and others at outlying stations, Mr. Hoyne said. They never accepted less than $5 at a time and when times were "good" for the commercialized vice interests their scale went higher.

Regular System, Hoyne Says.

"These detectives with the aid of the fixer made regular visits to the disorderly houses on the north side and made the keepers or owners kick in," said Mr. Hoyne. "I'll go before the April grand jury next week and I do not believe I will have any trouble in having indictments returned charging at least six detective sergeants and the civilian go-between with bribery and conspiracy. The bulk of my evidence came to me within the last two weeks, but we have been working on the case much longer."

"Did these sergeants involved keep the graft themselves?" he was asked.

"I haven't learned that the graft went any higher yet," replied Mr. Hoyne. And he laid emphasis on "yet."

Tapped Telephone Wires?

"I have dictograph records and records of telephone conversations among my evidence," Mr. Hoyne continued. "I also have statements of a number of persons, and I know the name of the man who acted as fixer between the police and the divekeepers. I also have the stories of persons who in some instances trailed the detective sergeants on their trips to resorts to collect the graft.

"One resort on the north side plays an important part in my evidence. We found that certain of the grafting detectives were levying tribute there.

Setting the Trap.

"We concealed a dictograph behind a picture in the disorderly flat and then the investigators took up a station in a vacant room across the hall. They had a stenographer in the vacant room with them and the wires were strung so that they could sit in the vacant room and hear all the conversation that took place in the disorderly flat.

"The dictograph records show certain of the detectives called on the owner of the disorderly place to collect money for protection. On this occasion the detectives made demands for money. The owner paid them $5. The detectives wanted more.

"The owner finally told them he wasn't doing business the way he ought to be doing it; that he couldn't pay more, and the detectives at length accepted the $5 bribe.

Keeps Names Secret.

"I am in possession of names of all the detectives and others involved, but I cannot make them public at this time. My investigators are still at work. They may have more information at any time.

"One ring of grafters went so far as to take resort owners down to the Morals court to point out Mr. Funkhouser's [illegible] They did [illegible] would [illegible] and [illegible]

"They wanted to make sure that no money would be offered to Mr. Funkhouser's men, should they drop into the resorts. My men are on the trail of this ring, and I expect developments before long."

"Do you expect more members of the police force will be involved in the graft?" was asked.

"I can't answer that now," Mr. Hoyne replied. "We aren't through, however."

Follows Becker Case.

The "ring of seven" exposé follows on the heels of the shakedown investigation which led to the indictment of "Spike" Hennessey, north side saloonkeeper; Francis A. Becker, Thompson lieutenant in the Twenty-first ward, and Isadore Rosen. It is really a part of the thorough combing of the north side which the state's attorney's office has conducted ever since the operations of the Labow gang were brought to his attention.

"LOOKING FORWARD"? BE A DEMOCRAT, WILSON SAYS.

President Asserts His Party Is the One for All Who Seek Realization of Human Rights.

New York, April 15.—President Wilson characterized the Democratic party as the party "for all the forward looking forces of the country" in a letter read at the annual dinner of the Young Men's Democratic club here tonight. The president was to have been the principal speaker, but was prevented from filling the engagement by pressure of foreign affairs. Joseph P. Tumulty, his secretary, read the letter, which follows:

"The Democratic party has become the party for young men and for all the forward looking forces of the country, for those who will not turn back to privileged control and who do mean to go forward to the realization of every genuine human right, and I had hoped to have the privilege of speaking to you tonight, however imperfectly, the message of hope and confidence which should spring to the lips of every Democrat who sees in their true light the past achievements and future opportunity of the great party to which we belong."

SUICIDE RISE DUE TO SACHS?

Did the publicity attending the suicide of Dr. Theodore B. Sachs influence others to take their lives?

Coroner Peter M. Hoffman says it did and wants an official scientific investigation to determine the cause of suicide as a general proposition. Ministers of the gospel predicted that other suicides would follow if the Sachs martyr agitation continued.

At any rate, some official figures dug up from the coroner's office yesterday may prove interesting.

These statistics show that in the two weeks following the Sachs suicide there has been an increase of almost one suicide a day over the two weeks preceding the Sachs death.

Two Periods Compared.

For the two weeks previous eighteen cases were determined as suicide, and in addition there were four cases in which suicide was suspected, but could not be established, and the juries contented themselves with returning "open verdicts."

For the two weeks following the Sachs death there have been twenty-nine cases of positive suicide, with five suspected, or "open verdict," cases.

"I have observed that suicides increased at an alarming rate since Dr. Sachs took his life," said Coroner Hoffman, "and I think it's up to somebody to find a remedy. There is no doubt that the manner in which Dr. Sachs' act was agitated influenced weak minded persons who otherwise might have not committed this crime—and crime it is. The Sachs suicide has been publicly praised at massmeetings.

Driven to It by Worry.

"It appears that there are a lot of persons of morbid temperament or of deficient mentality—probably driven to that state temporarily through some great worry—who on the spur of the moment don't care—for the time being—whether they live or die, and they seem unable to resist following the example of an influential citizen. I have never seen it so strongly accentuated as in the Sachs case.

"It's really a sad state of affairs."

ARMY MAN'S WIFE SUICIDE.

Mrs. Frances Hennessy, Daughter of Gen. Robert O'Reilley, Inhales Gas at Washington.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Mrs. Frances Hennessy, wife of Capt. Frederick B. Hennessy of the Third field artillery, and daughter of Gen. Robert O'Reilley, late surgeon general of the army, committed suicide here today by asphyxiation.

GIRL DESCRIBES TRAP IN HOTEL AS DEATH NEARS

Nurse Tells "Daddy" She Was Forced Into Room After Being Given Tablet.

BY SIDNEY WILLIS.

To clear her name in daddy's eyes, Carolyn Kister, from the valley where the shadows are fast gathering, yesterday sent her voice faintly back bearing the tale of her wronging to the gray-haired, toil worn old man who sat by her cot in the Washington Park hospital.

"There, there, Carrie, honey," said the old man, "it's probably too much for your strength just at present. I wouldn't talk. Just let daddy sit and hold your hand."

"No, daddy. The time is short, and I know that I am going. I want you to know from my lips that I was a good girl. You know that, don't you, daddy?"

Father Believes in Her.

"Yes, honey," sobbed Franklin Kister, the student nurse's father. "All your friends believe in you, and daddy couldn't believe that you ever did wrong."

Then, slowly, sometimes halting as the poison's corrosive march made her face twitch with pain, Carolyn Kister, the girl who swallowed bichloride of mercury in the Washington Park hotel rather than face her friends with the scar of an unwilling sin on her soul, gave up her story.

To her father, who reached Chicago in the morning from Arlington, O., she said she met William A. Callahan Monday night at the home of a girlhood friend. Callahan called with his automobile. In the machine with him, according to the story the girl told, was Harry Newman, a theatrical man.

Asked to Drink Whisky.

"I wanted him to drive me home to get Miss Gallagher, daddy," said the girl, "but after the machine was started he laughed at that and turned south. We went to a place on Clark street and there he asked me to take a drink of whisky. I said that I never had taken whisky in my life. Then I agreed to drink some scuppernong wine, but he whispered to the waiter and he brought whisky. I drank a sip of it.

"Then Harry Newman said he was going to the Lamb's café and meet a girl friend, and he left us.

"We danced some at the Lambs', and about midnight I said we had better go home. But Callahan started south again and we went to a place on Thirty-ninth street.

Repulses His Advances.

"I drank something from a big, tall glass. I don't know what it was. Then he suggested that I go to his room with him. I angrily asked what he meant, and then he cursed me. He said he wouldn't take me home in his auto, but would put me in a taxi.

"I thought I was to go alone, but after whispering to the chauffeur he climbed in. It seemed that night as if all men were in league to help him against one poor girl. In the taxi he attempted to hug and kiss me, but I repulsed him. Then he forced a tablet that tasted salty into my mouth, and after that I was dazed. I don't know what the drug was.

Force Her to a Room.

"When I came somewhat to my senses I was lying, fully dressed, on the parlor floor of the Normandie hotel. A Negro soon came in with Callahan and together they forced me to a room. The Negro left and Callahan began to throw his clothes off. I screamed, ran out of the door, and downstairs, begging for help. A man standing in the lobby laughed, and he helped Callahan who followed, to catch me and take me back to the room.

"I cried and called for help, but it was useless. He had his way. When he let me go the next day I saw the name of the hotel. It was the Normandie. Daddy, the awful crime was too much. I couldn't tell, and I feared even to face my friends with such a sin on my conscience.

"I asked advice of several acquaintances whether I should end my life. Then I went to 'suicide's bridge' in Lincoln park on Wednesday and tried to climb over and end it all. A young man stopped me, however.

Wrote Three Letters.

"I finally bought the poison, and went to the Washington Park hotel. I registered as Mrs. Martin. Then, after writing a letter to you, daddy, one to Miss Gallagher, and one to Callahan, I put the tablets in some warm water and took them and went to bed. The matron found me the next day, and I was brought to the hospital."

Mr. Kister declared that he was too bewildered at present to be concerned with revenge for his daughter's alleged wrongs. He declared that he would be content to let the law take its course with respect to Callahan, who is now being held in $1,500 bonds. Callahan, who is married and has children, denied Miss Kister's story angrily. He said Miss Kister had forced herself upon him.

"I don't want revenge, but I want justice for my little girl. Just now I wish to be alone with my sorrow," said Mr. Kister. "She was the youngest. Her mother died when she was 11 months old and from then until she left some two years ago to become a nurse I was mother and father to her. And now I am here waiting until she dies to take back nothing but the body to our little home."

Denial by Mrs. Detemtreou.

Mrs. W. Detemtreou of 3842 Ward avenue denied during the day that Miss Kister made the acquaintance of Callahan at her home.

"Neither Miss Kister nor Mr. Callahan was ever here for Sunday dinner," declared Mrs. Detemtreou. "Miss Kister was at my home Monday evening and Mr. Callahan called for her with an automobile, but I did not meet him. I understood Miss Kister had been acquainted with him for two years."

ARTIST WHO FOUND IDEAL GETS LICENSE TO MARRY.

Some months ago Artist Ernest Weichsel found his "perfect princess." His wife heard about it. Up to that time the wife's generosity had enabled him to pursue his art studies, until he became fairly successful.

Then, when he began to talk openly of his "perfect princess," Mrs. Weichsel told him she didn't like it. Mr. Weichsel then went into court and presented a petition to have the marriage to his wife annulled, on the grounds that he married her before the expiration of two years after he was divorced.

A Miss Louise K. Walden, who is 23 years old and lives at 6039 Indiana avenue, denied that she was Weichsel's "perfect princess." She denied knowing him.

$300,000 GIVEN FOR ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL WING

Directors Say Need for the Remainder of $2,000,000 Fund Is Acute.

The board of trustees of St. Luke's hospital made an appeal to public spirited citizens yesterday for subscriptions to a $2,000,000 fund which they consider necessary to take care of the pressing needs of the growing institution. Three hundred thousand dollars has already been donated.

Among the donors are:

J. OGDEN ARMOUR, $100,000.
MRS. H. H. WALKER, $50,000.
SAMUEL INSULL, $25,000.
ROBERT ROULSTON, $25,000.

These donations total $200,000. In addition, the trustees of the hospital have subscribed $120,000. Mr. Insull is one of the trustees, and his $25,000 is a part of the $120,000 of the trustees' subscriptions.

"This appeal has been issued," it states, "so that the public may understand the needs which seriously handicap the work carried on in the free wards, the increasing difficulties of maintaining a high standard in the nurses' training school, and the very urgent need for accommodations for patients of moderate circumstances."

Present Condition Called Menace.

To meet the increasing demand for the charitable work carried on under conditions which are said to be a menace to the welfare of nurses and patients, a building plan has been worked out.

The new building is to be of fourteen stories and of fireproof construction. It will cost $1,000,000. It is planned to build it in three sections to replace the old east wings of the hospital on Indiana avenue.

For Patients of Small Means.

"The proposed building will give immediate accommodation to 400 patients. A large number of rooms and small wards will be designed for patients of limited income who can at a moderate charge have the same service as patients in the Smith memorial section. At present Chicago provides the wealthy and the very poor with the best hospital service in the world, but for those unable to afford high priced accommodations there is no happy medium.

"Donors shall have the right to name a ward or other unit division in the first section of the new Indiana avenue building in accordance with the following list:

$5,000, donor can name a room with a single bed.
$10,000, donor can name a three bed ward.

"St. Luke's hospital was started in 1864 in a small building on State street. It had seven beds and two nurses. As the city grew and demands for hospital service became more urgent, a building was erected on Indiana avenue, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.

Other Buildings Added.

"To this original building, which is still in use, other buildings have been added from time to time, the latest of this original group having been built in 1891. In 1907, through the generosity of the late James Henry Smith, who gave $500,000 for a building in memory of his uncle, George Smith, a modern fireproof six story structure was erected.

"Today it is this splendidly equipped Smith memorial which is generally thought of when St. Luke's hospital is mentioned, and there is prevalent an impression that St. Luke's is one of the wealthiest and most heavily endowed hospitals in the city. This, however, is not the case. The actual endowment amounts to $424,862, and an annual income of $10,000 from the Daniel B. Shipman fund."

BERLIN REPORTS DISCORD 'TWIXT CZAR AND BRITAIN

Dispute Over War Policy Partly Patched Up at Paris Conference.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

[Copyright: 1916: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, April 15, by wireless to Sayville.—That serious discord has cropped up in the camp of the allies over differences between Russia and England; that the Paris conference was marked by sharp clashes between Premier Asquith and Shilinski, representing the Russian government, because of Russia's war operation plans in Asia are statements made in a special dispatch from Geneva to the Budapest Hirlap, the leading Hungarian organ.

The Hirlap professes that this information comes from reliable sources, and gives alleged details of what led up to the conference and of the transactions at the conference, the purpose of which was to reëstablish harmony and unison.

Russia and England Row.

The Hirlap is the authority for the following:

"That only with great difficulty was Russia induced to participate in the conference, Russia demanding that the conference take up the question of the Dardanelles to the solution of which England and France had obligated themselves to pursue. The former wanted assurances of the full freedom of Asia; in fact, demanded that its Asiatic operations should be excluded from the conference.

"Also that Russia's agreement with Japan should not be touched upon."

England, however, where these wishes of its ally had aroused distrust, hoped to persuade or compel Russia at the conference to drop them, the Hirlap goes on to say.

England Seeks General Result.

In preliminary conversations between Petrograd and London, England already had dwelt strongly on the fact that in the interest of a future general victory for the allies Russia ought to subordinate any special aims to the general and mutual aims and the goal, and not hinder the solution of pending questions with special demands.

Russia argued that England and France must long ago have come to the realization that military victories are not won with diplomatic documents, but with blood and iron; that, moreover, advice of a military nature must be declined when it comes from a source which had yet to prove its military superiority; that Russia was not in a position to fight only in front of its own door, like England, and that Russia fought where it could see benefit and achieve something.

Sacrifices for Russia.

Asquith is alleged to have answered that England had made tremendous sacrifices for Russia and that it would even inaugurate a universal service conscription.

Shilinski declared in reply that England was fighting for its mistakes, Russia for its rights; that England could have avoided universal service, but had not followed the proper course for such avoidance.

Russia informed the British government, the story runs, that Russia was conducting the war for Russian aims and goal, and therefore Russia's interests must be accorded recognition.

Receiving a sharp answer from England, Russia declined to participate in the conference. Through France's mediation, however, an agreement was reached which caused Russia to send a delegate.

Errors Blamed on British.

Then the conference met sharp clashes and excited scenes are alleged to have taken place. Asquith insisted that the fate of Europe must be decided in Europe, and therefore Russia's armies could be used more advantageously in Europe itself.

Thereupon Gen. Shilinski, in the name of his sovereign and government, ironically declared that Russia cannot permit its strategy and operations to be dictated by those who were responsible for the unfortunate policy in the orient (the Dardanelles campaign); that the crushing of Serbia was England's fault and mistake because its diplomacy had not prevented Bulgaria from joining the central powers; that the unlucky Saloniki adventure was also attributable to England.

The alleged debate, in which France is said to have been inclined to join with Russia, while Italy and Belgium took England's side, became heated.

REINFORCE PERSHING AND SEND SUPPLIES, WARNING OF EXPERT

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—At the present time it is difficult to tell whether the administration intends to withdraw Gen. Pershing and his force from Mexico or maintain it across the border. Whichever move they decide to make, the immediate need is the prompt sending of a considerable force to Pershing without in any way diminishing the number held along the border to prevent raids.

Secretary Baker has directed Gen. Funston to take all necessary steps. However, these cannot be taken unless sufficient troops are sent immediately. There are not sufficient mobile troops of the regular army within the continental limits of the United States for this purpose.

Troops in Precarious Position.

The position of Pershing's command is precarious for a number of reasons. He must have sufficient ammunition. This can only reach him over his lines of communication. The continued reports of various columns lacking sufficient food show that these lines are not working properly. Food has been shipped over the railway as well as by motor transport. Ammunition can only be sent by the latter.

Therefore if food is short because of lack of transportation facilities there is all the more danger of the command running short of ammunition.

In other words, at the present time, when Pershing's communications are nominally open with the United States and the Carrancista garrisons are supposed to be friendly, his position is difficult because of the supply question.

Parral Clash Just a Start.

The fight at Parral in which the civilian population attacked our troops and were aided, it is reported, by the Carrancista garrison, is typical of what may happen at any time in spite of Carranza. If Carranza insists on our withdrawal, as he probably will find himself compelled to do, and we refuse, the inhabitants and troops throughout all the region in which our men are operating will attack them.

On the other hand, should we start to withdraw, the probabilities are that the Mexicans will take this as a sign of defeat and attack our troops anyhow.

A large force of the Carrancista troops in Sonora which should have been moved up to the passes of the Sierra Madras immediately after the raid on Columbus in order to prevent Villa from crossing these mountains, and which were not, now have appeared. Villa is hundreds of miles south of this position.

Ready to Attack Pershing.

Therefore, the only interpretation of this move is that they have been placed in this position in order to attack promptly and cut Pershing's line of communication, which runs just to the east of this range. The Carrancista troops also occupy various points along the border and along both lines of railway from Juarez south.

The Parral district is surrounded by Carrancista garrisons. This district and the country south is one in which the Villa sentiment is strong.

All railways, not only from other parts of Mexico but also from the American border, are in the hands of the Carrancistas. As Pershing is forbidden to use these railways, any concentration attempted by him because of danger of attack will have to be made by marching. The Mexicans can concentrate their troops by rail. This, of course, is a tremendous advantage.

Carranza Troops Entrain.

Already a report has been received from Vera Cruz stating that a number of trains loaded with troops and artillery have started for the north.

Should any further attack be made on Pershing's command efforts undoubtedly will be made at the same time to cut his lines of communication. Due to the length of these lines, the comparatively small number of our troops guarding them, and the considerable Carrancista forces on or near them, this probably could be done without much difficulty.

Such attacks undoubtedly would also mean that the various garrisons along these lines would be cut off from both Pershing and the United States as well as from receiving any supplies, ammunition, or reinforcements.

Stand Siege or Fight.

Pershing with such troops as he could concentrate would have to take his choice between standing siege and fighting his way out. If he has plenty of ammunition he could undoubtedly do either without too much difficulty.

However, he could only find sufficient food for his forces in the principal towns. To get it he would have to capture them. As the towns are built of mud or masonry buildings close together, they are comparatively easily defended and can only be taken with some loss to the attackers.

The more the possibilities of the present situation are examined from a military point of view the more the necessity is seen to immediately occupy the railways leading to Pershing with sufficient troops to insure their being kept open so that he may promptly receive such food, ammunition, and reinforcements as may be necessary at any time.

Funston cannot do this because the administration will not permit him to occupy the railways, nor will they give him sufficient troops.

Sufficient troops can only be gotten by calling out the national guard.

AUSTRIA WILL VACCINATE POPULATION OF GALICIA.

Military Authorities Decide on Drastic Measures to Wipe Out Epidemics Caused by War.

VIENNA, April 15.—The Austrian military authorities have decided to vaccinate, or revaccinate the whole population of some three and a half millions of Galicia. As a beginning 600 men and women medical students at Cracow university are taking a three weeks' practical course in learning how to carry out this immense work.

Galicia throughout the war has been the hotbed of diseases, such as cholera, smallpox, spotted typhus, and dysentery, and now that the hundreds of thousands of Poles who fled to Vienna and other places when the Russians came have once more returned to their homes, the authorities deem it highly necessary to take vigorous measures to protect the health, not only of the inhabitants of Galicia, but of the whole monarchy.

DANISH STEAMER CAPTURED BY BIG GERMAN SUBMARINE.

Vessel Held as Prize—Another Danish Boat and British and German Ships Sunk.

COPENHAGEN, April 15.—The Danish steamer Kasan, bound from Liverpool for Copenhagen, was captured today in the Cattegat by a large German submarine, according to the newspaper Politiken. The submarine placed a prize crew on board the vessel.

Mine Sinks German Vessel.

STOCKHOLM, April 15.—The German steamship Hispania, laden with briquettes, was sunk last night by a mine near Handhamm, south of Stockholm. The crew was saved.

Danish Schooner Torpedoed.

YMUIDEN, Netherlands April 15.—The Danish schooner Proven, bound from Setubal, Portugal, for Gothenburg, Sweden, was sunk by a German submarine. The crew was landed here today. Before being picked up the sailors were adrift in an open boat for fifty-six hours.

British Steamer Mine Victim.

LONDON, April 15.—The British steamship Shenandoah has been sunk by a mine, a Lloyds report says. The captain and part of the crew have been landed. Two men are missing.

German General Dies at Front.

AMSTERDAM, April 15.—The Frankfurter Zeitung states that Lieut. Gen. Franz von Schoenburg auf Kreipitsch has been killed at the front. He was a brother of the commander of the German cruiser Leipzig, who sank with his vessel in an engagement with a British fleet off the Falkland islands in 1914.

PERIL OF BREAK WITH GERMANY BROUGHT NEARER

Two New Submarine Attacks Reported While Wilson Is Working on Ultimatum.

pressed that the president will sever diplomatic relations without consulting congress, which is reputed to be opposed to the adoption of drastic measures upon the basis of the submarine controversy in its present shape. There is no doubt that the president is being strongly urged by pro-British influences to break with Germany at once without further parleying.

It was from such pro-British sources that there emanated last night the rumor that President Wilson already had recalled Ambassador Gerard from Berlin. This report found ready acceptance among persons who believe that the president is yielding to the influences exerted to precipitate a rupture.

The rumor was pronounced preposterous at the White House, where it was reiterated that the president would not recall Gerard and dismiss Count von Bernstorff without taking congress into his confidence.

No Warning to Vessel.

The latest vessels carrying Americans which have been torpedoed are the Inverlyon and the Margan Abbey. The latter was torpedoed without warning, according to the United States consul at Cardiff, Wales. The ship was sunk sixty-five miles south off the Lizard. Among the members of the crew who were rescued was one American, John D. Harrison of Chicago, the boat's steward.

The sinking of this freight vessel without warning was a violation of Germany's pledges to the United States, according to President Wilson. Germany contends that it exempted only liners from its campaign of reprisal in these waters and never promised not to sink freighters without warning.

The Inverlyon was sunk, according to Consul Frost at Queenstown, 110 miles west of Valencia, England. The submarine shelled the ship, which did not seek to escape, and the crew was given fifteen minutes to take to the boats. One boatload, including two Americans, landed safely, the other boat containing no Americans, is lost.

Too Far from Land.

President Wilson holds that the submarine commander violated international law and Germany's assurances in compelling the crew to take to their boats and in destroying their ship 110 miles from land.

The president has insisted that a submarine commander, before destroying a ship, shall place all persons aboard in a place of safety. He does not regard the open sea 110 miles from the nearest lan a place of safety.

It is contended that the case of the Inverlyon calls in question assurances given by Germany in the note regarding the sinking of the William P. Frye. In that note Germany said:

"The German government quite shares the view of the American government that all possible care must be taken fo the security of the crew and passengers of a vessel to be sunk. Consequently the persons found on board of a vessel may not be ordered into its lifeboats except when the general conditions, that is to say, the weather, the condition of the sea, and the neighborhood of the coasts af ford absolute certainty that the boats will reach the nearest port."

VICTORY FOR BERLIN?

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, April 15.—Is the recall of Lieut. V. D. Webster, U. S. N., second naval attaché of the American embassy at Berlin, a victory for Count Ernst zu Reventlow, Germany's militarist firebrand journalist?

This question was asked in some quarters today when a cable dispatch from New York via London announced that Lieut. Webster had been called home, as he was to be used "in the intelligence bureau."

It was Reventlow who two days ago made the sensational charge in the Deutsche Tages Zeitung that through "certain indiscretions" on the part of the American naval attachés important military information had leaked out to English sources.

He complained of the presence in Berlin and Vienna of American attachés after German and Austrian attachés had returned to their respective countries at the request of the American government. The American attachés, he pointed out, were familiar with the projects of the German naval authorities and could do much harm by their alleged indiscretions.

In other circles the recall of Lieut. Webster is taken as a preliminary step to a gradual severance of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States.

HISTORY WILL LAUD FORD, DAVID STARR JORDAN SAYS.

Member of Peace Party Says After War Europe Will Come to Appreciate Leader of Expedition.

"When the war is over the good results of the Ford peace ship will be appreciated. Europe will understand that there has been a great, unselfish effort to end the war, in which only one great principle was considered—that of humanity."

David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford Jr. university, and one of the members of the Ford peace party, was commenting on the trip last night at the Auditorium hotel. He was en route to California from Philadelphia.

"Some of the plans were formulated hastily," said he, "but time will tell the good results nevertheless."

Asked about the foreign relations of the United States he said:

"President Wilson has acted wisely. He has spoken the mind of the great American public—that it abhors the villainous submarine tactics and does not want war.

"I believe the president has made some minor mistakes in Mexico, but in general he has acted with the greatest forbearance, and for the best interests of the people of this country, and at that, even angels may make mistakes."

OVER 1,000,000 ARMENIANS MURDERED BY THE TURKS.

Catholic Church Authorities in Germany Get Report from Mission—Starvation or Ill Treatment

AMSTERDAM, April 15.—Telegraphing from Cologne, the correspondent of the Tijd says:

"Catholic ecclesiastical authorities in Germany have received from an authoritative source in the Catholic mission trustworthy information that more than one million Armenians have been murdered by Turks through starvation or ill treatment. About 100,000 Catholics were among them, including four bishops."

The message concludes: "Popular feeling among the Armenians was roused against the Turks by the British."

GERMANS READY FOR NEW ATTACK AGAINST VERDUN

Cannon Pound French Lines to Prepare Way for Infantry Drive West of Meuse.

LONDON, April 15.—Resumption of the systematic German artillery battering on the northwestern front of Verdun today signaled preparations for the renewal of heavy fighting west of the Meuse.

German heavy guns pounded away at French trenches on the southwestern slopes of hill 304, which probably will be the objective of the next great German assault. At intervals Esnes and other communication points in the rear of the French line were subjected to devastating fire.

Berlin Official Report.

The official statement issued at the German army headquarters in Berlin today said:

A strong English advance against our crater positions south of St. Eloi (Belgium) was repulsed.

In the Argonne and to the east of that region there were lively local artillery and mine duels.

On the left bank of the Meuse, enemy attacks against our positions on Dead Man's hill, south of the Bois des Corbeaux, and in the Bois des Cumieres, preparations for which were made by a great increase in the violence of the enemy's artillery fire, could only be carried through by a few battalions against Dead Man's hill, thanks to the constructive concentrated fire of the troops which we had put in readiness on both sides of the Meuse.

The attacking enemy waves broke down with heavy losses before our lines. The few men who penetrated our trenches were killed in the hand to hand fighting.

French Official Report.

The report of the French ministry of war, issued in Paris, said:

To the north of Roye a reconnaissance on the part of the enemy, who were endeavoring to ccupy our trenches in the region of Parvillers, was dispersed by our fire.

West of the Meuse the enemy violently bombarded during the course of the afternoon our positions in the Caurettes wood and in the neighborhood of Esnes.

East of the Meuse there was intense artillery activity on both sides in the sector of Douaumont and south of the Haudromont wood.

In the Vosges there have been encounters between patrols. A reconnaissance on the part of the enemy was checked by our fire at a point south of Saint Marie-aux-Mines.

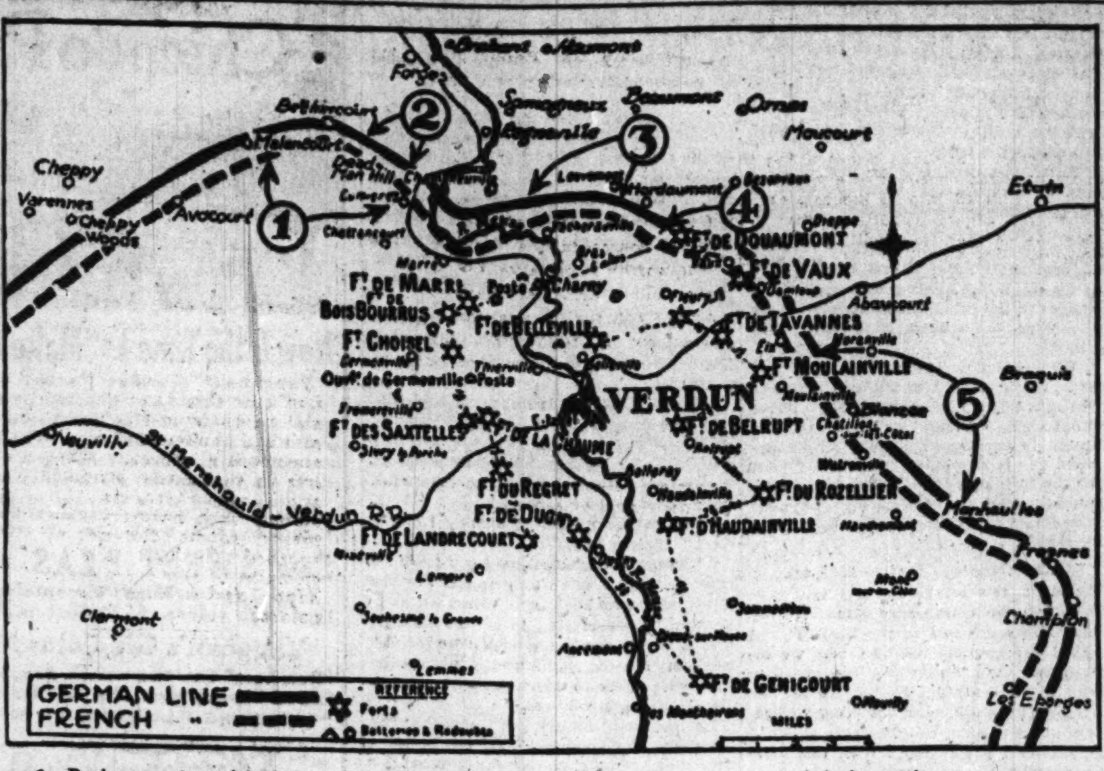
CHICAGO MAN IS SEARCHED.

William W. Brown Says All Americans Are Regarded with Suspicion While in Europe.

New York, April 15.—[Special.]—William W. Brown, a Chicago business man who has been in Russia, returned today on the Norwegian-American liner Kristianiafjord, recounting a thrilling experience at the hands of the German authorities as he was crossing the border from Rusia. He was stripped, searched, and rigidly questioned for hours.

"The impression seems to be, apparently, that Americans have to be more carefully examined than other travelers," he said.

The Fighting Around Verdun Fortress.



1—Paris reports spirited bombardment of French positions between the wood of Malancourt and Hill 304. French batteries active west of Corbeaux wood and at various points along Forges brook.

2—Berlin reports repulse of French attacks against German lines on Dead Man hill with heavy loss. These attacks also included positions south of Corbeaux wood and in Cumieres wood.

3—Berlin reports heavy artillery duels on right bank of Meuse, with no infantry actions.

4—Berlin reports French hand grenade attacks southwest of Fort Douaumont were without result.

5—Fighting on Woevre plain limited chiefly to violent artillery duels.

DENIES BREACH OF NEUTRALITY

President of Michigan Says University Was Not Involved.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 15.—Replying today to the charges of Congressma Louis Crampton of Lapeer that fourtee professors of the University of Michiga flagrantly violated the spirit of American neutrality in signing a memorial expressing sympathy for the cause of the entente allies against German. President Harry B. Hutchius of the university asserted that his investigation indicated there was no intention of committing the university to any unneutral propaganda.

Message Sent to Crampton.

His telegram to Congressman Crampton read:

"The signing of the address by the persons named in your telegram was, in my judgment, if the name of the university was used in connection with their signatures, unwise, unfortunate, and to be deplored, but upon investigation I am satisfied that no one signed it with any intention of committing the university to any propaganda whatsoever.

"If the university was mentioned in connection with any signature, I am assured that it was done simply for the purpose of designating under the head 'Occupation' the calling of the party signing. It is obvious that no professor could, by a signature such as you describe, bind the university."

Reply Sent by Crampton.

In reply to this message President Hutchins received this telegram from Crampton:

"Use of the word 'professor' would have sufficiently described the occupation. Use of the name of the university in addition was manifestly to give the unneutral manifesto the benefit of the prestige of the university abroad, and that is not only to be deplored but should be prevented.

"All reference to the university should be withdrawn from a document so directly in violation of th duties of Americans as neutral as defined by the president."

SCOUTING PARTIES CLASH ALONG BORDER OF GREECE.

French Report Says Enemy Was Repulsed in Several Skirmishes Near Doiran and Elsewhere.

PARIS, April 15.—The ministry of war tonight issued the following statement dealing with affairs in the Balkans:

From April 10 no important action occurred on the Greek frontier, but both artillery forces were active and a considerable activity on the part of patrols brought about several small skirmishes, notably at Pataros, Sedgeli, Reseli, and southwest of Doiran, where a strong German reconnoissance was repulsed.

On April 5, 6 and 7 enemy aeroplanes dropped bombs on the village of Karasouli and Sarigol, without doing any damage. On the night of April 12-13 one of our squadrons bombarded the German military establishments at Gievgeli. Another squadron composed of twenty-three machines dropped projectiles on the enemy camps and batteries at Bogorodica.

Berlin Makes Garden.

BERLIN, April 15.—Vacant lots in Berlin and other German cities are suddenly springing into life as vegetable gardens. Because of the food shortage lot owners throughout the empire are sowing seeds this spring.

NIGHT COUP BY BRITISH BEATS MOSLEMS IN EGYPT.

Move Out of Trenches at Jifjaffa and Spring Early Morning Attack, Routing the Enemy.

LONDON, April 15.—The following official statement on the campaign in Egypt was issued by the British war office tonight:

The commander in chief in Egypt reports that on April 13 a successful reconnaissance was made by a column of Australian troops at Jifjaffa. The column moved out on the night of April 12-13 and reached hill No. 1,082, three miles southwest of Jifjaffa, by 5:30 o'clock in the morning.

The enemy's camp was attacked at 7 and occupied after a brisk fight. The enemy's known casualties were six killed and five wounded. One Austrian lieutenant of engineers and forty-three Turks, of whom four were wounded, were made prisoner.

Our only casualty was one noncommissioned officer killed. Only two unwounded mounted men of the enemy escaped. Our troops destroyed all the water plants.

The Katia oasis has been occupied by our troops.

Russian War Report.

PETROGRAD, April 15.—The war office tonight gave out the following report on Caucasus operations:

Our troops in the region of Bitlis, after fighting lasting many days, defeated a Turkish division recently arrived in Armenia from Constantinople, and now are vigorously pursuing its retreating elements. Up to this time we had captured thirteen officers, 350 men, and machine guns.

Honors U-Boat Commanders.

LONDON, April 15.—A Berlin Lokal Anzeiger dispatch to Reuter's says that the German emperor has conferred the Hohenzollern order on two submarine commanders, Lieut. Wenninger and Lieut. von Werner.

AUSTRIANS WIN BATTLE IN AIR AT CZERNOWITZ

Teuton and Russian Squadrons Fight for Two Hours—Slav Aviators Driven Off.

BERLIN, April 15.—Following is the official statement issued today at Austro-Hungarian headquarters:

Seven enemy aeroplanes, among which were four battle planes, appeared over Czernowitz. Several Austro-Hungarian fliers arose and gave battle and, after a combat of two hours in the air, shot down one battle plane at a distance of thirty feet. The enemy squadron then fled. A damaged aeroplane landed near Boyan, between the Russian and our lines. It was destroyed by Austro-Hungarian artillery fire.

The official statement issued by the German war office today says:

Attempts made by the Russians yesterday to deliver local attacks northwest of Dvinsk were, like those on the previous days, unsuccessful. On the Servitche river, southeast of Gorodichtche we easily frustrated an advance by weak enemy forces which had been prepared by strong artillery fire.

Russian Official Statement.

PETROGRAD, April 15.—The official statement issued by the Russian war office today follows:

In the Dvinsk region our rifle detachments last night took the offensive in the sector comprising the village of Ginovka. They cut four lines of barbed wire south of Garbunovka and occupied two hills to the west and south of the village. The enemy concentrated artillery and rifle fire on the occupied hills, and then launched several counter attacks, which were all repulsed. The battlefield was covered with German bodies.

There was an artillery duel on the isthmus between Lakes Miadziol and Noroez and the region of Smorgon. After artillery preparation, enemy detachments assumed the offensive in the region northeast of Smorgon, but were repulsed by our gun fire.

Make Gain Against Austrians.

South of the railroad station at Olyknos our troops advanced and intrenched themselves, despite the enemy's sweeping fire.

During the fighting Wednesday night at Trzibouchovtze, Austrians armed not only with rifles and bayonets, but with daggers, approached our trenches. They threw away their rifles and raised their arms, crying out that they surrender. When they reached our troops they used their daggers, and fierce hand to hand fighting ensued.

Yesterday our aeroplanes dropped fifty bombs on the Zouezka and the northern Czernowitz stations. All the machines returned undamaged.

We captured five officers, 238 unwounded, and thirty wounded soldiers in the taking of the height of Povovamocila, according to later information.

ONE YEAR AGO TODAY IN EUROPE'S BIG WAR

German airmen made their third raid over England in 48 hours, dropping bombs in the counties of Kent, Essex, and Suffolk.

Actions in Carpathians concentrated toward Bostok.

BAD WEATHER HANDICAP TO ITALIAN FRONT FIGHTING.

Vienna Reports Repulse of Foe at Various Points Where Infantry Attacks Are Attempted.

VIENNA, April 15.—The war office tonight gave out the following report on operations against the Italians:

Artillery duels continued to such extent as the weather would permit. Austrian troops took an Italian position on Mrlivrh and repulsed several counter attacks. The Italians suffered heavy losses. Our artillery vigorously shelled Italian positions at Flitsh and Hontebba.

In the Sugana section Italian attempts to occupy our positions on the heights on both sides of Movaledo failed.

On Tonale road our troops evacuated a defensive wall south of Sperone, and occupied the next position in the rear.

Italian War Report.

ROME, via London, April 15.—The official communication covering operations against the Austrians issued from general headquarters today reads:

Our troops captured another machine and still another was destroyed by our gunfire on the positions we took from the enemy in the Adamello zone. Artillery duels continue in the sector between the Giudicaria valley and the Sugana valley.

Enemy hand grenades caused fires in the village of Prezzo, Chiese. In the Sugana valley on April 12 our troops took by storm the Santoosvaldo position west of Larganza Torrent, capturing seventy-four prisoners, including three officers. On the 13th our troops solidly consolidated the position taken, despite a heavy bombardment by the enemy artillery.

There has been less artillery activity on the Isomzo and in the Carso. On the night of the 13th a minor attack by the enemy on Javorcik was quickly repulsed. One of our batteries has demolished an enemy redoubt between the summits of Monte San Michele.

Hickory Smoke Ripens Flavor

The Oscar Mayer thoroughness and skill are represented in every delicious, juicy slice of "Edelweiss" Ham and Bacon. Clean hickory sticks furnish the fragrant blue smoke that gives them that rich yet mild flavor.

Each is given individual and expert care in order that it will absorb exactly the right amount of hickory smoke flavor. You must eat the genuine "Edelweiss" Hams and Bacon to know how wonderfully good this flavor is.

The care used in sugar-curing is also of vital importance to the flavor. Like the smoking process, it is done in the truly "Oscar Mayer Way"—with thoroughness, time and skill.

There are no foods you can serve your family that will win their approval quicker and more completely.

They cost no more than the ordinary. If your dealer does not carry the genuine Oscar Mayer Sugar-Cured, Hickory-Smoked Hams and Bacon, write or phone us and we will tell you who in your neighborhood does sell them. You owe it to your family to know the goodness of—

"Little Controversy" Over, He Will Take Up Duket Cure and Lumber Land.

William Lorimer expects vindication at the hands of the twelve jurors in whose hands rests his fate, according to the testimony which he gave yesterday in Judge Dever's court. The former senator referred to the trial as "this little controversy."

As soon as it was over, he said, he was going to take up again the tuberculosis remedy of Dr. P. T. Duket and also would engage actively in the farming and lumber business in Louisiana.

Apparently, he felt no doubt that the jury trying the charges of conspiracy and embezzlement against him will absolve him from all blame and let him return to his business interests.

Blames Lumber Trouble on Ward.

All responsibility for anything irregular in the organization of the William Lorimer Lumber company in the winter of 1913 was placed on the shoulders of Charles E. Ward, his former secretary, by Lorimer. The affidavit stating that $150,000 in the capital stock of the company had been paid in in cash, he said, was prepared by Ward, and he had signed it "just like a thousand other things Ward presented for signature." The capital of the company was not paid in in cash.

"All the property was mine or my family's," Lorimer explained, "and I just turned over the drawing up of the papers to Ward. I didn't read the affidavit, but I know there was at least $150,000 in property behind the enterprise. I didn't know until I came into this courtroom that I had signed an affidavit in my application for a charter for the lumber company. The evidence is apparent that there was no evil intent in what I did, and it all looks to me like much ado about nothing."

Tells of Southern Venture.

Lorimer said he purchased the Forest Home plantation in Louisiana, which was held by the lumber company, for $36,000 in the fall of 1912. He said he did not recall signing the affidavit, but supposed that he signed it or authorized somebody to sign it for him.

As to William Lorimer Jr. & Co., which had notes totaling $119,000 in the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank at the time of the failure, Lorimer said that all the proper indebtedness of the company had been taken up. The last settlement, he said, was just completed that morning. By an arrangement with Receiver William C. Niblack, he said, he had been able to take up three $25,000 notes of the company with deposit claims totaling $50,000. Out of the apparent indebtedness of $75,000, he said, the company admitted liability on only $20,000.

"How did you get the deposit claims assigned to you?" Albert Fink, Lorimer's attorney, asked him.

Gives Personal Notes.

"I gave my personal unsecured notes to the depositors for the full face value of their claims against the bank," the former senator replied.

"You mean that the depositors preferred your unsecured notes to whatever they thought they might get out of the receiver for their deposits?"

"Yes, sir."

The defense claims that a large number of La Salle bank depositors are ready and anxious to exchange their chances from the receiver for Lorimer's personal unsecured notes. Most of these depositors, it is said, are women.

Story of His Debts.

Through his testimony so far, Lorimer's story of the present status of his indebtedness is as follows:

Personal: Owes Illinois State bank $4,500. (This note the Illinois State has charged to profit and loss.)

William Lorimer Jr. & Co. has taken up $75,000 of notes, with $50,000 in deposits. (Receiver Niblack testified that $38,000 of indebtedness had been canceled to return certain securities to the Rosehill perpetual care fund. According to the La Salle books, the company owed $119,000 at the time of the collapse. Company still owes Broadway State bank $25,000.)

William Lorimer Lumber company: Entire $58,000 of indebtdness has been taken up by $40,000 in deposits.

Grace hospital: Entire $11,000 of indebtedness has been paid in cash. (Hospital still owes outlying banks $10,000.)

The so-called indebtedness of the Lorimer & Gallagher company, which is tangled up in the affairs of the Southern Traction company, still remains unsettled and unsolved.

Holds Loans Warranted.

Although denying that he knew the details of the loans made to William Lorimer Jr. & Co. and the lumber company, Lorimer maintained that if he had known he would have held the advances perfectly warranted. The total indebtedness of the two companies to the La Salle on Dec. 1, 1913, he said, was about $80,000.

"This indebtedness was not excessive," the former senator explained. "Our assets were ample. If we had been doing business with any other Chicago bank we would have obtained such accommodations without question. Until the day the bank failed there was not a day on which we could not have been sold out under the hammer for enough to meet all our indebtedness."

According to the books, the two companies owed the La Salle and the Broadway $202,000 when the collapse came, on June 12, 1914.

Takes Up Grace Hospital.

Lorimer went into the affairs of Grace hospital, of which William J. (Billy) Cooke was superintendent, in great detail. He paid particular attention to the Dr. Duket remedy for tuberculosis. Dr. John Dill Robertson, now commissioner of health, and the Rev. J. F. Green, a priest, figured prominently in the narrative. Father Green, according to the books, owed the La Salle $22,000 at the time of the failure. Receiver Niblack compromised this indebtedness for $3,000.

"In the fall of 1912," Lorimer told the jurors, "the then superintendent of the water department and Father Green, president of St. Rita's college, brought Dr. Duket into the bank to see me. Father Green had been a chemist before he studied to become a priest.

"They said the doctor claimed to have a cure for tuberculosis of the lungs. He told me of some people he had cured through a laboratory in Detroit, and I directed Father Green to investigate. Father Green reported that the three cases he investigated thought themselves cured.

Demands Test of Cure.

"Dr. Duket was looking for financial aid to assist him in developing his secret cure. I told him if he would treat successfully some sufferers in Chicago I would see what I could do. I think there were about eighteen patients. One I recall particularly was a girl named Brown.

"She was in the last stages, and the doctors pronounced her hopeless. Dr. Duket's treatments relieved her and I sent her to Arizona for a winter. She came back much improved, but Dr. Duket said she could not live. She lived about a year.

"I thought that if the remedy wasn't a cure it at least was of great aid. I talked it over with Dr. Robertson and asked him to initiate a series of tests so that if the remedy was a real one it would receive the indorsement of physicians. We organized a board of doctors with Dr. Herzog, who had cleaned up the Philippines, as pathologist. When we got ready for the tests we found that the hospitals, which took tuberculosis patients only very quietly, were afraid of the publicity which would accompany the tests.

Buys Hospital for Experiments.

"For this reason I purchased the Grace hospital. I wrote letters to the governors of all the states and to a great many people who I thought might like to take advantage of the cure. We charged $15 a week for room in the hospital and gave the treatments free.

"After the organization was going I went to Washington to see the surgeon general, who said he would make observations. Then I went to New York to get the tuberculosis specialists there to make observations. After that I went to Nebraska to make arrangements allowing patients in the tuberculosis hospital there to receive the treatment should they wish it.

"We treated a large number of patients, 250 or more, I would say. Some of them were benefited wonderfully almost immediately. After we had treated enough to complete the tests we discontinued the treatments. Then Dr. Duket and the members of the board had a misunderstanding, as frequently happens among men of that sort, and we never had our report.

Cites Case of Youth Helped.

"Only a few weeks ago a young man we had given treatments came into my office. He had come to the hospital and begged for treatments. At first we refused him, but finally we consented in order to relieve him. He told me that he had gone to work after the second treatment and had been working ever since. I hope after I get through with this little controversy to get the doctors together again and determine whether or not the cure has any real merit."

"Did the hospital borrow $21,000 from the La Salle?" Attorney Fink asked.

"Yes," Lorimer replied. "When I arranged to assist Dr. Duket, I did not know it would be necessary to buy a hospital of our own. Later I arranged for the loan of $21,000, and I told Munday that if the hospital was not able to meet the loan I would take care of it myself. Dr. Robertson owned a hospital, and we talked over the matter before we decided to go ahead."

Word Good as Bond.

Q.—Did you personally indorse the notes of the hospital? A.—No, sir. I just guaranteed payment. I have caused to be paid the $11,000 owed the La Salle. Without my knowledge two $5,000 notes went to outlying banks and I intend to take care of these also. If we had not been forced to the wall I would have paid them long ago.

Q.—Did you give an oral or a written guarantee? A.—I gave the guarantee orally, but that's just as good as a written guarantee.

Lorimer asserted his experts told him he owed Munday only $14,000. Munday listed claims against Lorimer totaling $237,500 in his bankruptcy schedule. Many of the notes Munday holds, Lorimer said, have been paid or renewed.

"Did you ever hear of Sidney Long & Co.?" Fink asked.

"I heard something about it," Lorimer replied, "but I don't know a thing in the world about its business. When we were going over our assets just before the failure, I recall coming across some of the company's notes, and Munday told me the firm was going to transfer its account to the First National bank."

Lorimer said he did not know that the company had purchased $35,000 in notes from the La Salle, paying for them at par with its own notes for $35,000.

$75,000 DEBT WIPED OUT

Niblack Issues Statement on How Lorimer Settled Part of Liabilities.

William C. Niblack, receiver for the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank, issued the following statement yesterday regarding the manner in which William Lorimer Jr. & Co. took up $75,000 of its indebtedness to the Lorimer-Munday institution:

"William Lorimer Jr. & Co., consisting of William Lorimer Jr. and William Lorimer Sr., had notes in this bank amounting to $75,000. They offered to give to the receiver $50,000 of deposit claims against the bank for the surrender of all evidences of the indebtedness. This offer was submitted to the depositors' committee and the receiver and the committee decided to recommend the matter to the court.

"This morning a petition was filed in court by the receiver, asking authority to surrender the notes for $75,000 on receipt of the assignments for cancellation of claims amounting to $50,000. After hearing the matter the court granted the petition and afterwards the assignments for $50,000 were handed over to the receiver and the notes were thereupon delivered.

"There were $150,000 face value of bonds of the Southern Traction company held by the receiver as security for the $75,000. The receiver, under this settlement, keeps the collateral for whatever it may be worth. The Southern Traction company denies liability on most of these bonds."

Last Days of the Lyon & Healy Removal Sale

The public has been quick to take advantage of this remarkable opportunity. We counted upon widespread interest but not upon such a wonderful response. Long lines of instruments are being disposed of in this sale almost at sight.

Hundreds of Pianos and Player-Pianos

Pianos of all the great makes regularly represented by us.

—Steinway Uprights of certain styles at a discount.
—Pianola-Pianos of special styles at a discount.
—Lyon & Healy Pianos of special styles at a discount.

Only a modest first payment. Then very easy monthly payments.

We had figured on selling a certain number of pianos daily, but that figure has been far exceeded. On several days we have been unable to give prompt attention to all callers. But this condition has been remedied and hereafter there will be no waiting.

Everyone will have an opportunity to make a selection from our extensive stocks.

Very remarkable values in Upright Pianos made by us for export trade. Owing to trade congestion, caused by the war, we are closing out these instruments at a discount of 40%.

Player-Pianos of excellent tone and appearance at much under customary quotations. A special library of rolls included free with these instruments.

Small Apartment Grands reduced to $445.

Washburn Pianos, not of catalogue styles, at a general clearance. You can secure one of these popular instruments at a saving of $50 to $100.

A limited number of slightly used Steinways at most attractive figures. Both Grands and Uprights are included in this stock.

This coupon may be used where it is not possible to make an early call of inspection.

Messrs. Lyon & Healy,
Please send me list of Pianos and Player-Pianos included in your Removal Sale.

BIDDINGER HELD ON $10,000 BAIL; SAYS HE'LL TALK

Guy and Barney Bertsche Both Threaten to "Tear Off the Lid."

New York, April 15.—Guy Biddinger, former Chicago detective, now wanted in Chicago to face fifty-one bribery charges, was placed under arrest in New York today. He escaped being held in the Tombs pending the arrival of Illinois officers by furnishing $10,000 bail.

Guy Biddinger and "Barney" Bertsche are both going to "talk a-plenty."

There were two ultimatums yesterday in the upheaval that has resulted in the arrest of Biddinger, the Chicago detective on furlough and now New York detective de luxe.

One was from Biddinger. He said he would tell a great many things about the underworld of Chicago that never has been told. The other was from Bertsche, the "king of the crooks," whose testimony broke up the police graft ring headed by former Capt. Halpin, now under conviction.

Biddinger Surrenders Self.

Biddinger surrendered himself to the New York police. He said he would accompany Assistant State's Attorney Walker back to Chicago and appear for trial. He gave $10,000 bonds and said he would prepare to be in Chicago on Monday.

"I will have plenty to say when the right time comes," Biddinger said. "I won't talk now, but I will be ready when the others are."

Bertsche said he would be the "star" witness for the state.

That "Silk Hat Sleuth."

"What I know about Biddinger couldn't be told in a week," said Bertsche. "When the case comes to trial I'll tell plenty about that silk hat sleuth."

"Biddinger has suggested there may be a duel when he sees you," Bertsche was told.

"Don't worry," said Barney. "That guy hasn't enough nerve to get into a battle with me. He wouldn't pull a gun o any one."

Evidently Bertsche hasn't lost his nerve since the pistol battle in which he was wounded by Detectives Eagen and Monaghan and in which he wounded them.

New Angle in Case.

Another angle entered the case when it became known attorneys for a number of wealthy Chicago clients have been urgent in obtaining the indictment of Biddinger. It is said these attorneys represent men who have been mulcted for large sums of money for the silence of certain sleuths because of indiscretions committed in the past.

No one at the state's attorney's office would admit blackmail has entered the charges against Biddinger, yet there was no denial such charges or such a state of affairs exists. The names of these alleged blackmail victims have been kept secret and it is not believed they will be made public even in the trial.

Mr. Hoyne said the charges against Biddinger were brought in by a well known lawyer. The lawyer was told to go ahead and he would be given all the cooperation of the state's attorney's office.

But, according to Mr. Hoyne, the indictments will be followed up entirely by the evidence of Bertsche, Clarence Class, "Yellow Kid" Joseph Weil, Roy Jones and others of the old red light district. From statements which Bertsche has made in the past it is believed he will testify to the manipulation of bribes and "double crossing."

Attorney A. Leo Weil of Pittsburgh is expected to take a large part in the prosecution because of his activity in turning up the evidence in Chicago. Weil engaged Biddinger to inquire into the relations between the governor of West Virginia and the public service commission of that state. He charges Biddinger double crossed him. As a result Weil financed a campaign to delve into Biddinger's record in Chicago.

GIRL GETS WEARY OF LIFE.

Leaves Note Saying That She Is Sorry to Cause Her Father Worry.

Weary of life, Miss Sadie Sager turned on the gas with fatal results in the residence of David Ash, 1045 North Richmond street, yesterday. She had been rooming at the Ash residence for the last few weeks.

She left a note for her father saying she was sorry to cause him any worry, but she had found life a disappointment. Her father is employed in a downtown store.

AND THE BROTHER OF VOLIVA WENT EVEN UNTO JAIL

For That He Shot Up Zion City He Was Thrown Without the Camp.

Arthur Voliva, brother of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion, "shot up" the town of Zion City at 1 o'clock yesterday morning and now reposes belligerently in the Waukegan calaboose.

Zion gossip has tabulated Arthur as a sort of a town wastrel. His brother, the overseer, has attempted on several occasions, it is said, to correct the young man's method of approach, but he insists, in a golfish way of speaking, on booting the ball instead of tapping it with a gentle putt.

Made a Joyful Noise.

He had been away from Zion City for the matter of a few days—in Chicago—so rumor hath it. When he arrived in the Zion Home, which is the village hotel, he shouted and cried aloud.

Then he drew a revolver and fired a shot over the head of Mr. Benjamin Sweeney, the esteemed night clerk. Mr. Sweeney fled incontinently and broke the dead silences with the dire clamor of his appeals for help. Then Arthur sought the sacred precincts behind the counter and sought to extract the contents of the cash drawer, but found to his dismay that this already had been done and the money locked in the safe.

The Best People Present.

Now his brother, the overseer, and other prominent Zionists reside in the hotel and the unstealthy arrival of Arthur disturbed them. The night watchman came upon the scene. Arthur lined him up against the wall and whanged a couple of dextrous shots just over his head by way of placing the fear of future punishment in the watchman's heart.

Then Arthur strode abroad on the highway and called aloud in sarcastic accents his disapproval of the city and its leaders. Presently Chief of Police Walker and Special Policeman Covington took the chase, having heard that the death and casualty list had been unprecedented. They presented their revolvers and Arthur held up his hands.

In Durance Vile.

It was decided that the town lockup was too fragile to hold this prisoner, and he was taken to Waukegan.

He was held to the grand jury in $5,000 bonds. The overseer declined to interfere. He said it was time for the law to take its course.

Will Momence Go Dry?

The campaign of the drys at Momence will close this evening with a massmeeting in the Methodist church, at which Ex-Ald. J. H. Francis of Chicago will be the principal speaker. Momence lies in two townships, one of which went dry at the last election. The ill feeling between the opposing interests has been intense.

WHAT OF THE BOY?

Held Blameless by Court, Still He Loses His Job—Can He Get Another Bond?

JUDGE FISHER in the Boys' court yesterday denounced officials of the Adams Express company for discharging an employé from whom $50 was stolen by Edward Burkett, 19 years old, of 15 North Robey street. Burkett was sentenced to the house of correction for one year.

The $50 was stolen from a wagon owned by the express company and driven by Edward Thompson. Thompson was given two packages of money to deliver. He put them under the seat. He met Burkett and invited him to take a ride. One of the packages was delivered before noon.

Being unable to deliver the second package, Thompson left it under the seat and went to lunch. When he returned, it was gone. Burkett was arrested and confessed.

Frank A. Barr, assistant general agent, said Thompson had violated the rules of the company by leaving the money in his wagon.

"I consider the discharge of this boy a most damnable thing on the part of the Adams Express company," said Judge Fisher to Barr. "Men with your frame of mind, so devoid of any feeling for the future of the boy; you, who will under such circumstances deprive him of his livelihood and put him on the street, with the possibility of preventing his obtaining employment in the future, because this bonding company will not want to go on his bond again, ought not to have charge of any business in which human beings are employed.

"I can do nothing, however, but express my opinion of such actions."

HOTEL MAN FINED $100 FOR ASSAULTING A POLICEMAN

Judge Recommends That License of the Coliseum House Be Revoked—Fight Result of Raid.

O. D. Smith, proprietor of the Coliseum hotel, 1821 South Wabash avenue, was fined $100 and costs on a charge of assaulting a policeman with a deadly weapon by Judge Robinson yesterday. The judge recommended that the hotel license be revoked. Sophie Kantnsky was fined $10 and costs on a charge of disorderly conduct.

She was said to have scratched Policeman Walter Pelletier when Smith attacked him with a penknife in the hotel April 8. It was brought out that Pelletier had a part in raiding the hotel and arresting Smith and some women inmates a short time before the later trouble.

WOMAN AND CHILD BURNED

Stove Cleaning Preparation Explodes and Neighbors Save Mother and Little Boy.

Mrs. Louise Barber and her 2 year old son, Mundy, were severely burned about the hands, faces, and bodies yesterday when a preparation with which she was cleaning the stove exploded and set fire to their clothes. Mrs. Barber lives at 2729 Wallace street, and her screams brought neighbors to her aid, who succeeded in putting out the flames.

LORADO TAFT PAYS TRIBUTE TO C. F. MULLIGAN'S WORK.

Strength and Vitality Personified by Sculptor Recently Dead, Memorial Meeting Is Told.

"Strength and vitality, perhaps more than any man, Charles Mulligan had always personified these to my mind." So spoke of Lorado Taft at the memorial meeting for Charles F. Mulligan held yesterday at 1 o'clock in the red room of the Hotel La Salle by the Irish Fellowship Club of Chicago.

"I cannot adjust myself," he went on, "to the thought that such fullness of life should be swallowed up in death. Henceforth Daniel French's group, 'The Angel of Death and the Young Sculptor,' have for me a new significance.

"He came to my studio for work and study, a boy of 20, already a skillful stone cutter. But more precious even than the strength and cunning of his hammer strokes was the unfailing good nature and optimism which henceforth became a studio habit and in time a veritable tradition of the place.

"To think that we shall not hear that rich voice again nor feel the hearty grip of those strong hands—that these schoolrooms shall know him no more; the thought is incredible. Goodby, Charlie Mulligan—goodby!"

Other speakers who paid tribute to the memory of the sculptor were Donald Robertson, Joseph O'Donnell, Marcus Kavanagh, and William P. J. Halley.

DR. MASON DRAWS FIVE TO SEVEN YEARS' PRISON TERM.

Chicagoan Convicted in Denver of Conspiracy in Death of Girl Given Severe Censure by Judge.

Denver, Colo., April 15.—[Special.]—Dr. Robert J. Mason, convicted April 6 of conspiracy in the death of Ruth Merriweather, his fiancée, who died by an illegal operation Dec. 4, 1915, was sentenced to from five to seven years in the penitentiary this afternoon.

Judge Wright in pronouncing sentence declared that the finding of the jury was just. He practically intimated that Mason ought to have been convicted of murder.

Mason took the sentence calmly. He is a Chicago osteopath and met Ruth Merriweather, daughter of prominent Denver people, in Toledo. They became engaged, although Mason already had a wife in Chicago. He has since been divorced. Dr. Floyd Noble was tried on the charge of having performed the operation from which Miss Merriweather died, but was acquitted.

Pathetic letters from his fiancée which he thought he had destroyed, but which were recovered from an ashpit in Chicago by a negro janitor, caused Mason's conviction.

The twenty-four delegates have not been elected.

DEMAND IMMEDIATE ACTION ON SUSAN ANTHONY CLAUSE.

Purpose of Transcontinental Tour of Twenty-Five Suffragists Is Revealed at Denver.

Denver, Colo., April 15.—Immediate action by congress upon the Susan B. Anthony amendment was announced here tonight as the purpose of the transcontinental tour of twenty-five members of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, which left Washington April 9.

The tour contemplates a visit to all the equal suffrage states, ending May 11, and 12, in Salt Lake City.

Emphasizing the purpose of the tour, Miss Doris Stevens of New York, chairman of the national organization department of the union, declared:

"Our purpose is to mobilize all the present strength of the voting women to get immediate action from this session of congress upon the Susan B. Anthony amendment.

"We are not interested in future promises. If we do not get action upon the amendment, we will be prepared at the fall election to back up our demand."

ELASTIC PLANKS IN STATE MEET, REPUBLICAN PLAN

Peoria Platform Will Be Made So National Convention Can Be Suited.

Illinois Republicans in state convention in Peoria next Friday will attempt to set a platform pattern that can be stretched or trimmed to fit the necessities of the Republican national convention.

Senator Sherman in Washington is understood to have been in touch with Republican leaders representing all the candidates and interests, sounding them out as to what should be enunciated by a state as greatly important as Illinois in its 1916 declaration of faith. Unless the foreign question gets so intensely hot that he cannot leave Washington, Senator Sherman will be in Peoria, bringing from the national capital the latest information on the inside of the national political situation. It is possible the Senator may be made permanent chairman of the state convention. There is a quiet boom for Medill McCormick for temporary chairman.

Nebraska Primary.

The Illinois state convention will be the important political event of the week. Only one state primary is to be held, that of Nebraska. The forecast for the country at large is that the week before Easter is to be much the most quiet of the campaign year.

The list of favorite son candidates is now complete with the Illinois and Iowa primaries held during the week just ended. Senator Sherman wins 55 of the 58 delegates named by his friends in advance of the primaries. One other, State Treasurer Andrew Russel, is an unpledged delegate, elected in the Jacksonville district, but announces himself as for Sherman all the way through. Two Roosevelt boomers were elected in the Second and Sixth districts of Chicago. They are quoted as stating that they will do nothing to hamper Senator Sherman and the solid delegation of the state will be recorded for Sherman on the first ballot at least.

Iowa gave Senator Cummins a hearty and unanimous indorsement. Delaware presented, rather unexpectedly, T. Coleman Du Pont. The list of entrants is now believed to be complete and the time tried politicians do not expect to see any instructions given for any candidate not already named in the present stackup of delegates elected.

Sullivan Sees Wilson Chiefs.

Nearly one-half of the Chicago delegates have been elected. Of the 40 delegates chosen, 304, or practically one-third of the convention, are uninstructed.

While the Republicans have been jockeying for position the Democratic leaders have been busy. Roger C. Sullivan went down to Washington and had a talk with the president's political managers. Fresh from a clean-up that placed Mr. Sullivan in complete control of the Democratic organization in Illinois, he was in position to talk "cold turkey" with Secretary Tumulty and others of the White House inner circle. Mr. Sullivan is expected to return to Chicago tomorrow with plans that have received official O. K. for a set of resolutions at the Democratic state convention to be held at Springfield on Friday, simultaneously with the Republican convention at Peoria. The Springfield convention, it was the tip in the Sullivan camp, will be much more significant than had been expected earlier in the proceedings.

By the terms of the primary law and the necessities forced by the calendar, both state conventions fall on Good Friday. This circumstance has led to some discussion of holding perfunctory sessions only at both places and taking a recess until some other date. This probably will wind up in talk, however, and the conventions will be held as scheduled.

WOMEN INVADE DOWNSTATE IN SUFFRAGE CAUSE

Give Macomb Politicians Chance to Voice Their Opinion of Movement.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Macomb, Ill., April 15.—[Special.]—Illinois suffragists opened their spring campaign for full suffrage today.

They invaded the home town of Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman and captured all the politicians left in the county. Many of them were given their first opportunity to speak before an audience of suffragists and they took advantage of the opportunity. Macomb was chosen by the women as the place for its suffrage conference because of the political fervor of its citizens and the strong feeling in the county against suffrage.

Mrs. Edward L. Stewart, congressional chairman in the state, presented delegates from nearly a dozen new suffrage organizations established since the beginning of the year, and each one told of some of the civic things accomplished or proposed by the recent suffragists.

It seemed from the accounts of the women that they are making every town in western Illinois a spotless villa. There was scarcely a town or village represented in which the suffragists are not conducting a campaign of cleaning up the place.

Some of the reports of suffrage organizations in the way of civic work follow.

Plymouth—Arranging for a university extension course in home economics; cooperating in the movement to get a community house.

Keithsburg—Conducting clean up week starting tomorrow; helped to keep the town dry at the last election; cleaning up the parks and planting flowers; making a community center out of the school house; publishing the weekly paper for two issues, and taking the lead in the movement to build a new levee along the river.

Bushnell—Kept the town dry by a vote of four to one.

Canton—Established a cleanup day.

Galesburg—Working for the commission form of government.

Peoria—The organization got so many women out to vote that their ballots overcame the lead of the vote of men in several wards.

Quincy—Only temporary organization completed. Will have an open forum for discussion of all civic problems.

The Jeffery "Six" Outmatches Them All—Price $1450

A LITTLE study of last Sunday's Tribune might be of interest and profit to you.

One, price around $2000, invites your consideration because of its beauty.

We say this Jeffery light "Six" is not only beautiful but the most beautiful car now on Chicago's streets. Let your own eyes be the judge. The price of the Jeffery is $1450.

Next we have one, selling at from $3000 to $5000, urging smartness and its engine.

What we have said above concerning the smartness of the Jeffery "Six" will suffice for this. As for power plant, the merest novice will see that the Jeffery engine is fully the match of this high-priced car. The Jeffery price is $1450.

One, price around $2500, also urges your choice because of its beauty and the pride you will feel in its ownership.

We repeat, the Jeffery Light "Six" has no peer in beauty—it is the one car this season that will make the passer-by turn for a second look.

Then we have one selling at about $1600. Hill climbing is urged for this car.

We say that this Jeffery "Six," starting at the bottom of any hill at 5 miles per hour, will make the top of that hill moving at a faster speed than any other seven passenger car in the world selling between $1000 and $2000. We are ready to prove it.

Then we have one claiming your attention on its past—a good point.

We say that with over 1000 Jeffery cars in this city, the Jeffery record for satisfactory service is open to all. We will gladly give any intending purchaser the name of as many Jeffery owners as he wants for reference as to the car.

Note that, with over three thousand second-hand cars advertised in the Chicago Sunday Tribune in the past month, there has been but one Jeffery aside from the three we have advertised ourselves. 97% of all those to whom we have sold Jeffery cars today drive a car of this manufacture.

Then we have a car claiming your attention because of the number sold. This car is a lower priced car, not really a competitor of the Jeffery "Six," and perhaps should not be included.

In its price class, we do not believe there has ever been an automobile for which there was the demand which exists today for the Jeffery.

Then, finally, is mentioned a car selling at about $2500, whose reason for its purchase is that certain other makers have followed it in certain matters of design.

In this Jeffery is, of course, not interested. The conservatism which makes for the utmost simplicity and economy of operation possible, with the required refinement and power, is the standard upon which this Jeffery "Six" is produced.

So here we have these seven. Their average price is about $2250. There is not one feature urged in which we say this Jeffery is not equal or better. Indeed, we go further. We do not ask you to measure this car by any cut-and-dried standard. We say this car is unmatched at its price and we invite your consideration on this basis:

You are to select your own test. You may make it flexibility, performance through sand and Cook County's mud, hill climbing ability, appearance, beauty, style, smartness—whatever you wish, or all of them combined, just as you wish, and if we can not outdemonstrate the other car—if we cannot prove to your satisfaction that we have in this Jeffery a car of superior performance, you are to buy the other car.

Only remember this: April is half over. You will want your car quickly now. Place your order on the same basis and let us see you at your earliest convenience.

'SPHINX' HUGHES IGNORES PLEAS OF "OLD GUARD"

Discouraged by Attitude of the Justice—Look for Another Leader—Fear Roosevelt.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Republican leaders in congress representing the "old guard," so-called, have been trying to obtain from Justice Hughes some favorable intimation to encourage them in rallying about him as a candidate to combat the rapidly growing Roosevelt sentiment. Some of the most prominent Republicans in Washington have endeavored to get some encouragement from Justice Hughes, and have failed. He refuses to say anything.

These Republicans are discouraged, and apparently fear to go forward and rally around the Hughes movement until they have some assurance that they will not be disconcerted at the last moment by having the justice decline. They admit that if they build up a strong Hughes movement to combat Roosevelt, and at the last moment Justice Hughes declines Col. Roosevelt probably would be nominated.

Seek Man in Hughes' Place.

They are considering the names of Former Senator Root, Former Senator Burton, and Philander C. Knox in an effort to find some one upon whom they can center their support in the event Justice Hughes should decide to remove his name from consideration.

Information that Col. Roosevelt's followers had elected two delegates from the Third congressional district of North Carolina yesterday, and instructed them for Roosevelt, was a disquieting feature among the Republicans in the senate and house who are opposing Roosevelt.

Former Senator Marion Butler, who has an office in Washington, returned from North Carolina this morning. He was one of the delegates chosen at the convention yesterday, and he predicted that most of the North Carolina delegation would vote for the colonel at Chicago, and predicted the nomination of Roosevelt.

Ford Thorn in G. O. P. Side.

Another source of worry to the Republicans in congress was news from Nebraska that Henry Ford might carry off the preference in the presidential primary next Tuesday over Senator Cummins and Henry D. Estabrook, his two opponents. Senator Norris and other Nebraska Republicans expressed the belief that Senator Cummins would carry the state, but they admitted there was a strong sentiment for Mr. Ford.

Ford's political status is becoming rather important in the plans of the Republicans. Announcement was made here today that his campaign would shortly take on national importance. His name will go on the primary ballot in Pennsylvania and probably in other states where there is a big pacifist and labor vote.

Warning from Senator Smith.

Senator Smith of Michigan who was defeated by Henry Ford in the Michigan primaries has warned his Republican colleagues that they will have to treat Ford seriously before the campaign is over.

Notwithstanding denials, the opinion prevails among the Republicans that Ford may yet blossom out at the head of a new peace party to be known probably as "The American party," which will declare against preparedness, in favor of prohibition, equal suffrage, and with a platform for social welfare legislation. It was intimated today that delegates already elected for Senator La Follette may be delivered to Ford if his candidacy becomes formidable.

Lewis Tribute to Colonel.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis paid a tribute in the senate debate today to Col. Roosevelt while discussing volunteers, declaring that through his service as a volunteer in the Rough Riders the colonel had risen through various stages in politics until he occupied "a place in the Republican party where I might paraphrase that expression from Caesar, that like a huge colossus he doth bestride them that have been compelled to peep about his huge legs to find for themselves a hiding place."

"Will the senator give his authority for the statement that the distinguished gentleman seems to belong to the Republican party?" asked Senator Ashurst.

"The only information I have upon that subject," replied Senator Lewis, "is that which we lawyers have respecting title. When the property yields to the command of a person we assume that he must be the owner."

"Not Candidate"—Ford.

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—"I'm a business man—not a politician. I have no political ambitions. Under no condition would I consent to run for the presidency."

This was Henry Ford's statement here today in response to persistent reports that he would organize a third political party and run for president on a peace platform. He refused to comment in any way on reports of political activities by his lieutenants.

THE DAY IN CONGRESS

SENATE.

Met at 11 a. m.

Resumed debate on army reorganization bill, adopting amendment requiring national guard soldiers to take oath of allegiance to president of the United States as well as to the state, and also amendment to provide for federal pay for all national guard officers above the rank of captain.

Adjourned at 4:48 p. m. to noon Monday.

HOUSE.

Met at 11 a. m.

Resumed debate on agricultural appropriation bill.

Annual fight over free seed distribution to the farmers was begun.

Adjourned at 5 p. m. to noon Sunday, when a memorial service will be held for the late Representative Brown of West Virginia.

OPTION VOTE ON TOMORROW.

Thirty-Five Cities and Villages of Illinois to Hold Wet and Dry Elections.

Downstate wet and dry elections will be held in thirty-five cities and villages tomorrow. These elections are brought on by the provision of the township local option law permitting municipalities to vote as such, where the result will not change the controlling vote of the surrounding township. None of the more important cities of the state is involved. Attack on the legality of the option election in the town of Orland, Cook county, held April 4, has been started. The town was voted dry by 212 to 188. The petition asserts the votes of women won for the drys.

Battery Encampment Date Fixed.

The dates of the battery encampment of the artillery of the Illinois national guard were announced yesterday by Maj. Smith. The encampment will be held at Sparta, Wis., from June 16 to 25.

DEADLOCK HALTS G. O. P. FACTIONS' PARLEY ON PEACE

Three Clans Back Three Men for Chairman and Result Is Nil.

Republican peace in Cook county didn't get as far as might have been expected from the optimistic forecasts that preceded the triangled harmony conference yesterday.

As nearly as can be ascertained the net results of three hours of deliberation in the afternoon are as follows:

Col. A. W. Miller, the city hall selection for chairman of the new county committee, was nominated for chairman of the peace caucus by Charles A. Williams, the Thirty-second ward committeeman, who defeated Charles W. Vail through a Thompson-Brundage combination in the ward.

Mr. Williams was nominated promptly for secretary of the conference committee by Mr. Miller. Both were elected without a fight and without a roll call.

Talk, but No Results.

Two hours of diplomatic conversation ensued that got "nobody to nowhere," and at 5:34 p. m. the joint conference committee recessed until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Views of the interested politicians, who seem to be about the only people who are interested, are widely divergent as to what will come out of today's doings.

The Deneen-West interests will sit tight. This much seems to be definite. They will not agree to the election of William H. Weber and certainly not to the election of Col. Miller for chairman of the new committee.

Deadlock Right from Jump.

The conference had no more than started when the proposition was advanced by Thomas J. Healy of the Deneen wing, that a compromise candidate be suggested by one or both of the other factions.

The response was the nomination of Miller by the city hall trio, followed immediately by the naming of Weber by the Brundage three. Joseph F. Haas, for the Deneen three, thereupon nominated John C. Cannon, the present acting chairman of the county committee.

This produced a beautiful deadlock, split three ways. The discussion turned to other matters and the recess eventually was ordered until this afternoon.

Big Politics Back of It All.

Behind the curtain of factional differences, that could be settled promptly if the county chairmanship and such minor details were all that may be involved, develops the big politics that has been cooking all the way through the aldermanic and the recent primary campaigns.

The situation seems to be about as follows:

The new county committee, under the law, will nominate the six Republican candidates for Superior court judges, to be elected in June to succeed the six present Democratic judges whose terms expire.

If there is a tri-partite harmony agreement between the three factions it will have to go for these judges and for the big September county slate. The judicial slate must be made within the next two weeks and it is inextricably mixed with the organization county slate.

SHERMAN STALKING HORSE FOR ROOSEVELT? NEVER!

Senator Lets It Be Known His Own Candidacy Is Bona Fide and His Chances Good.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois fired both barrels today at those interests alleged to be representing him as a stalking horse for Col. Roosevelt in the contest over the Republican nomination for the presidency.

Incidentally the senator made it known that he is in the fight to a finish and that he believes he has an excellent chance of being nominated. In regard to the misrepresentations of his candidacy, Mr. Sherman said:

"The alleged interview or interviews claiming I am for Roosevelt as second choice are pure fabrication. I have no second choice. There is no Roosevelt sentiment among Illinois Republicans to justify any belief he is second choice or that his nomination is desired by them."

ROOSEVELT FORCES SECURE FLORENTINE ROOM IN HOTEL.

Moose Give It Out as Certain That T. R. Will Come to Chicago at Convention Time.

The Florentine room—headquarters of the Roosevelt forces in the 1912 national convention—once again is in possession of the colonel's friends.

Harold L. Ickes, chairman of the Illinois state Progressive committee, exercised the option that he has held on this room in the Congress hotel since last December, and paid the necessary cash deposit. The Roosevelt standard will be unfurled there just about the time the Republican presidential candidates are opening their headquarters in the Congress.

Progressive leaders turned loose the suggestion yesterday that Col. Roosevelt is certain to be in Chicago during the week of June 7, the date upon which the Republican convention at the Coliseum and the Progressive convention at the Auditorium theater will begin.

LEWIS DEMANDS SELECTION OF A CHICAGO POSTMASTER.

Illinois Senator Tells Burleson Democrats Are Impatient—Says Roger Offered Two Candidates.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Senator Lewis today demanded that the administration appoint a postmaster at Chicago. The senator called on Postmaster General Burleson and asserted that not only he but the entire Democratic party in Illinois is tired waiting on the administration for an office long overdue.

After leaving the postmaster general's office, Senator Lewis issued a statement in which he said that Roger Sullivan had presented the names of Colin Fyffe and John W. Eckhart when he was here Thursday. Mr. Sullivan denied asking for the appointment of a postmaster, and asserted that he was not seeking that or any other federal office for his friends.

Senator Lewis predicted tonight the appointment of a postmaster at Chicago will be made this week. Persons in touch with the postoffice department tonight said the selection now rests between Paschen and Schlake, with Breyer, formerly the favorite, as third choice.

Detroit Electric

Judge the car you buy in this light—

Let us avoid generalities and get down to specific features. For there are important features in which the Detroit Electric excels any other "all-year-'round" type of car—either gasoline or electric. There are reasons for Detroit Electric predominance. There are exclusive advantages it offers the man as well as the woman.

The big batteries of the 1916 Detroit Electric provide greater mileage—on a single charge—than you will require in an entire day's service. 98% of all trips ordinarily undertaken fall within its mileage range. It carries you safely, comfortably, speedily, luxuriously for 80 to 90 miles without need of recharging.

The conservative yet sufficient maximum speed of 25 miles per hour is safe for all city and suburban travel—higher speed is destructive and dangerous.

Owners of Detroit Electrics—who formerly drove other types of cars—say they find their Detroit Electric operative cost is 30% to 50% less than with other cars. This is a big consideration nowadays when gasoline is constantly soaring higher. Remember the cost of electricity is low and getting lower.

In repairs, replacements and adjustments, the Detroit Electric saves 60% to 80% because it is strongly and staunchly constructed of finest quality materials and has no delicate or complicated parts to be jarred out of adjustment or broken by vibration or road shock.

Skilled mechanical service is not needed for general care—for the power plant is simple and does not need constant adjustment. There is but one moving part to it. Many parts requiring lubrication are equipped with self-lubricating bushings—you need never even think of them.

Our representations of Detroit Electric performance are easily proved by a practical road demonstration.

MANY a motorist is demanding a government gasoline tank when he should be looking under the hood of his car.

Uncle Sam's Naval Experts reduced the consumption of coal on a battleship from 30 to 15 tons a day—by tightening up every leak and waste of power they could find.

With the average motor-car, one gallon of gasoline out of every three is spent just to cool the engine.

Look under the hood and see all the 177 parts of the water-cooling system absorbing power, adding weight, causing friction, wasting gasoline every second.

The Franklin System of Direct-Air-Cooling does away with all this complication, friction, dead weight and consequent waste of power.

If you are interested in making from 18 to 25 miles on every gallon of gasoline instead of 9 to 12—come in—Get the facts that are causing so many motorists to adopt Franklin Cars.

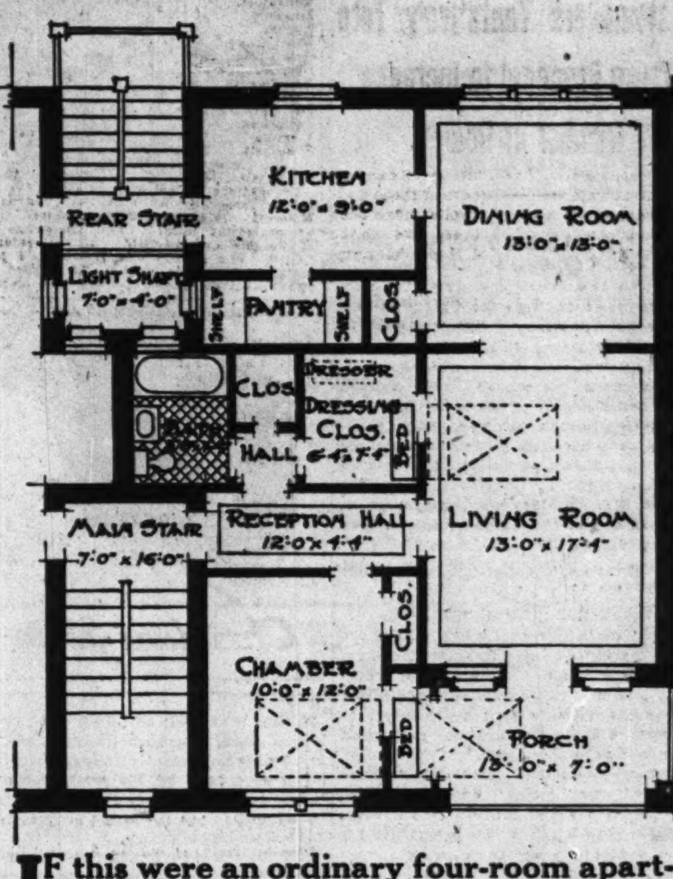
Rent an Elastic Murphyized Apartment Like This



IF this were an ordinary four-room apartment it could accommodate only two people.

But this is not an "ordinary" four-room apartment. It is Murphyized—which means that its efficiency has been DOUBLED by a Murphy In-A-Dor Bed in a dressing closet off the living room.

It costs no more to furnish than an ordinary four-room apartment and is no more work to care for. But it accommodates four people instead of two, and is in every way equivalent to a five room apartment. The dressing closet opens to both living room and bath and has ample wardrobe space.

Sleeping Porch

It has the additional advantage of a bed which is concealed in the closet between bedroom and porch during the day and let down into either at night. It may be shifted from porch to bedroom on an instant's notice during the night to avoid summer rain or winter snow.

If desired the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed may be kept for exclusive use on the porch and an ordinary bed used in the chamber. With this arrangement the four-room apartment achieves six-room efficiency and could, in an emergency, accommodate six people.

No one can afford to overlook the innumerable advantages of the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed. Even in roomy residences it is being used to make sleeping porches practical. Only by using the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed can one sleep outdoors, yet always jump into a bed that is dry, warm and well aired.

The Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is the only concealed bed that is mechanically perfect. It is really and truly concealed in an ordinary narrow door closet. It is ready for sleeping and can be swung out into the room IN A FEW SECONDS, even by a child.

IT NEVER GETS OUT OF ORDER.

BUILDERS:
We will be glad to send our booklet, "How to Use the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed," to any one contemplating building either a house or an apartment.

TENANTS:
Don't sign a lease until you have inspected the Murphyized apartments near where you wish to locate. Ask your real estate man or look in the classified columns of the daily papers. Look for our sign on new buildings, "Murphy In-A-Dor Beds Used Here."

HOLD UP ACTION ON COMMITTEES IN CITY COUNCIL

Slatemakers Tentatively Turn Down Proposal to Increase Number of Bodies.

BY PARKE BROWN.

St. Augustine, Fla., April 15.—[Special.]—After a two hours' discussion the committee on committees for Chicago's new city council tentatively turned down today the proposal that the number of standing committees be increased.

Ever since the six aldermen arrived here there has been more or less talk along this line. One or two of them believed the old water committee or some other that would serve the purpose of a "lonesome roads" body should be added to the list. In this way, they argued, some of the undesirables could be given their quota of three places without putting them in positions where they might do damage.

Work for New Committee.

Others contended that a new committee having some of the characteristics of a "highbrow" committee should be created to take up many of the subjects which now are carelessly sent to this or that committee which has no clear jurisdiction over the subject matter.

It was proposed to call it the "public welfare" committee. There were several arguments pro and con, but the adverse decision was made in the belief that the council is doing better work and more work since it reduced the number of its committees.

"There is no question," said Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the six, "that such a committee would be a valuable one. We simply have been drifting along on the question of public welfare. Some phases of the subject are referred to the finance committee, others go to health, and others to judiciary, or somewhere else. The councils of other large cities are giving special attention to this matter and it would be an excellent thing if we could.

"But this year it would mean the reorganization of such a large number of committees if we were to try to pick out a new one of the right kind that there is some question in the minds of two or three aldermen whether it should be adopted. Our present committees are well arranged and we probably will have enough work to do filling the vacancies."

Richert to Retain Job.

Richert is to remain as chairman of the finance committee, according to the present understanding. In fact, the entire membership of fifteen will be the same this year at last. There are no vacancies; it includes fair partisan representation—nine Republicans and six Democrats—and it has been praised by civic organizations as a dependable body in which the public has confidence.

One experiment that took a great deal of time was that of filling the twenty-seven vacancies with the names of the nine new aldermen, giving each of them the places held by his predecessor. In some instances the results were found satisfactory, but in others they were declared impossible.

THE HERO

Committee Will Recommend Him for Harrison Police Medal.

Christian Sloier

'CHRIS' SLOIER SLATED TO GET POLICE MEDAL

His Deed While Off Duty Considered Bravest Act in Department.

Christian Sloier, plain clothes man working out of First Deputy Schuettler's office, will receive the 1916 Carter H. Harrison gold medal which is awarded each year for conspicuous acts of bravery in the police department.

Single handed Sloier, who was off duty at the time, tackled a crew of three auto bandits and overpowered one of them. Two escaped, but were subsequently captured. All three are now serving indeterminate sentences at Joliet.

It Was Like This.

"I was going home about midnight June 11, 1915," Sloier said in relating the story. "I was in a Grand avenue car, and as we neared Ashland avenue a motor car eastward bound passed by. There weren't any license numbers on the car and I thought it was kind of funny they should turn into an alley, because I knew there wasn't any garage around there.

"I figured they must be safeblowers. Well, I got off the street car and discovered 'em putting the automobile in a barn in the rear of 1625 Grand avenue.

"Henry O'Neill, one of the crew, rushed out and yelled, 'Come on fellows,' and they started to beat it, with their guns ready for action. Two of the fellows—William O'Hallorhan and Otto Meyers—took it on the run, but I grabbed O'Neill and hit him and knocked him.

Fired His Revolver.

"I fired my gun to attract attention and Officer J. T. Grady showed up, and we took O'Neill to the station. I sent out a description of the other two fellows and they were captured later.

"My wife says she waked up just about the time shots were fired. I guess she dreamed she heard 'em. Anyway she's been scared ever since. But it's all in the game."

Sloier is 38 years old, lives at 4014 Potomac avenue, and has three children. He has been in the police department twelve years.

Had Robbed Drug Stores.

O'Neill, O'Hallorhan, and Meyers, according to Sloier, had robbed four or five drug stores the night he interrupted their operations. They had stolen the machine which caught his eye from Dr. R. C. Reinicke, 1701 South Kedzie avenue, who had taken them out for a ride on the supposition they wished to purchase it.

The special merit in Sloier's case in the opinion of President Coffin of the civil service commission was that he went out of his way to arrest desperate criminals while he was off duty.

The board of award, consisting of Chief of Police Healey, First Deputy Schuettler, and members of the civil service commission, also gave honorable mention to five police officers, and commendation to three others.

Honorable Mention.

These received honorable mention:

DETECTIVE SERGEANT MICHAEL J. VAUGHAN, for arresting two holdup men at great personal risk in a rooming house in Indiana avenue.

PATROLMAN THOMAS J. LANGAN, for capturing a holdup man and ex-convict in the vicinity of Twenty-ninth and Indiana avenue after a revolver battle in which Patrolman John B. Sausman was killed.

PAROLMAN MARTIN HOGAN, for capturing a thug who was holding up a saloon at 2058 West Van Buren street.

PATROLMAN JOHN SMRZ, for jumping off a street car at Western and Ashland avenues and tackling two criminals, who were going through the pockets of two victims.

Commended for Bravery.

These were commended for bravery:

PATROLMAN JAMES J. CLEARY.

DETECTIVE SERGEANT WILLIAM T. RUSSELL.

PATROLMAN REHIR.

Sloier probably will be presented with the Harrison medal within a few days in the mayor's office.

Arrested After He Is Injured.

Eugene McLaughlin, who said he was a press feeder, fell into an areaway yesterday while crawling out of a first floor window of a vacant building at 512 Federal street and suffered slight injuries. He was unable to explain what he had been doing in the building and the police took him to the bridewell hospital.

ST. PAUL ROAD REPORTED READY TO TAKE C. & E. I.

President Earling Said to Have Reached Agreement on Details of Absorbing Coal Field Line.

President A. J. Earling of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad is said to have come to an agreement on the details of taking over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad. The news originated in New York, where President Earling held a series of conferences last week. Local officials refused to discuss the probabilities, and at Mr. Earling's home it was said that he had not yet arrived from New York. He is expected back tomorrow.

The negotiations have been carried on for a year or more, the Milwaukee seeking an entry to the coal fields of Illinois and an entrance into St. Louis. In addition the Chicago and Eastern Illinois would give the larger road connections with the Louisville and Nashville at Evansville.

The St. Paul system already has a mileage of 9,684, while the Chicago and Eastern Illinois operates 1,283 miles. It is now in the hands of receivers as a result of too close contact with the illfated Frisco crowd, and any selling arrangement would consequently have to be passed upon by the federal District court.

THE OLD MAN BEHIND THE BOILER

Stop, Look, and Listen!

The same men who started the Kewanee Boiler Company twenty-four years ago own it and control it and run it today. So what they don't know about making good heating boilers could pass through the eye of a needle. These are the men who advise you, if you are looking for a flat, to get busy in the basement and find out whether a Kewanee Boiler is there or not. If it is, all right. If not, good night.

These are the men who were the first to put on the market a down-draft smokeless boiler for heating purposes, incidentally giving to the great American public the best heating boiler in the world and one that will burn the cheapest grades of coal without smoke. Think how much economy this means to you men who own buildings.

If you owners of flat buildings will advertise that you have this boiler in your building, it will do more to popularize your flats than anything you can say about rooms, decorations, location, rent or anything else. Why don't some of you do it? Why don't you recognize the strength of the argument? Don't you know that flat dwellers everywhere can be reached in that manner? Get wise, get wise. Don't let it be said that you have to be treated for the simples.

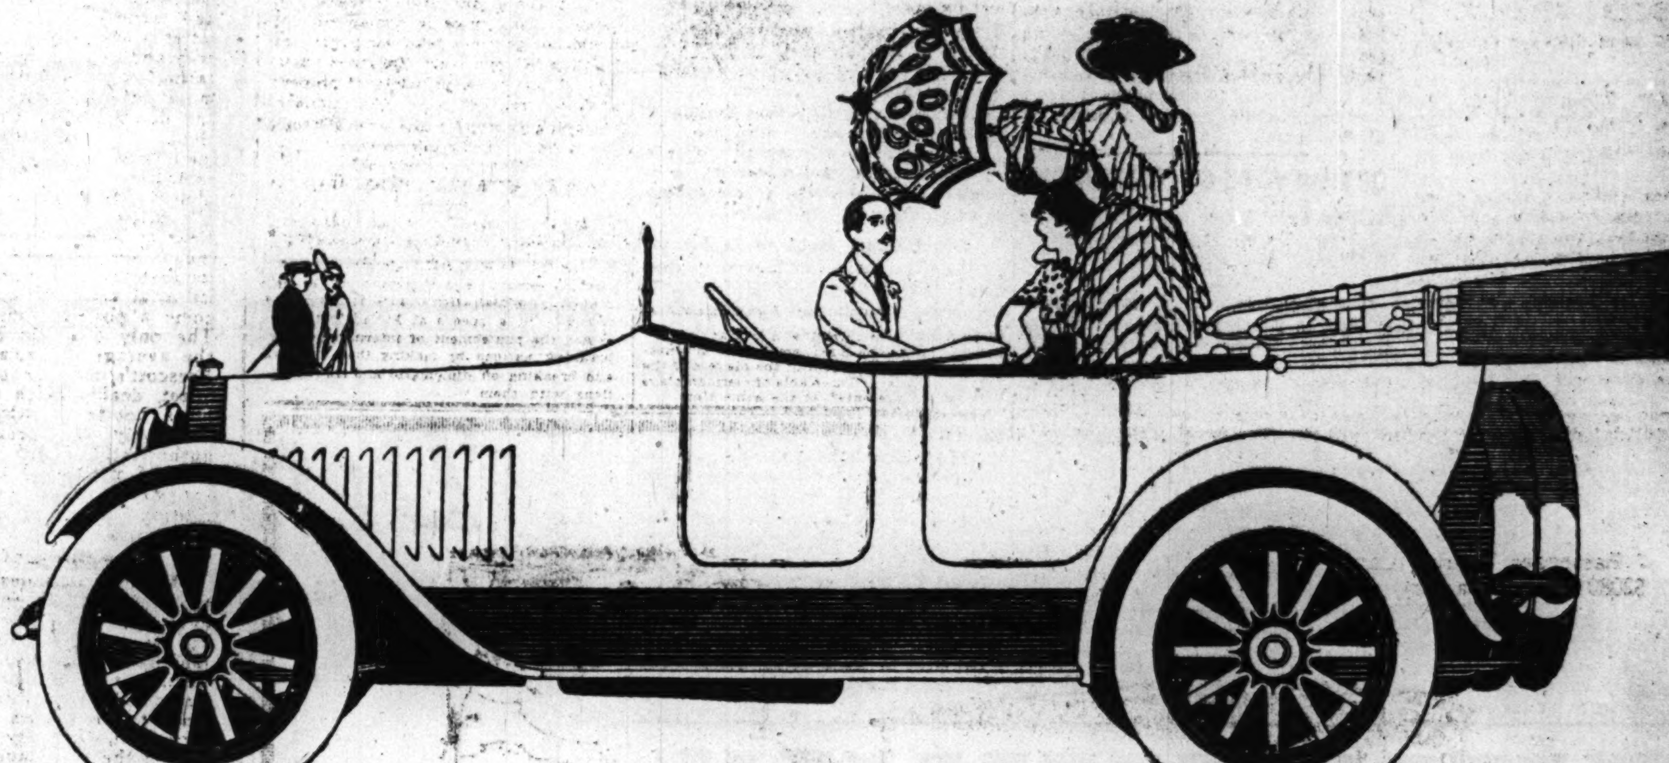
CHALMERS MOTOR CO
Detroit, Mich. U.S.A.

Quality First



She's active, lacks "nerves," and very modern—the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers

She's active, full of life, lacks "nerves," and delivers a terrific wallop with only the slightest effort.

I mean by that a power-wallop. Because she turns up 3400 revolutions per minute. Her crank shaft speed surpasses that of any other American car.

Though there are three built in the U. S. A. that get a bit beyond 3100 r. p. m.

It's like an electric fan, which turns up 4000 r. p. m., or a turbine which does around 4300.

Of course, the Chalmers engine doesn't hit 3400 all the time. 3400 is the maximum. When the car is running 5 miles an hour she turns up 250 r. p. m.

At 10 miles an hour she does 500 r. p. m. At 15 she does 750. At 20, 1000. At 30, 1500.

So you see the engine isn't hitting the highest speed at the slower car speeds—those speeds you drive 90 per cent of the time.

In a way it's like horse-power. You say the horse-power of your car is 40. You mean by that the maximum is 40.

Yet at 10 miles an hour you are using probably less than 10 h. p. While at 20 miles an hour you are using about 17 or 18 h. p. And so on.

3400 r. p. m. is just another way of stating horse-power. It's the modern way. Because it shows power through supreme engine speed and not through large bore and stroke, which means a brute of an engine, and hence a vehicle of great weight.

The day of such a car has gone by. You and I want a light, spunky beast that responds to the slightest touch of the accelerator, that pulverizes hills, that drives straight as a sunbeam, that has the lure in her lines, and obeys.

That's the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers. I've never had any person buy one and tell me she wasn't there. For she is—100 per cent.

Run in and I will show you a car that has doubled my business.

Ask me about our service inspection coupons. They are negotiable with all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

CIRCUS DRAWS YOUNG AND OLD ON FIRST NIGHT

Cinderella Pageant, Clowns, Acrobats, and the Animals Please Coliseum Throng.

Charles E. Ringling was a happy showman last night. Silk hatted and white gloved he stood at the center entrances and watched the big Coliseum fill up from ring to dome.

For the circus had lost none of its glamour for the populace, even after twenty-four annual visits to Chicago. A platoon of police was called out to disperse crowds down the block at 7:30 o'clock, an hour before the opening of the evening performance. Mayor Thompson and his party occupied a box in section 1, and other notables were in evidence around the ropes partitioning the various sections of the crowds.

The colorful pageant of Cinderella is the first production of Charles E. Ringling, and he walked about among the crowds to get the first hand effects upon them as a performing feature of the show.

The clowns, with their big feet and antics, the animals, and the circus women were all there. Al Miarco, the 76 year old clown, the oldest in the world, it is said, was agile, as were Clowns Jules Turnour and William Carroll, 73 years young. They tumbled as blithely as boys about in the ring.

Because of the wars in Europe, there are many foreign features this year in the circus. The management secured roller skating bears and the dwarf rider from Italy and other attractions.

The performance closes with a "thriller," when three motorcyclists sail about in a hollow sphere to the topmost height of the Coliseum.

ROBBERS BEAT MERCHANT; LEAVE HIM UNCONSCIOUS.

Nathan Fox Slugged When He Grapples with Men Who Took Ring and Cash.

Nathan Fox, owner of a men's furnishing store at 3133 Lincoln avenue, was beaten on the head with a revolver and left unconscious in his place of business yesterday by one of three robbers who escaped with his diamond ring valued at $150, and $92 from the cash register.

Two of the robbers remained on the front sidewalk as lookouts and the third entered the store with two revolvers. When he commanded Fox to throw up his hands the latter resisted and grappled with the intruder. While they were struggling the robber struck Fox on the head several times with the handle of the revolver.

HEY, SKINNAY, YOO HOO!

C'm On Over, the Big Circus Is Open—Coliseum "Big Top" Thronged First Night.

Ringling's circus opened at the Coliseum last night in the traditional blaze of glory. The stationary "big top" was jammed and the small members of the audience were thrilled as small persons always are. "Cinderella," spectacular event of the performance, brought evident satisfaction, and was regarded as one of the most considerable events attempted under canvas. More than 480 performers are utilized in the three ring and two platform performance. Lola Lloyd and her horse, Pinto, came in for a large share of applause.

SPEAKERS WARN OF WAR PERILS

Demand Preparedness at Banquet of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity.

DR. MATHEWS STRONG.

"I would rather that we prepare for Utopia, if absolutely necessary, than for hell," said Dr. Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago, in an address on "International Misunderstanding" at the annual banquet of the Northwestern Association of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity in the Blackstone hotel last night.

The several speakers in more or less flat terms demanded preparedness against war, while some advocated preparedness for peace. Among those urging preparedness as a necessity were Dr. John Timothy Stone, Henry Rathbone, president-elect of the Lincoln club of Chicago, and Dr. Mathews. Other speakers were Dean Hastings of the University of Nebraska and H. H. Van Meter, both of whom spoke of the progress and ideals of the fraternity.

Country Needs Poise.

"If there is anything this country needs at this hour it is poise," said Dr. Stone. "D. K. E. stands for poise. The United States needs character that reveals poise and reserve, to be able to meet the great crisis in this, the greatest war the world has ever known."

Mr. Rathbone responded to "Peace and Preparedness, and said, in part:

"The United States will lead the long procession of nations of the world at the close of this war in an international peace congress. We are awake to our dangers. We have lagged behind, struggling and fussing for means of destruction in which we are mere novices."

Rational Preparedness Right.

"I believe that any rational preparedness is right and should be made," said Dr. Mathews, "but such problems should be looked into and considered quite clearly.

"No peace at any price is desired, but justice at any price is demanded. We should not go in for peace simply to beat the other fellow in war. Establish a principle of justice, a principle, if properly extended, that will have great influence in shaping eventual peace, even if Utopia is sounded in such a movement."

NEWS PURELY PERSONAL.

RAYMOND ROBINS of Chicago was one of Col. Roosevelt's visitors at Sagamore Hill.

DR. DAVID JAYNE HILL, former ambassador to Germany and a member of the permanent administration council to the Hague tribunal, in a speech at Philadelphia suggested the punishment of international lawbreaking nations by making them outlaws and breaking off diplomatic and trade relations with them.

CITY FORESTER PROST IS FREE OF GRAFT CHARGE.

Civil Service Commissioner Orders Reinstatement of Official Accused by Ald. Block of Irregularities.

The case against J. H. Prost, city forester, yesterday was dismissed by the city civil service commission. After hearing testimony from several witnesses, one of whom committed suicide after testifying against Mr. Prost, the merit board ordered his reinstatement.

The charges, filed by Ald. Eugene Block, chairman of the special park commission, alleged that Mr. Prost had connived at petty grafting in the conduct of the Gage municipal farm.

Members of the civil service commission privately expressed the opinion that employés at the farm might be at fault but there was no evidence to show the city forester sanctioned the irregularities.

"FIXER" SENTENCED TO JAIL.

Mother of Boy Says She Paid $20 to "Be Given to the Judge."

For pretending to "fix" cases before Judge Fisher, Edward Kilichowski, Lincoln street and Armitage avenue, was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail yesterday. Several days ago Stanley Schultz, 18 years old, was sent to the bridewell for annoying a girl. Kilichowski appeared in the boy's behalf. It was discovered Mrs. Schultz had paid Kilichowski $20 to "be given to the judge" for releasing the boy.

MRS. DOGGETT CHARGES PLOT TO HAVE HER FOUND INSANE.

Bill of Central Trust Company Renews Dispute Over Million Dollar Estate of Her Husband.

A plan to have her declared of unsound mind in order to obtain control of the million dollar estate left her by her husband, the late George N. Doggett, is charged by Mrs. Hugenia S. Doggett against H. E. L. Doggett and W. L. Doggett, brothers of her husband and members of the real estate firm of W. L. Doggett & Bros.

The accusations are included in a bill of the Central Trust company of Illinois, as trustee, to dismiss the application for a conservator. The conservator was asked on the ground that Mrs. Doggett is a distracted person.

Mrs. Doggett was declared insane in 1915, but later the verdict was set aside, she appearing as her own attorney. The motion filed by the trust company alleges that the Doggett brothers have collected large sums from the estate.

NOT KNOCKING THE MACHINE

But When Robbers Started a Tune Accidentally They Fled.

When robbers broke into Joe Lawder's saloon at Thirty-ninth and Indiana avenue yesterday morning they accidentally kicked a mechanical player, which started grinding out a tune. Music, instead of calming their savage breasts, frightened them, and they fled.

PITTE WINS FOR DELEGATE.

Official Count Shows James Rosenthal Defeated in Fifth Congressional District.

Hugo L. Pitte, who, according to the police returns, was defeated by James Rosenthal for delegate to the Democratic national convention from the Fifth congressional district, won out yesterday on the official count, which gives Pitte 4,344 votes to Rosenthal's 4,229.

The canvass also shows Lee A. Dunne elected Republican state committeeman in the Eighth congressional district, where the police figures returned George Draeger winner. The vote was: Dunne, 1,431; Draeger, 1,262.

WAGE INCREASES GRANTED.

PATERSON, N. J.—The American Locomotive works today posted notices in all departments stating that beginning Monday, April 17, a nine hour work day and a 10 per cent increase in wages will be put into effect.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—The Youngstown Sheet and Tube company today announced a wage raise of 10 per cent, effective May 1, for all its employés except salaried men. The raise affects 9,000 men.

BIDDEFORD, Me.—A wage increase for 7,000 cotton mill operatives was announced today by the Pepperell Manufacturing company of this city and the York corporation of Waco.

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—The Berkshire Woolen company has announced a voluntary wage increase of 10 per cent, to become effective April 24. This makes a total wage increase of 15 per cent since Jan. 1.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Wage increases have been granted 4,000 or 5,000 brewery employés here it was learned today, as a result of negotiations between the brewers and the allied brewing unions.

FORT DODGE, Ia.—Five hundred employés of the local gypsum mills will receive an increase of 2½ cents an hour beginning Monday, April 17, it was announced today.

Cadillac Eight—the Pattern Car

Who sets the style in motor cars? Who says what's what? Who makes the pace and charts the road? The Cadillac,

What design is copied by proud and meek? What performance is claimed by other cars, what standards followed, what value envied? The Cadillac.

What car do most men want today? What good car do most men buy? What car do all agree is right? The Cadillac.

What car is safest for you to buy? What modern car is proven through and through? What car do you know has stood the test with thousands of men like you? The Cadillac.

These Cadillac qualities other cars now boast, a year ago they said were wrong. But Cadillac courage dares do what's right, and thus compels real progress.

Now whom will you trust when things go thus—the man who leads or the man who follows? The Cadillac Eight — the pattern car—is the wise man's choice today.

MEXICO: PAST AND PRESENT

ITS RESOURCES AND ITS ANCIENT CIVILIZATION

Sooner or later, and more or less often, the history of every country must be seriously influenced the character and conduct of its nearest neighbors. If a house fronting on Fifth Avenue had, in its immediate rear, a saloon tenated and frequented by gunmen, the contrast could not be more singular than that between the Canadian and Mexican neighbors of our country.

The Texas stockbreeder's belief that the only good Mexican is a dead one wrongs large classes of respectable merchants and landowners, but until these latter classes apply greater energy and skill to the task of educating and controlling their moral inferiors, they must share the discredit of existing conditions. Of these conditions, of their causes, and of their possible remedies, most of us in the United States know very little. We know Europe much better. Near as Mexico is, and interesting as are its scenery, its ruins, its customs and other aspects of its local color, it has never become a popular tourist resort. The only book on Mexico that the average American knows is Prescott's History of the Conquest, dealing with the foundations, not the existing structure. The only book containing an authoritative and interesting view of modern as well as ancient Mexico is the new Eleventh Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

How the Land Lies.

Mexico occupies nearly a tenth of the eight million square miles covered by North America; and its surface forms a vast table-land, enclosed, east and west, by mountain chains, on the outer sides of which lowlands slope to the coasts. With this formation, with only a light rainfall on the table-lands, and with a limited forest area, the rivers are unimportant; and the Rio Grande, on the northern frontier, is really American water, for it rises in the United States and receives but small contributions from the south. The climate of the country varies according to the height above sea level rather than according to the variations of latitude. At altitudes between 3,000 and 5,500 feet the temperature is sub-tropical, and at elevations ranging from the latter figure to 8000 feet, the "cold lands," as the Mexicans call them, including most of the plateau, correspond to those temperate regions of the United States in which frost is unusual. Still higher, the climate of the mountain slopes is suitable for cereals and grazing. Almost anything that grows in the western hemisphere can be found somewhere in Mexico. The tropical jungle yields valuable rosewood, mahogany and dyewoods; in the lowlands the supply of cotton, sugar, coffee, tobacco and rubber could be vastly increased, and the cornfields give two or three crops a year. But the dry, sterile area of Mexico is of huge extent, and most of it can never be developed by irrigation. Horses, cattle, sheep and pigs, all imported from Spain centuries ago, steadily degenerated in type until the great modern stock-raising companies, controlled by Americans and Europeans, introduced fresh blood. And even now the best herds and flocks of the table-lands must travel too far, in search of water and pasture, to make a good showing in any but exceptional years; while those in the lower and richer sections suffer from the moist heat, from insects and from blood-sucking bats.

Manufacturing, in the period of comparative tranquility under the stern but intelligent rule of President Porfiro Diaz, attained such a degree of prosperity as to meet a great part of the home demand for such textiles as could be produced from native materials; while sugar, tobacco, leather, flour, iron and steel offer industrial opportunities worthy of a much better grade of factory labor than has as yet been obtainable, and in these fields, as in mining and stock-raising, foreign capital and foreign management have effected all the progress.

Mining.

The best known and the most productive of the industries of Mexico is that of mining. It was the chief object of Spanish exploration, and the principal occupation of European residents and capital during three centuries of Spanish rule. Mines of some description are to be found in 26 of the 31 states and territories, and of these the great majority yield silver. Gold, silver, copper, iron, mercury, lead, sulphur, antimony, tin, zinc, coal, petroleum, asphalt are all mined. Near Durango is a mountain 640 feet in height, 1,100 in breadth, and 4,800 in length, reputed to be almost a solid mass of iron. The coal is of low grade, but an official report estimates the supply in sight at 300,000,000 tons, and its industrial value equals that of the precious metals. The same is true of the petroleum deposits near Tampico. The United States Geological Survey found the Mexican oils of low grade, but an excellent fuel for railroad engines. In fact, many of the Mexican railroads use the native oils instead of imported coal.

Government and Institutions.

In theory, Mexico is a federation in which the legislative and judicial branches control the executive as fully as in the United States, but in practice the President is an irresponsible dictator. The tyranny formerly exercised by the Roman Catholic church has been broken in form, and, to an extent, in substance; but the priests still possess a pervading influence which hampers the system of public education; nominally that of free, compulsory and non-sectarian instruction for all children of 6 to 12 years of age.

Under the regime of President Diaz, Mexican finance was, on the whole, creditable to the nation. The taxes were heavy, and there were needless inconveniences in the methods of their imposition and collection, as well as corruption in their expenditure. But there was absolute confidence in the currency of the authorized banks, which, although it was not legal tender, was everywhere accepted at its full face value; and Mexico's international credit was excellent.

The Mixed Races.

There are many indications that the earliest inhabitants of Mexico were of Asiatic origin, and it is possible, according to the geologists, that the country was first occupied when there was continuous land between it and Asia. From this prehistoric period to the coming of European explorers there may, indeed, have been casual immigration across the Pacific. Even in the latter part of the 19th Century stray junks from Japan were drifted by the prevailing currents to the California coast as often as once a year, often with some of the crew surviving. The Aleutian islands offered an easy sea passage, and near Berings Strait some tribes still risk occasional crossings. But Asiatic chronicles show no record of any early knowledge of America, and until the Spanish conquest in 1520 the material accumulating in Mexico for the historian consisted only of picture-writings, much less clear and definite than the hieroglyphs of Egypt, and yet recording legibly the names of many persons and places and the dates of some events. And even if there had been no chronicles at all, the Spanish invaders found evidence of long established civilization in a highly organized system of government, in elaborate buildings of great antiquity and in other results of a continued culture which, in some respects, was really beyond the European level of the time.

The colonists from the British Isles and the north of Europe who settled the United States came eager to work. The Spaniards came to Mexico eager to enslave the natives and to make them work the mines. This contrast was, in itself, enough at the outset to indicate for Mexico a future less happy than that which awaited the United States. But it is also true that our forefathers came to a land which, economically and socially speaking, was uninhabited. The Indian tribes they found were wandering hunters, loosely governed by their chiefs and councils of old men. Some of them were capable of such a degree of domestication as to fit them for the life of the more successful Indian reservations, but most of them so fierce and restless that even if our early policy toward them had been more patient and less selfish, their gradual disappearance would have been inevitable. In Mexico, on the other hand, the Spanish found systematized law, religion and education. It is true that the Aztec kingdom was itself based on conquest, that the nation was, above all, a fighting community, that the religion was devilishly bloodthirsty, and that the education produced soldiers and priests of equal ferocity. But the population was not nomadic; it was customary to work regularly, if not very assiduously, at an occupation of some kind; and the useful and decorative arts were taught in accordance with long established traditions.

The chief palace of Mexico City contained hundreds of rooms ranged around three open squares, and was so large that one of the companions of Cortez records having wandered about four times until he was tired without seeing the whole of it. In the gardens of another palace were flowering plants brought from the jungle; and a well-arranged zoological collection, with homes for all kinds of animals, including alligators and snakes. Varied crops were intelligently and continuously cultivated, and although the large estate all belonged to the king, the nobles and the temples, each freeman in the villages held and tilled his portion of the land nominally owned in common. The slaves were such prisoners of war as the priests had not sacrificed in the temples, criminals condemned to servitude and children purchased from parents who could not rear them. The two latter classes did not lose all their civil rights, and their children were born free.

Stern Laws and Terrible Penalties.

In each of the principal cities justice was administered by a supreme judge, who was irremovable, and whose decisions even the king himself could not reverse. This judicial chief appointed the lower judges and heard appeals from them. Among the picture writings still preserved are both laws and records of trials; and in the latter the death sentence was marked by drawing a line with an arrow across a portrait of the condemned. A thief, for even the most trifling larceny, became the slave of the person he had robbed. Pilfering in the public markets, or stealing anywhere property as valuable as a tobacco pouch, or twenty ears of corn, entailed death, and the punishment for stealing gold or silver was to be skinned alive. Beer brewed from aloes was permitted only at feasts and for the use of invalids, and while persons more than seventy years of age were entitled to drink to excess if they wished, young men found intoxicated were clubbed, and young women stoned, to death. For witchcraft, fraud or adultery the culprit had his heart cut out on the altar.

War clubs and spears were the favorite weapons, although archers made good practice with a powerful bow. The armies were so considerable that an expedition often included several divisions each of eight thousand men. The remains of strongholds and city walls show that the art of fortification was carefully studied. The incessant demands of the priests for more captives to be sacrificed was one of the commonest reasons for war, and the close connection between religion and conquest is shown by the fact that the war god ranked chief among the Aztec divinities. It was in front of the war god's image, in the great temple of the City of Mexico, that human sacrifice was practiced on the largest scale. The idol stood on the highest of five steep terraces, so that the whole city could see the long procession of priests and victims winding up to the altars. The stone of sacrifice was "humped" so that it bent upward the victim's body as he lay on his back, in order that the priest could conveniently slash open the breast The soldier who captured the victim waited below to carry home the carcass and cook it for the cannibal "feast of victory." Fires, never extinguished, blazed in front of the shrines always reeking with blood, and on the platform stood the huge drum, covered with snakeskin, which summoned the people to the awful rites. In the "skull-place" tens of thousands of skulls were skewered on sticks or built into great towers.

When Mexico Was "New Spain."

The colonial period of Mexican history, from the conquest in 1520 until independence took definite form under the first congress in 1822, was one of slow emancipation. The natives, who had originally been divided as serfs among the conquerors, were gradually permitted to sell their labor as they pleased, provided that they also cultivated the lands which they held for life only. But they were for the most part compelled to live in villages or settlements where they could be watched by the local authorities; and a still closer, if less formal, control over them was exercised by the priests and friars. The negroes were in general enabled to buy their freedom if they made any earnest effort to do so; and, except on the coast, absolute slavery was not general. But the distinctions of caste were rigidly marked. Pure whites were but a small minority, for the Spanish brought few women with them; and men who had been born in Spain occupied, both in the public services and in other activities, a superiority over the Creoles born in Mexico of purely Spanish blood. Five grades of mixed races were recognized: first, the white and Indian half-breeds; then the mulattoes; then the Indian and negro half-breeds; then the Indians; and, lastly, the negroes. These in large part have been fused, and at the beginning of the twentieth century the nation census showed 19% of the population to be white, 38% Indian and 43% mixed blood.

The three hundred years of Colonial history, 1520-1822, broken only by the raids of the English sea-rovers, Hawkins and Drake, and later of those of the buccaneers, by yellow fever and other epidemics, by quarrels between church and state, represent a dreary record of little interest.

Independent Mexico.

And the Century of Independence represents almost as dreary a record of revolution and civil war. A revolution a year, with murders, executions, confiscations and consequent troubles with foreign governments, tells the sad story. In all these hundred years only three events stand out as worthy of mention—the revolt of Texas and the resulting war with the United States, the French intervention and the reign of the Austrian prince, Maximilian, and the presidency—in reality, reign—of Diaz.

The Mexican War.

Though a state of the Mexican Union, Texas had been settled from the United States in consequence of a land grant to Stephen Austin. The sacred rights of the Texans to hold slaves, the Mexican government to the contrary, caused a revolt, just as, a few years later, the demands of slavery brought on the war between the United States and Mexico. New slave states must come into the Union to balance the rapid growth of new free states at the North, and Texas was therefore admitted to the Union in 1845. War at once followed, with the rapid invasion and conquest of New Mexico and California; not the New Mexico and California as we know them, but a vast region as large as Great Britain, France and Germany combined, and comprising the present states of New Mexico, Arizona, California, Nevada, Utah and part of Colorado. No better illustration of the inability of statesmen to read the future, even statesmen as farseeing as John C. Calhoun, can be found than this war picked against Mexico for the purpose of adding slave territory to the United States. Five new states and part of a sixth were added to the Union, but no one of them were slave-holding.

Maximilian's Empire.

The second outstanding event in Mexican history is the French intervention. The years 1859 and 1860 had witnessed outrages of more than usual severity against life and property. Murder and robbery of Europeans were followed by the seizure of $630,000 under seal of the British legation. At first Great Britain, Spain and France united in an expedition for indemnity, but as the French gradually made plain their intent to set up an empire under Maximilian, Great Britain and Spain withdrew. The French sent over a large number of troops, 20,000 coming at one time, September, 1862, but they were never able to hold even nominally over two-thirds of the country. Flying columns and guerrilla bands swept the country, and alas for any small French force caught off its guard!

With the close of our Civil War and the assertion of the Monroe Doctrine by the United States, the French troops were withdrawn and the Mexicans made short work of Maximilian, capturing and shooting him in spite of the protests of many European governments.

President Diaz.

Since the fall of Maximilian, now nearly fifty years ago, Mexico has seen little except insurrection and brigandage except under the firm rule of Diaz.

Porfirio Diaz, like Villa, was of part Indian, part Spanish descent. He was born in the south of Mexico in 1830. Fired with enthusiasm by stories told by soldiers, and hearing of the war with the United States, he set out from his native town to join the army. A mere boy and too poor to ride, he walked the greater part of the 250 miles to the City of Mexico, only to arrive after the signing of the treaty of peace. He then studied law, taking pupils to pay his way. In 1854, on his refusal to vote for the then dictator, Santa Anna, an order for his arrest was given, but seizing a rifle and mounting a horse he placed himself at the head of a few revolting peasants and soon became one of the leaders in the long struggle, known in Mexico as the War of Reform. He rose rapidly, becoming successively captain, colonel, brigadier-general, and general of division. In the movement against the French he took a prominent, almost a leading part. He was twice seriously wounded, imprisoned on three different occasions, had two hairbreadth escapes, and took part in many engagements.

After the execution of Maximilian in 1867, he retired to his home, but in 1876 took part in the overthrow of the incompetent Lardo, became president himself and with an interval from 1880 to 1884 continued president, to the great benefit of the country, until his overthrow in 1911, a period longer than the average reign of European sovereigns.

Such in brief is the country and the history of Mexico. Will it, like Argentine, Chili and Brazil, work out its salvation and settle down into a quiet and peaceful country, or will it, like Venezuela and most of the Central American governments, be a prey to revolution, civil discord and brigandage? The result is in the lap of the gods, and no one may give a certain answer, but a fairly safe guess may be made that if Mexico would of herself restore quiet and order she must first so change the ownership of land, that every peasant, Indian, half-breed, or Spanish, may, like the French peasant after the revolution, have his own plot where he may work out his own economic salvation.

All of the information given above is taken from the single article on Mexico in the new Encyclopaedia Britannica. Mr. Beecher once said that he did not need to eat a whole leg of lamb to know whether it was tainted or not, and this little sample from one article tells something of the wealth of information in the Britannica on all subjects.

MAYOR SEEKS TO CUT EXCESSIVE PARMELEE RATES

Asks Ordinance to Protect the City's Visitors from High Fare at Stations.

An investigation into the schedule of rates charged by the Frank Parmelee company was started yesterday by Mayor Thompson.

He asked Corporation Counsel Ettelson to determine whether the company's excessive rate can be curbed by the present city ordinances. If not Mr. Ettelson is expected to draft an ordinance that can compel the company to reduce its charges.

"I asked the corporation counsel to prepare and submit a legal opinion to me after I received complaints as to the rates the Parmelee company charges," said the mayor.

"The complaints, for the most part, come from citizens of Chicago, but the persons who suffer most are the city's visitors. They do not know that by walking outside the railroad stations, taxicabs may be hired for half the Parmelee price. Action will be taken to make the Parmelee concern revise its rates to comply with those prescribed by the city ordinances.

"If visitors to Chicago are being robbed by a concern operating a monopoly of public vehicles from the railway terminals, it surely is a bad thing for the city. It does not encourage people to come to the city, nor does it tend to give Chicago a name for hospitality. Surely I should think the railroads which make this monopoly possible would wake up to the fact that they are hurting their own business. I am told that their porters are instructed to steer people to the Parmelee cabs, and that they fear discharge as the penalty for failing to do so."

The Parmelee schedule is said to be approximately 100 per cent over that maintained by concerns having a rate list on a par with that of the Yellow Cab, or the Atlas companies.

Commerce Report Cited.

In 1913 the Chicago Association of Commerce made up, at the request of former Mayor Harrison, a report which was largely responsible for the present taxicab ordinance.

Mr. Harrison was indignant over the Parmelee charges, and attempted to force them to equip their cabs with meters and charge the legal rate. The Parmelee company, contended, however, that it did not operate on the streets of Chicago, maintaining cab stands on depot property and, therefore, was not amenable to the city ordinance.

The association of commerce investigation declared that for many years, or practically since its incorporation in 1895, the Parmelee company seems to have enjoyed "divine right" privileges in its business of hauling passengers to and from the city's railway terminals. Despite its apparent monopoly of the traffic, it is said that the company pays no compensation to the railroad terminals. In New York City this concession to one terminal alone, that of the Pennsylvania railroad, is reported to amount to something like $50,000.

Roads May Control Stock.

Perhaps a little light may be thrown on that phase of the matter, however. For a considerable length of time reports have been current along La Salle street that much of the stock of the Parmelee company is in the hands of financiers who, either directly or indirectly, are holders of interests in the railroads which control the terminals from which Parmelee buses and taxicabs operate.

Even with the prerogatives it holds, the Parmelee company charges a rate above that of cab companies which operate within the city ordinances. A request made at the head offices of the company yesterday brought forth the information that a rate of 75 cents for the first mile for one passenger, and 40 cents for each additional mile, is charged for taxicab service, with a charge of 25 cents for each additional passenger.

Rates of Ordinance.

The rates prescribed by the city ordinance are:

For first half mile, for one person, 40 cents.

For each succeeding quarter mile, 10 cents.

For each additional person for the whole journey, 15 cents.

MASKED MEN GET WAGES FROM FOUR WORKMEN.

Two masked and armed men yesterday afternoon held up four employés of Bates & Heath, printers, whose plant is on the fourth floor of the building at 59 East Randolph street. The robbers escaped with pay envelopes containing $75.

One of the robbers is said to have been recognized as a former employé of the concern, who was discharged a few weeks ago.

WOMAN DEAD, ANOTHER ILL, AFTER "MORPHINE PARTY."

New York Police Hold Two Witnesses and Seek Third—Prominent Tenants in Mystery Flat.

New York, April 15.—Mrs. Mabel E. Hodge, 30 and pretty, is dead, and Mrs. Margaret Lahah, actress and music teacher, is in a serious condition at the Bellevue hospital today, their cases presenting one of the most unusual morphine poison mysteries ever called to the attention of the police.

Two witnesses, a man and a woman, are being held and search is being made for a man known only as "Lester."

The mystery has been called by the police a "morphine party."

The four with the missing witness met in Mrs. Lahah's apartment Thursday evening, Mrs. Hodge coming from Albany. Friday morning Mrs. Hodge and Mrs. Lahah retired to a bedroom, the police say, and shortly afterward started screaming. They had medical attention until late in the afternoon, when Mrs. Hodge died.

LAKE FOREST PREPARES TO "GERMANIZE" ITSELF.

New Business Center for Suburb, Following Plan of Old Teuton Towns, Well Under Way.

Work on Lake Forest's new business center, a scheme of city planning adapted from the old English and German towns, is well under way and the north shor suburb will resemble a glimpse of Munich or old Nuremberg by next October.

The transformation is slowly taking place in the business block which stands west of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad tracks. This has been acquired by the Lake Forest improvement trustees, a stock company, and the work is being supervised by a committee, consisting of A. A. Sprague, James O. Heyworth, Philip L. James, D. R. McLennan, and D. Mark Cummings.

Plans for the center were drawn by Howard Shaw and the work is being superintended directly by J. H. Bischof.

NINEVAH, PRIZE PEACOCK, GOES ON TEAR—DISGRACED.

Gets Bright Plumage Soiled When He Wanders from Lincoln Park and His Family Spurns Him.

Ninevah, the prize Lincoln park peacock, is in disgrace. He left the "old homestead" of the peacock flock in the park Friday and failed to return for the evening services as is required of all good peacocks. Instead he enjoyed himself to the fullest by scrambling among chimney pots in the neighborhood of the park and in being chased by small boys with sticks and stones. Yesterday morning he returned. He was dirty and his brilliant plumage was soiled and rumpled. The other peacocks scorned him. But he had had his spree.

must crush out the prejudice and foolish time-faded notions with which Unthinking Habit has paved the way to High Cost

Along these lines we have succeeded. Unwilling to accept the old theory of buying at $10.00 and selling at $25.00, unwilling to recognize as necessities the costly decorations, the extravagant window displays, the elaborate fixture expense, the back-breaking burden of high street-level rent, we cut loose from all that sort of habit-stuff and established the first—the second—and the rest of our One Price Square Deal Upstairs Clothing Stores—and now this Chain from Coast to Coast.

We Have Kept Pace With and Are in Advance Of the Progress of the World!

Our ideas are radically different from those practiced in street-level stores. We believe in a Square Deal, the SAME Square Deal to every customer. We believe you are entitled to your full money's worth. We don't believe you should be trapped by glittering brass, carved German silver, artistic cast bronze, and then be asked to pay for these same useless but costly traps. By casting to one side and stamping out of our system all the extravagant notions of bygone days which the still more extravagant clothier of today has known how to develop to his own best advantage, we offer you a Square Deal inexpensively outfitted Upstairs store, where you can have unrestricted choice from an Ocean of Clothing, showing thousands upon thousands of

ZEAL, NOT TALK, YIELDED STATE MORE ARTILLERY

What One Citizen Has Done to Help Reduce the Pitiable Shortage of Guns.

TEST NEW RADIO PLANT.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The wireless operator at the stockyards has often heard the continents whispering to each other. His network of antennae, stretched above the roof of the pavilion, has often caught from the air messages on their way from South America to Europe. But yesterday that commonplace miracle bored him. He had more important business on hand.

Every sixty minutes, on the exact hour, he was straining his ears to get the last word from a little portable wireless outfit which was being moved along the road from Chicago to Willow Springs. And each time he caught the impulse he snapped back a message of congratulation.

Given Field Test.

It was the first time any part of the equipment of Batteries D and E, Field artillery, I. N. G., had been in service, at least outside of the armory. Along with the wireless plant, a gift to the batteries from a friend, went the headquarters detail of some fifteen men and officers, the reel wagon, furnished by the war department, which carries three miles of telephone wire for field use, and some of the most daring scouts in the organization. From the city limits to Willow Springs they covered the country thoroughly, stringing their phone wires as they went, picking out the best location for their three inch guns, and keeping in constant touch with headquarters at the stockyards.

It was a little more than a year ago that the present Maj. Charles R. Vincent of the artillery battalion was badly bitten by the bug of military preparedness. Unlike the majority of patriots, he did not stop with talk. His study of the facts revealed that of all the weak spots in the military establishment of the United States the shortage in field artillery was the most alarming.

For One Mile of Front.

In the whole army, he discovered, there were only six regiments of field artillery, with a total of 144 guns, by no means enough to take proper care of a single mile of battle front. He thought of the hundreds of miles of battle trenches in Europe, and made up his mind that the improvement of artillery conditions was the most pressing need.

Along with the lack of guns goes, of course, an equal lack of trained artillery officers. Vincent decided to start a school for the training of such officers. It is significant that more than 100 young men, most of them college graduates, with a background of engineering or other technical education, were quickly interested. Without official recognition or equipment of any kind they drilled regularly for more than eight months. Their drill hall was the lobby of a downtown office building. Finally it became clear that they must have guns to work with and a regular military organization to hold the men together. But the state law provided for only three batteries. They were already organized. A new battery was out of the question. At least it would have been to most men.

Lobbies Bill Through.

Vincent went down to Springfield, where the legislature was in session, and lobbied through a bill authorizing the organization of not one, but three, new batteries of field artillery—batteries D, E, and F. The bill went through so late in the session that there was no chance to get any appropriation for housing the new troops. It sounds rather difficult to organize a battery of 130 men, with guns, wagons, horses, and a lot of other traps and not a sign of a roof to cover them. Not at all—provided you have energy and friends.

Battery D was mustered into the national guard last September with Vincent as captain. A month later there were so many recruits that Battery E was formed, with H. J. Reilly of THE TRIBUNE, a West Point graduate, at its head.

Meanwhile the tireless Vincent was out using pull, "drag," influence, eloquence, and all other possible levers with the idea of finding at least a temporary home for the two commands. Somehow and somewhere he got the money to rent an old Turkish bath establishment out near the stockyards and to remodel it for armory purposes. Through Arthur Leonard permission was secured to use the International pavilion at the yards as a drill hall.

Presently a third battery—Battery F—was organized among the students of the state university at Urbana. The three new batteries were formed into a battalion. Up on the north shore Battery C was organized, with a membership largely made up of young men who live in the suburbs between the city and Waukegan. With Battery B here in Chicago and Battery A down state, it forms another battalion. All that is lacking now is a regimental organization to put Illinois in the front rank of states for field artillery.

The war department at Washington has been generous to the new batteries. To each of them have been sent four three-inch field guns—corresponding closely to the famous French "75s"—a dozen caissons or ammunition wagons, a battery wagon, a wagon for stores, and three escort wagons. The government has also bought some fifty horses for the use of the batteries.

Details of Equipment.

Each private in the artillery is armed with an automatic revolver and carries a blanket roll, with half a shelter tent, a canteen, saddlebag, first aid kit, and extra clip case.

All the batteries in the state are ordered to go into camp for a couple of weeks in July at Sparta, Wis., where, billeted with the men of the regular army, they will have a chance to use their three inch guns for the first time at regular distances.

A first class crew can fire twenty shots a minute from one of these guns, and their effective range is from four to five miles.

It would be a tremendous advantage if, before encampment, all the batteries in the state could be consolidated into regimental formation under the command of a regular army officer.

"PUT OUT"

That's What Attractive Young Wife Says Her Husband Did to Her One Night Late at Their Home Four Miles from Town.

Mrs. Clifford Cherry

FOX RIVER BELLE ASKS DECREE OF RICH LONDONER

Young Mrs. Cherry Files Suit on Grounds of Misconduct, Cruelty, Drinking.

PUT OUT AT NIGHT, CHARGE.

Aurora, Ill., April 15.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ruth Myers Cherry, 20 years old, a young woman whose beauty and charm have won her note in the Fox river valley, today filed a suit for divorce at Yorkville, Ill., against her husband, Clifford Cherry, 34 years old, one of the biggest land owners in Kendall county.

Makes Three Charges.

Mrs. Cherry charges cruelty, excessive drinking, and misconduct. She asks the custody of their baby girl, 1 year old.

The couple were married three years ago. Cherry is a son of the late Charles Cherry, who was one of the prominent men in the legislature ten to fifteen years ago, and a manager of former Senator Albert Hopkins' campaign for his seat in the upper house.

Six Feet, Weighs 400.

Clifford Cherry ran for the legislature several years ago. He is an immense man, standing over six feet and weighing more than 400 pounds. Mrs. Cherry said today that she and her husband separated about two weeks ago.

"We lived together until he put me out at 10:30 o'clock at night," she said, "at our home, four miles from town, and I went to a neighbor's for refuge. I am now staying with my mother, Mrs. Ida W. Meyers of Oswego."

IF HIS NAME WERE JANUS THIS HEAD WOULD BE EASY.

We Could Say Something About a "Two Named Janus" or About the Symbol of Peace.

If a man has a name that offends him the law says he may change it if his reasons appear good to the court. But the law forgot friend wife, and so did Lawrence Janas, 1413 Cleaver street.

On March 24 Janas went to the Superior court, where he was sworn in as a naturalized American citizen.

As a little surprise for his wife and daughter he took home a new name, that of his maternal grandfather. It was Lawrence Wendrychofski.

The next day he appeared in the office of Merton A. Sturges with his wife and daughter.

"They won't stand for the new name," he said. "It is the first time in my married life that I have had trouble at home."

Yesterday Judge Sullivan gave Wendrychofski permission to become Janas once more.

SALOON LICENSE REVOKED.

Women Are Allowed to Frequent Back Room, Police Chief Says.

The saloon license of Sam and Harry Goldberg, 500 North Clark street, yesterday was revoked by Mayor Thompson. According to the police, Goldberg brothers allowed women to frequent the back room. The report of Capt. W. F. Russell, who was recently appointed captain and assigned to the Chicago avenue station, said Judge Uhlir characterized the Goldbergs as "unfit to operate a saloon." The license was previously revoked by former Mayor Harrison and restored "on condition they keep women entirely out of the place."

"THE FAIRIES' CHILD"

Austin School Children Present Fairy Queen Play.

Janice Beverly

Fifteen children from Austin, pupils of the Chicago College of Music and Expression, all under 9 years of age, presented a one act play called "The Fairies' Child" at the Ziegfeld theater yesterday morning. Teresa Hand played the rôle of the fairy queen and others who took leading parts were Janice Beverly, Elizabeth Smith, and Gene Tucker. The performance was under the direction of Miss Ethel Woodstock and Miss Marjorie Valentine.

DIVORCES C. P. GOODSON, FORMER CHICAGO PASTOR.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—[Special.]—Mrs. Bertha Chapman Goodson, daughter of the Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, evangelist and formerly pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian church, has been divorced from her husband, the Rev. Columbus Polk Goodson.

The decree was obtained in Lima, O., on Feb. 21, and only became known today. The grounds for the divorce were given as gross neglect. Two months before the divorce was given Mrs. Goodson returned to her father's home, Jamaica Estates, Jamaica, L. I.

Mr. Goodson and Bertha Irene Chapman were married at Warsaw, Ind., on June 2, 1908. He then was pastor of the Highland Park Presbyterian church, Chicago, and was about 30 years old. After the honeymoon they lived at Highland Park until 1911.

MINSTREL PRIMROSE WEDS.

Rochester, N. Y., April 15.—[Special.]—George Henry Primrose, the minstrel, was married this afternoon in this city to his secretary, Mrs. Viola Katherine Trueblood, of Jacksonville, Fla. Mrs. Trueblood is a widow, 31 years old. Primrose gave his age at 62. He lives in Oregon.

CITY CLUB HOLDS ELECTION.

The City Club of Chicago held its annual election yesterday. The officers for the ensuing year are: President, Frank I. Moulton; vice president, William Scott Bond; secretary, Roy C. Osgood; treasurer, Harold H. Rockwell; directors, Alfred L. Baker, George H. Mead, Edgar A. Bancroft, and Shelby M. Singleton.

WHO WROTE MIDWAY MOTTO? CHORUS OF PROFS.: "I DID."

Several Claim Authorship of "Let Knowledge Increase So That Life May Be Enriched."

Somebody wrote a line of Latin which came to be accepted as the motto of the University of Chicago. Converted into English, it runs like this:

"Let knowledge grow from more to more and so be human life enriched."

Who was it that wrote the motto? Really, they're in quite a stew about it out on the Midway.

Dr. Paul Shorey, professor of Greek, says he wrote it. There is a persistent rumor to the effect that Dr. William Gardner Hale, head of the Latin department, is the author, and Dr. Hale hasn't denied it. There is a report quoting Prof. G. J. Laing of the Latin faculty as saying a Storey-Hale collaboration produced the pithy sentence, but this Prof. Laing yesterday denied. And Thomas Wakefield Goodspeed, secretary of the board of trustees, who is writing a history of the university, says the truth must be discovered, if it requires the combined energies of Diogenes, Sherlock Holmes, and Capt. Nicholas Hunt.

Gotham Lawyer Arrested.

Henry W. Scott, a New York attorney, was given into the custody of Detective F. M. Cornwall of Washington, D. C., last night, to be taken back to the capital city, where he is accused of passing a worthless $50 check. Scott denied the charge and returned voluntarily to face the accusation.

COAL TO GO UP 50 CENTS A TON, DEALERS' ORDER

Announcement Made by Retailers, Who Blame War and Labor.

THE CONSUMERS ARE HIT.

Coal is going up.

Unsettled labor conditions, increases in the cost of explosives brought on by the large demand made by the European war, and an advance of 25 cents per ton in freight rates to Chicago, dealers say, will necessitate a raise in price of from 10 to 50 cents a ton to the consumer for both domestic and steam fuel.

Wage Advance Granted.

An announcement to this effect has been issued by N. H. Kendall, commissioner of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association. While the hard coal operators and the miners have agreed there will be suspension of operations until after negotiations over the wage scale have been completed, he says, winter prices will be continued.

"Operators in the smokeless districts have granted their men a flat 10 per cent increase," said Mr. Kendall. "Basic wage scales in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio have been fixed. Operators in those states declare their minimum advance due to the higher pay to the men and the rapid increases in the costs of materials will be at least 10 cents a ton. In other districts the minimum will have to be considerably greater.

Freight Rate Factor.

"Some of the supplies used in and about coal mines have advanced as much as 300 per cent during the last year.

"In addition the railroads have petitioned the interstate commerce commission and the Illinois public utilities commission for an advance of 5 cents a ton in the freight rate on Illinois and Indiana coals."

SHE FOUND HEADACHE CURE

And Then Mrs. Mary Powell of Evanston Married Him.

Mrs. Mary Powell of Evanston, whose headaches were a source of annoyance until she met Dr. Merritt Craven, an osteopath, has taken measures to dispel headaches hereafter. She was married to the doctor yesterday in Oak Park. The ceremony took place in the home of the Rev. Charles Craven, an uncle of the groom. Dr. Craven is a son of the late Rev. Thomas Craven, a distinguished Methodist divine and brother of Dr. Jane Craven, a Pittsburgh physician, who is now in France engaged in field hospital work.

NEW COUNTRY CLUB FORMED

Only Those Who Own Cottages at Paw Paw Lake Are Admitted.

Plans were completed yesterday at a banquet in the Hamilton club for the permanent organization of the Cottagers' Country club at Paw Paw Lake, Michigan. The club is to be an exclusive organization composed only of those who own summer cottages at the lake.

A building, which will be completed in June, has been bought for $25,000.

At the banquet yesterday the following were elected officers: Fred L. Meckel, president; Dexter B. Sweet, vice president, and Chester I. Monroe, secretary and treasurer.

STAGES TOWARD WAR IN REALM OF DIPLOMACY

Relations May Be Partly Severed, Then Wholly Severed, Without Hostilities.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Co.]

In view of the talk of a rupture of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States, the question naturally occurs to many readers as to what the severance of diplomatic relations really means and what are likely to be the effects of such action.

The first point is that the rupture of diplomatic relations does not necessarily mean war. But it cannot be denied that it greatly increases the possibility of the situation eventually developing into one of actual hostilities.

Showing Official Displeasure.

The United States has several means of manifesting its displeasure towards foreign powers. It may insist upon the recall of the ambassador or minister plenipotentiary of the offending nation, and may even hand him his passports in the event of any delay in compliance with its request, agreeing, however, to transact business with any chargé d'affaires appointed in his place. This is what has happened in the case of Austria-Hungary, and of her former ambassador here, Dr Constantine Dumba.

Or else the United States, in addition to giving walking papers to the envoy of the foreign power concerned, may withdraw its own ambassador accredited to the government in question, leaving some minor member of his staff to look after its interests. Still another alternative is the withdrawal of all diplomatic representatives, leaving the consuls, while the extreme measure is the severance, not only of all diplomatic, but also of all consular intercourse, the withdrawal of the respective missions, and the canceling of all the consular exequaturs. In this event both diplomatic and consular interests are confided to the care of the embassies or legations of some friendly neutral power.

An Historical Example.

Thus, following the execution at Queretaro in 1867 of Emperor Maximilian, who was an Austrian archduke, his elder brother, Emperor Francis Joseph, caused his government to abandon all diplomatic and consular intercourse with Mexico, and did not permit it to be resumed until more than thirty years afterwards. But that did not prevent Austrians and Hungarians from pursuing their vocations in Mexico, while in the same way Mexicans suffered no inconvenience while sojourning in the dominions of Francis Joseph, save that they were barred from all court entertainments and more or less boycotted by the great world at Vienna and Budapest.

Italy-Germany Situation.

But it is not necessary to go so far back in order to show that an entire rupture of diplomatic and consular relations between two countries does not necessarily mean war. We have before our eyes the case of Germany and Italy. When the government of Victor Emmanuel decided to throw in its lot with the powers of the entente and to declare war against Austria, the Italian ambassador at Berlin was handed his passports, Prince Buelow, the representative of the kaiser at Rome, was obliged to leave for Switzerland, while all the diplomatic and consular representatives of Germany and Italy were withdrawn from their posts in those two countries.

But, although relatively few people seem to be aware of the fact, no actual state of war as yet exists between Germany and Italy. This, too, in spite of the fact that Italy has pledged herself by treaty not to consent to peace, save in conjunction with France, Great Britain, Russia, Japan, and Portugal, thus arraying herself definitely on the side of the entente powers; while on the other hand, Germany is proclaiming far and wide her intention in the event of a victorious peace to insist upon a restoration to the papacy of its former temporal possessions, including the eternal city.

Ships Not Confiscated.

That Germany and Italy, in spite of the severance of all diplomatic and consular relations, are not actually at war, was shown again the other day when King Victor Emmanuel's government contented itself with merely requisitioning the large number of German ocean liners and merchant shipping in its ports for mercantile service under the Italian flag. This means that the vessels wil remain the property of their German owners, who at some future time will be indemnified for their having been thus commandeered. If the two countries had been at war with one another Italy would have been in a position to proceed to confiscation pure and simple.

U. S. Chance to Aid Navy.

According to this precedent, if the United States severs diplomatic and consular relations with Germany, it will be in a position to requisition all the German liners and merchant shipping that have sought refuge in American ports. This is a possibility which cannot but present certain attractions to the administration at Washington, since it would go far to relieve the present acute difficulties resulting from the terrible shortage of ocean transport. Of course, if war ensues between the two countries, it would be in the power of the United States to transform the act of requisition into one of complete confiscation.

The principal reason that has caused Emperor William to refrain from going to actual war with Italy is the fact that Germany still has vast commercial and industrial interests in King Victor Emmanuel's dominions.

On similar grounds Germany, while willing to risk the rupture of diplomatic and consular relations with the United States, may be relied upon to do everything possible to avert an actual declaration of war, which would enable the United States to sequestrate Teuton capital and property in this country, and that would relieve Americans of all their financial obligations to Germans. For the interests of Germany in America are enormous, far greater even than those which she has in Italy.

Lesson in Preparedness.

Unfortunately, the kaiser is thoroughly aware that President Wilson is just as reluctant to have recourse to war as he is himself. The campaign of preparedness for a number of months past in this country has shown him, even if he had not learned it already through other sources, that the United States is prevented by the "unprepared" condition of her army and of her navy, from embarking in actual hostilities with any foreign power of first class rank.

WEEKLY REVIEW of the WAR

by CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY

GENERAL.

The German secretary for foreign affairs and the Roumanian minister to Germany signed a convention between Germany and Roumania on April 7. This convention provides for the reëstablishment of the former commercial relations existing between these two countries. This marks the defeat of the attempt of the entente allies to prevent Germany from receiving supplies from Roumania, consequently it is another blow to the efficacy of the British blockade. A number of reports from London indicate that Great Britain is commencing to be affected by the German submarine blockade. Robert Patterson Houston, Unionist member of parliament from Liverpool, has issued an appeal to the nation, bringing out the seriousness of the situation due to the scarcity of shipping. He shows that approximately 3,000,000 tons of British deep sea shipping has been destroyed since the beginning of the war and that the submarines are largely responsible.

FRENCH FRONT.

The Germans have taken possession of the Bethincourt salient. They claim to have captured it. The French say it was evacuated. Whatever the case, the occupancy of it means a considerable German gain west of the Meuse. The German line now extends from Avocourt around Hill 304 to Cumieres. There has been heavy fighting along this line during which the Germans have made gains, some of which have later been taken back by the French by means of counter attacks. On the whole, the Germans have advanced. East of the Meuse there has been heavy fighting south of Douaumont village and in Callette wood, with some gains for both sides, but nothing of any particular importance. The last of the week a French counter attack on the German positions on Dead Man's hill broke down. On the rest of the French front there has been nothing of consequence.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

There has been nothing of consequence the last week along any part of the Russian front.

ITALIAN FRONT.

The Austro-Hungarians have continued the heavy fire of their artillery against the Italian positions. Last week the indications were that they were preparing a general offensive. This week there seem to be doubts of this.

THE BALKANS.

The position in the Balkans remains the same, with the exception that France and Great Britain have seized the harbor of Argostoli and state their intention to land elsewhere on the island of Cephalonia. This island is one of the Ionian group and belongs to Greece.

ARMENIA.

The Turks report having repulsed several Russian attacks the early part of the week. Later reports are to the effect that heavy fighting is taking place fifteen to twenty miles east of Trebizond, where the Turks have been repulsed in attacks made with the object of driving back the Russians.

MESOPOTAMIA.

After a general attack, which failed with considerable loss, the British relief force in a second attack finally succeeded in driving the Turks back, thus advancing somewhat on the road to Kut-el-Amara, where Gen. Townshend has now been besieged for 130 days.

SUMMARY.

The point of most importance remains Verdun, where the Germans are still continuing their attacks and still gaining ground, in spite of vigorous French counter attacks which occasionally recover some of the ground lost. The inactivity of the British, Russians and Italians still enables Germany to concentrate her efforts on Verdun.

Investigate Cause of Death.

The police and coroner are investigating the death of Thomas Karnes of 526 West Seventy-ninth street, a freight handler employed by the Erie railroad, who died yesterday morning. He was crushed by a truck loaded with freight when one of the packages fell on him.

SAYS LIFE ON SUBMARINE IS A CAUSE OF INSANITY.

MADRID, April 15.—"Submarine insanity," a strange form of dementia that attacks men long confined in crowded quarters, leads German U-boat crews to commit reckless attacks on passenger ships and neutral vessels, a Spanish specialist declared today.

Breathing the foul air inside the U-boat hulls, living on uncooked food, and pursued at all times by thoughts of disaster, the submarine crews grow mentally irresponsible for short periods, he held.

This theory was evoked by editorial comments on the death of the Spanish composer, Enrique Granados, and other Spaniards who were aboard the Sussex.

MUNITION SALES CHIEF FACTOR IN TRADE BALANCE

Sixty Per Cent of Increase in Year and Half of War Due to Class of Exports.

BY MARK S. WATSON.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Figures which have been made public by the department of commerce, by the isolation of industries whose prosperity is due entirely to the war, show that of the great improvement in the trade balance of the United States during the European war no less than 60 per cent has come from munitions. Munitions is used in its broad sense, meaning all which goes to the aid of the armies.

The figures cover the first complete year and a half of war, from Aug. 1, 1914, to Feb. 1, 1916. In that period American imports were reduced from $2,664,756,602 to $2,611,641,440. Exports, however, leaped from $3,545,100,349 to $4,797,266,560. The eighteen months used for comparison are corresponding months before the war.

In the days of peace the trade balance was $880,343,747 in favor of the United States. In the year and a half of war the trade balance reached the unprecedented total of $2,185,625,120. This is an improvement in the balance of $1,305,281,373.

Peaceful Industries Are Helped.

Of course great fortunes have gone to industries which prevail in time of peace, but even these industries have enjoyed an unparalleled prosperity, however fleeting it may prove, as a result of the war. The commerce department's figures furnish the best possible information on what the war has done for American pocketbooks. They contain the figures of seventeen industries whose product for the most part has gone direct to the battlefield. The increase amounts to $738,783,649, an increase of 567 per cent.

The largest single item of the seventeen is explosives. The normal business was $9,235,000. The war raised it to $221,854,000. Related to this is the item of brass manufactures, which include shells, the increase being from $11,300,000 to $64,550,000. Shoes and saddles have been going abroad at the rate of $31,640,000 for this period. The rate was nearly trebled.

Sales of Firearms Trebled.

The sale of firearms was more than trebled. Normally 10,600 horses and 2,500 mules have been shipped abroad in the first seven months of a fiscal year. In the first seven months of the present fiscal year American stockmen sent 254,993 horses and 69,460 mules to Europe. The total for eighteen months is 544,333 horses and 135,248 mules.

The aeroplane industry in the United States was insignificant at the outbreak of the war. The total exports of aeroplanes and parts for a year and a half of peace were $290,703. The war has created an industry which has already exported $6,097,747, an dis exporting more and more heavily each month.

Much Barbed Wire Exported.

There had long been a good business in wire, but the need of wire for entanglements has raised exports from $15,295,000 to $41,786,000.

The packers have profited greatly. Even the dairying industry has profited, notably in the sale of cheeses, which has multiplied sixteen times. Following are the figures:

	July 1, '14, to Jan. 31, '16.	Latest corresponding year and a half of peace.
Brass	$ 64,550,472	$ 11,290,198
Horses	115,096,939	4,809,000
Mules	26,817,711	1,055,949
Aeroplanes	3,061,694	238,449
Aero parts	3,030,053	52,254
Auto trucks	71,593,636	1,789,472
Explosives	221,854,507	9,285,488
Firearms	17,069,582	5,338,354
Horseshoes	3,543,505	152,707
Wire	41,786,440	15,295,732
Shoes, saddles	92,911,619	31,640,420
Canned beef	15,916,161	713,007
Fresh beef	38,208,177	1,182,589
Bacon	89,097,760	41,289,808
Wool apparel	21,583,968	3,368,072
Wool blankets	32,154,669	2,202,821
Cheese	10,791,085	628,030
Totals	$869,069,987	$130,286,838

Many other industries have, of course, profited, indirectly and directly.

MARYE, FORMER U. S. ENVOY TO PETROGRAD, BACK HOME.

Wife Says American Hospital at Czar's Capital Is Doing Splendid Work.

New York, April 15.—Former American Ambassador to Petrograd George Thomas Marye of San Francisco arrived here today with Mrs. Marye from the Russian capital on the Norwegian-American line steamship Kristianiafjord. Marye refused to comment on the European situation. Just before leaving his post he was decorated with the Order Alexandria Nevsky by the czar.

Mrs. Marye said the American hospital in Petrograd is doing splendid work and is always crowded, even when there are empty beds in the others.

"The czarina sends a message of gratitude to America for the relief work done for Russia," said Mrs. Marye. "I had an audience with her a few days before I left."

Except for the omission of evening dress, Mrs. Marye said, the Russian capital is as gay as ever.

Masons to Give Banquet.

Brotherhood lodge No. 986, A. F. and A. M., will give, on May 9, a banquet to LeRoy A. Goddard, president of Chicago State bank, past grand master of Masons and past grand high priest of Royal Arch Masons. This promises to be the largest Masonic banquet ever given in the state.

SLAM! MERRIAM AND BUCK BARRED BY LEGISLATORS

Joint Committee on Rebate Bill Shuts Door Against Aldermen.

Senate bill No. 41—a bill now pending in the state legislature, and which, if passed, will do away with special assessment rebates—was the subject of conference between a joint committee of the state senate and house and Senator Edward J. Glackin, secretary of the board of local improvements, in the latter's office yesterday.

Ald. Charles E. Merriam and Ald. Robert M. Buck, who opposed the approval of the bill by the council several weeks ago, attempted to gain entrance to the conference and were refused. Then they charged that Glackin was attempting to "bottle" the joint committee and that its procedure was "biased and unfair."

Provisions of the Bill.

"The bill provides," said Ald. Buck, "that there shall be no more special assessment rebates. At present 5 per cent. which is added to the cost of a local improvement, goes for interest on unpaid installments and general deficiency and the remainder is rebated. In the future, should the bill pass, the remainder of the 5 per cent, instead of being rebated, is to go toward payment of the overhead charges of the board of local improvements.

"Ald. Michaelson in discussing the bill on the council floor said that the board would thus be able to hire more men. He showed by that the board wants the money for more jobs. The bill is a very nifty scheme to get a wad of money which will amount to about $500,000 a year, for new jobs."

Big Saving, Says Glackin.

"Ald Buck and Merriam are simply trying to complicate matters," said Mr. Glackin when he heard of their charges. "The committee is here to investigate the books of the board of local improvements, the controller's office, and the treasurer's office.

"The bill will save Chicago from $500,000 to $600,000 a year. It will eliminate forty bookkeepers now employed by the board, the controller, and the treasurer."

WARREN'S MAYOR ON LIQUID DIET

Mrs. Canfield Admits Her Dentist Has Just Pulled Last One.

STAY NEARLY OVER.

The mayoress of Warren, Ill., wandered into a Wabash avenue cafeteria yesterday.

"A little pork?" queried an obliging waitress.

"I'm eating no solids," replied the small and sprightly Mrs. Angela Canfield, aged 74, in an equally small voice.

And it is true. The mayoress of Warren is eating only liquids. Because they're all gone. The last molar and the last incisors have disappeared. They departed this week in a Chicago dental office. And the mayoress is perturbed. The fact that she can't get the aldermen over whom she presides to agree to ring the curfew each night has sunk into comparative unimportance with this other loss. And it's an inconvenience and a perturbation, this becoming accustomed to a very orderly row of white ones.

"One can save everything but her teeth," said Mrs. Canfield, with a little bit of regret in her voice.

Save Everything but Teeth.

And then she explained how nature had cured her of a small goiter, which she contracted or caught or something just a few weeks after her election.

For, besides saving the girls of Warren—and the boys, for that matter—the small mayoress has been occupied quite a bit with saving herself, at one time being obliged to carry a revolver for enemies other than bacteriological.

Mrs. Canfield has put an end to public dancing. There is no more spitting on the sidewalks of Warren. And thus has the feminine executive routed destruction in its many forms. And it is making her little city the most humane in the country, she hopes.

Put Him Away Decent.

As typical of the humanity that Warren will extend in case one may need it, Mrs. Canfield, who makes it a business to attend all the inquests that are held, recites the case of an unknown man who some weeks ago died in the city jail.

"We gave him a nice, respectable burial," she said. "It must have cost about $50. The coroner shaved him and embalmed him and kept him for a week—and only got $15 for it all. And—that man was buried in Baptist pants, a Methodist coat, a Catholic shirt, and a very strict Methodist necktie and collar."

RANCHER TELLS HOW VILLA AID WAS EXECUTED

Don Juan Entertains Pershing Camp with Story of Death of Rodriguez at His Hands.

BY FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]

Rancho San Geronimo, with Gen. Pershing, April 4, via motor truck to Columbus, N. M., April 15.—[Special.]—The Don Juan Alderate, the administrator for the American owned ranch at San José de Babicora, pulled up his horse this morning in front of the campfire of Gen. Pershing here in the Santa Maria valley and the heart of Villa land.

Don Juan rode a prancing roan. He sat on a Chihuahua saddle to which was attached his rifle, his vari-hued blankets, and a horsehair lariat which he had placed around the neck of the animal he handed to the peon who had been riding respectfully behind him.

"Buenos dias mi general," he said as he touched the floppy brim of his straw sombrero and introduced himself. With the invariable habit of an old horseman he hitched up his trousers, tightened the colored woolen band that girded his waist and shifted the weight of the two heavy leather cartridge belts.

Offers Services of Peons.

"I come, my general, to offer any assistance I can to you in your hunt for the bandit, Villa," said Don Juan. "The peons on the ranch of which I have charge have been trained to be soldiers by me and they are good ones, my general. We have successfully defended our ranch from the bandits more than once.

"Maybe the general has not heard the true story of the capture of Villa's right hand, the Gen. José Maria Rodriguez, he who murdered the eighteen Americans at Santa Ysabel not two months back and the same whose body was exhibited in Juarez?"

"We would be pleased to hear the story, Don Juan," Gen. Pershing replied, as he was joined by Maj. John A. Ryan, chief intelligence officer of the expeditionary forces. "The accounts that reached the border were brief and garbled."

Story of Rodriguez's Death.

"Then here is the chance for the correspondent," said the Mexican patroon, smiling at me, "to give the real story to the American people, for I am the man who captured and executed that bandit, and for what it has meant to the peace of Mexico I feel that I can be justly proud.

"You remember that after Villa's retreat from Agua Prieta, on the border of your country, at the time of the new year he sent Rodriguez through our country, and it was he who burned and destroyed the fifteen large railroad bridges between Telejocachic and Madera.

"It was on Jan. 26 that his men, some thousand or more, reached the vicinity of my ranch. Rodriguez sent in a messenger to me. He said that he was no longer fighting the Carrancistas and that he would be friends with all Mexicans.

Comes to Ranch House.

"He said that he would come into the ranch that night and ordered that I have women and music and a big dinner ready for a grand ball in the ranch house. He came in with eight men and as soon as he dismounted I leveled my revolver at him and told him that he was my prisoner.

"He tried to argue out of it, but we locked him in a room under guard and made ready to notify the Carrancista authorities at Juarez. Among the eight men, whom we also made prisoners, was one who called himself Gen. Almejeda.

"On the next day this man told me that his wife, living fifteen miles away, was dying and that he would leave his two brothers with me as hostages for his safe return if I would but permit him to go and see her before she died.

Pays Penalty of Treachery.

"My general, I have been a soldier and was affected by the appeal. I released that man upon his promise to return. He did early the next morning, but he brought with him sixty men and they attacked the ranch for the purpose of rescuing Rodriguez. But we repulsed them and sent them flying away in the night, leaving their wounded behind. As I rode out in the morning to look over the dead there was a report, and a bullet whizzed close to my head. It came from two wounded men lying behind a rock. With two other men we crept upon them and I fired at the first opportunity.

"'Fool' shouted the man behind the rock. 'Don't shoot me. I am the Gen. Almejeda.' 'You are not a general,' I shouted back. 'You are a dog and I snoot you as one.' And I did. I shot him through the head and brought his body back to the ranch to show Rodriguez the fate of such liars.

Ruffians All Cowards.

"Then I received the message from Juarez that it was not safe to hold Rodriguez as a prisoner. There was only one safe way to keep him. I was told to execute him. I received the message with joy. I knew that Villa and his bands were in the hills near by and I might expect an attack at any time, and the possible delivery of my prisoner.

"I told Rodriguez, and he who has posed as a brave man through all these raids with Villa—he shivered and shook like a girl. Señor, these ruffians are all cowards. They are only brave when they have superior numbers.

"In the early morning I marched him out to the edge of the ranch yard. All the way he begged and pleaded for his life, making all manner of promises if I would only save him. I told him that he had showed no mercy when he murdered the Americanos at Santa Ysabel.

His Last Words.

"I told my men to fire when they saw me wink. Rodriguez stood there (drawing a cross mark in the sand with his finger) and stood here about five feet away and the firing squad stood back ten feet. Rodriguez was facing me and begging all the time for his life.

"'Spare me, Don Juan,' he said, 'and I will give you gold that I have in the mountains. I will leave Mexico. I will kill no more Mexicans. I will kill no more Americanos.'

"'At last you speak the truth, Rodriguez,' I said. 'You never more will kill either Mexicans or Americans,' and so saying, I winked. The rifles blazed out and Villa's right hand man dropped limp to the ground.

Souvenirs of the Bandit.

"You see these leather leggins and these hand carved silver spurs, my generals. They are the same I removed from Rodriguez, and I kept them because I need them. The large diamond on his hand I sent to the jefe in Juarez, and the old revolver which we found hidden under his arm I sent to the governor of Chihuahua. Then we shipepd his body to Juarez."

After the recital of the grewsome tale Don Juan said that he had long awaited the opportunity to tell some Americans how the victims of the Santa Ysabel massacre had been avenged. He received the thanks of Gen. Pershing and rode away on his roan colored horse with promises of providing the American forces information which will lead them to the wounded Villa's lair.

GETS CLASS HONOR

University of Chicago Senior Elected Historian, Active in School's Social Life.

Honors were evenly divided in the class day elections of the seniors at the University of Chicago. Miss Ruth Manierre, 5719 Kimbark avenue, is historian; Miss Regis Lavery, donor; James Tufts, class poet, and Lawrence Salisbury. Unusually elaborate plans are under way because of the quarter centennial which the university will celebrate in June. Miss Manierre is a university aid and is prominent in the social life of the school.

COWBOYS' BID TO MAYOR.

Thompson Asked to Attend Celebration at Las Vegas, N. M., on July 4 to 7.

Mayor Thompson yesterday was invited to spend July 5 with cowboy friends in Las Vegas, N. M., where from July 4 to 7 inclusive the "Cowboys' Reunion association of New Mexico" will hold its annual reunion.

July 5, the day on which the mayor's presence is requested, has been set aside as "Thompson day."

"We have in Las Vegas every year what we call the cowboys' reunion, or in other words a wild western frontier celebration," read a sentence of the invitation to the mayor.

HE SEES FISH, AND NOT SNAKES, PARTNER AVERS

Petition Also Says Merchant Paints 'Em After Tippling a Bit.

Miss Kathryn M. Carey, secretary and treasurer of the Goodsell Packing company, 31 West Lake street, in a bill for accounting filed yesterday through Attorney Hugh O'Neill against the company's president, Byron Woodward Goodsell, asserts that when Mr. Goodsell's mellow mind becomes blurred from his gurgitation of mellow drink he beholds not snakes but fish.

And he paints 'em.

Mr. Goodsell is 75 years old. Miss Carey's bill asserts that he bought machinery packing at an auction sale and resold it to customers of the company who desired the company's goods, pocketing the profits himself. Her bill adds:

"On one occasion while receiving his salary and traveling expenses, he went to Houghton, Mich., and Duluth, Minn., and there rented rooms and made a display of pictures of fish, which pictures were painted by himself, he being now about 75 years old and having become an artist in oil and canvas while under the softening influence of alcohol.

Cost $150, Sold for $4.70.

"At the time of the Eastland disaster his fertile brain conceived the idea that an identification tag could be made which would not only be a thing of beauty, but a source of great wealth to him, and he took from the funds of the company more than $150 in the exploitation of the identification tag, and he sent out thousands of letters and circulars and order blanks to prominent individuals and institutions, and the company received in return the munificent sum of $4.70.

"He indulges in writing what he calls poetry and other effusions, and has these productions printed by the thousand, and while in a maudlin condition places this poetical output in the boxes of packing sent out by the company, and the company received letters from its customers, stating that instead of indulging in writing what he called poetry, it would be better if he would attend to business."

Some of His Poetry.

Miss Carey was found in the company's office. The walls were bedecked with piscatorial skeletons and paintings of fish.

"He's out of town now," said Miss Carey. "Here's some of his poetry."

From a cabinet she pulled forth large packages of leaflets. One was opened at random. It read:

MY NATIVE HEATH.

Dear old Hornby, Steuben county,
Rough and hilly at its best;
Homes and wooded hills surroundings,
Tempting those who know not rest.

SHE OBJECTS TO PRAYERS BEING FORCED UPON HER.

Woman Also Thinks She Should Be Allowed to Attend Nickel Show, Though a Government Witness.

Two months ago a nervous, bedraggled little woman told Hinton G. Clabaugh the story of how she had been shipped about the country and forced to pay with her honor a debt which her husband owed to her persecutor.

The man whom she accused, Joseph Andriacni, a boarder at her home in Mineral Point, Wis., was arrested and is now awaiting trial under the Mann act. The woman, Josephine D'Amico, has been released on her own bond after several weeks in an institution.

"One night," she said of experience in the institution, "they made me get down on my knees with them to pray, and when I told them I didn't have a prayer book they said I didn't need any, just to pray whenever the spirit moved me. Because I couldn't they said I was still bad.

"Then one day when I went to a nickel show they told me, 'ou can't live for God and the nickel shows, too.'

"I've been keeping Lent, I'm going to confession tonight, and I don't believe I'm bad. I have work, have made up with my husband, and I'm paying for the support of my little boy until this thing is over, while he is keeping the other child."

DEATH NOTICES.

IN MEMORIAM.

MOLDENHAUER—Lina Ganschow Moldenhauer. In loving memory of my dear beloved daughter, who passed away one year ago, April 16, 1915. Gone but never to be forgotten.

OBITUARY.

MRS. LYMAN E. COOLEY DIES.

Mrs. Lyman E. Cooley, wife of the well known civil engineer, died yesterday in the Evanston hospital. She had been ill at times for the last three years and underwent a major operation last September and recently a minor operation which proved to be ineffective.

Lusena McMillan Cooley was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., in 1852 and was married to Lyman E. Cooley, then a professor in Northwestern university, in 1874. She has lived in Evanston the larger part of her life. For the last ten years Mrs. Cooley has given particular attention to jail and prison work. She was president of the Evanston chapter of the Women's Christian Temperance union in 1911 and 1912 and was a trustee of the Frances E. Willard Temperance hospital from 1912 and to her death.

The husband and a son, Charles Albert Cooley of Toledo, and a daughter, Mrs. Warren E. Gill of Milwaukee, survive.

THE RT. REV. WILLIAM GEORGE PEEL, bishop of Mombasa, Africa, since 1899, is dead. He was one of the principals in a famous heresy controversy several years ago.

Victim of Car Dies.

A man supposed to have been either W. F. Schultz or of the surname Henderson, living at 1806 or 806 West Chicago avenue, died yesterday. He was struck by a Halsted street car at Polk street April 12.

MARSHALL FIELD & COMPANY
Discard all other Gasoline Trucks in Favor of PACKARDS
There is no better delivery service in the world than that offered by Marshall Field & Company. They have operated motor trucks for sixteen years, buying practically every type of gasoline truck worthy of a test. Now, they have standardized Packards, discarding all other gasoline machines. They have 55 Packard trucks in service, 21 of which have been working for six years, and four for seven years.
Every Packard ever purchased by this company—including the "daddy of them all," No. 802, bought in 1908—is still in their service. The merchant having use for only one or two motor trucks should not risk his money buying doubtful machines. He can protect his cash drawer by following the example of the experienced users who standardize Packards.
There are seven sizes of Packard Chainless Trucks—1 to 6½ tons—with frame lengths and body designs to meet every demand. Our transportation experts have information of value to you.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

THE NATIONAL GUARD AND NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Until the nation adopts universal military training the proper maintenance and improvement of the national guard is, in THE TRIBUNE'S opinion, a necessary factor of our system of national defense.

It is necessary on two grounds. So long as we cling to the voluntary system, which at the best cannot fulfill either peace or war conditions, it is imperative that we should make use of every resource it offers, every agency it permits for the training of men. The chief of these is the national guard. We no more can afford to neglect the guard because of its defects than we can afford to junk second line battleships. We need the guard, and we need it badly.

Besides its military value, the guard must be maintained because of its moral influence, which is very much greater than is realized. The guard and the naval militia are the only existing examples in our country of voluntary citizen service for defense. They have been and are visible lessons in patriotism and self-sacrifice during years in which the American people have grown soft, selfish, and forgetful. The guard has worked and sweated while the shirker and the cheap cynic sneered. The guard has done what it could under its impossible conditions against open opposition, covert discouragement, and neglect.

All this is appreciated by every one who has given intelligent consideration to our defense conditions. It is appreciated by Senator Chamberlain and all the real leaders of defense legislation in congress. We do not believe any of them would permit the guard and the men who have worked so long and so hard to make it as good as it is to be elbowed out by men or organizations that are now springing up under the influence of the recent defense propaganda. The summer camps are worthy of support because, as we have said, they represent a patriotic impulse and because until we adopt universal service we must avail ourselves of every resource. But neither they nor any other new organization should be allowed to take precedence over the guard and the guardsmen, except as limitations of the guard's legal status and organization may necessitate.

But these limitations must not be evaded. We have had too much shirking of unpleasant facts. If we are to have real defense we must deal with conditions as they are, not as we wish they were.

The nation must have a national defense. It must have a federal army organization and control. Wars are not fought piecemeal. Defense even from invasion must be instant and completely unified. We cannot afford to wait until war begins to bring an army into being. That we have tried repeatedly at our cost and will try again under modern conditions at our deadly peril. We cannot afford to rely upon the guard as a national weapon and find it at the moment of greatest need available only in part. What the guard is to be in war it must be in peace. The election to be a national army must not be left until the breaking out of war, for that means shrinkage and disorganization. Every guardsman must be ready in war or he must not be counted in peace.

This problem is now being considered in congress. It should be really solved, not shirked. The constitutional objections are grave. The weightier opinion is against the guard as now enlisted. No chances should be taken on this point. Several devices have been offered.

The project for the control of national guard affairs by a division of the general staff, composed entirely of national guard officers, responsible directly to the civilian secretary of war and not to the chief of staff, is vicious in the extreme. It represents the exact opposite to the right development of the guard toward federalization and efficiency. Not only should such a change be refused but careful consideration should be given to increasing the professional control over the guard and the professional representation in the guard. The guard must be integrated as a national force, with tactical organizations on national—not state—lines, with the higher commands in the hands of professional soldiers of the highest training and the greatest available experience.

Short of universal military service we cannot hope to have a well organized, well articulated national army. This is one of the fatal defects of a voluntary system, especially when complicated with our state system. But though we cannot yet have real unity we must strive to approximate it as nearly as possible and not permit false local susceptibilities or personal interests to obstruct.

The guard, furthermore, must be brought up to proper strength. At present it has a paper strength of 129,000, which does not express its real strength, as measured by even militia standards of drill, marksmanship, and efficiency. Standards must be kept up more strictly—inefficient men and organizations unflinchingly weeded out, officers' tests made stricter.

In short, it is imperative that we get down to bedrock, stop shirking realities, and know exactly at all times what our military resources are—not in terms of Fourth of July oratory or in the delusive figures of paper records but in the cold terms of military necessity.

Our present system and the conditions it has created are a dangerous delusion. We shall not have adequate military defense until we have universal training. But until we come to that we must do our utmost with a defective principle, and the beginning of our effort must be to face all the truth.

MORBID CENSORSHIP.

Censorship of any kind seems to have a core of incurable stupidity which neither reason nor ridicule can dissolve. But moving picture cutouts illustrate a degree of unreason which will stagger any mind that attempts to account for them.

The hero of a romance of "The Prisoner of Zenda" type is seen departing for a ride with the princess. The next scene shows him lying on the ground apparently hurt. How did he get there and why? Ask not the playwright but the censor. The villain ambushed the pleasure party and wounded the hero. But acts of violence are anathema to the censor, and the scenes necessary to make the sequence understood were cut out.

In another play the villain is corrupting the hero by inducing the drug habit. In one scene he is shown taking out his hypodermic case, preparing the needle, while the hero with bared forearm waits for the injection. The next scene shows the hero turning down his sleeve and the villain putting away his case.

In this case the sequence is hardly broken and is easily followed. But why cut out the act of puncture?

As a matter of fact, neither cutout has any basis in common sense or normal psychology. They are based, it seems to us, on morbid supersensitiveness, a semi-fanatic moral squeamishness which ought not to be allowed to interfere with the healthy amusements of healthy people. The assumption of this sort of censorship seems to be that the whole moving picture art of the country should be edited for the benefit of mental and moral defectives. If we are a race of morons, let us by all means be censored. But if morons are exceptional and the rest of us are not victims of criminal suggestibility, pathologically susceptible to examples of vice and violence, let us have our censorship censored by common sense.

INEVITABLE.

According to the Mexican subsecretary of foreign affairs, Señor Juan Amador, the American soldiers who entered Parral "were forced into Parral because they could get nothing to eat in the surrounding country and were so far from the border that it was impossible to send them provisions without giving this expedition the appearance of being something more than its name suggests."

Starving American soldiers, unarmed and seeking food, enter a Mexican town. One at least is assassinated. The rest are set upon and driven out of the town by a mob and a pitched battle is fought in which many are killed and wounded on both sides.

Why are American soldiers in Mexico?

To fulfill an international right and duty.

Why are American soldiers in Mexico starving?

Because the American government has not taken the necessary measures to supply their wants.

Why are American soldiers "so far from the border that it was impossible to send them provisions without giving the expedition the appearance of being something more than its name suggests?"

Because the de facto government of Mexico, which has refused proper facilities for supplying our expedition, is unable or unwilling to perform its duty of intercepting Villa or turning him back and has thus compelled our troops to prolong the pursuit. Because the de jure government of the United States spent so many days negotiating with the de facto government of Mexico for permission to perform an international right and duty that Villa in the absence of effective action by Mexican troops was able to get a week's start of our forces.

The Parral incident, with its foliage of diplomatic discussion surrounding it, is the fine flower of the Wilson-Bryan policy in Mexico. It is the logical and inevitable result of three years of vacillation and blundering. By interminable talk, by going in and coming out, by refusing protection to our own people, by refusing to make preparation for the responsibilities we cannot escape, we have brought about the present crisis, as we brought about each crisis that preceded it. We have earned Mexico's hatred and its contempt. We deserve both.

We have had blind and blundering statecraft before in our history, but the Wilson-Bryan policy in Mexico falls below the worst. No sophistry, no tall talk, no fallacious altruism can conceal its naked folly. The inexorable logic of events is stripping it bare.

DEFENSE BY MACHINE.

Now that the contents of the pork barrel has been divided amongst the hungry, congress is looking about for some means of economy. There is talk in the senate of retrenching on the army to spend on the navy. The navy, the argument goes, will prevent an enemy from landing on our shores, and it is the more important.

Congress clearly has never thought about national defense in terms of national defense. The idea that a great navy can save us without the use of an army may be true, but it would have to be a gigantic navy.

Lack of an army on shore to meet any expeditions which may arrive instantly demobilizes a navy or leaves the coasts unprotected. A navy is an effective battle unit only when it is free to scour the seas far from the coast and free from the necessity of protecting the coast. It is not effective in any sense as a coast patrol.

The best possible auxiliary to a navy is a sufficient army, capable of being mobilized at any point where a landing is attempted. It will be found bad economy to develop a navy at the expense of an army.

The desire to do so is, nevertheless, characteristic of Americans. A lot of steel machines, manned by a lot of hired professional sailors, appeals to us because it is a cash, not a blood, transaction. If there is any blood in it, it is not our blood.

Editorial of the Day.

PREPAREDNESS TALK—NO RESULTS.

[Chicago Daily News.]

Talk of preparedness for national defense has been abundant in this country during the last year. It took several months of terrible warfare in Europe to bring home to Americans the truth that they are exposed to grave danger; that an attack from an aggressive and well trained and equipped foreign foe would find them without adequate means of defense. After a time, however, President Wilson realized the danger, and, breaking with his pacifist secretary of state, advocated a program of preparedness for the nation. Other leaders have strongly urged a broader program of national defense measures than the president has favored thus far.

Congress has dawdled. No results in legislation are as yet forthcoming. Recent developments show the wisdom of the preparedness advocates. American troops are in a critical situation in Mexico, though only called upon as yet to cope with scattered bands of enemies. Reserve forces that may be sent to their aid are few. Nothing has been done to prepare any great number of soldiers to increase the available forces. Now that the Mexican situation has become acute, the administration is facing a crisis with Germany because of the submarine controversy.

Though the condition of affairs in Europe may make it possible for the United States to issue ultimatums with impunity for the time being, this nation has to make the humiliating confession that in other circumstances any hostile action it might be forced to take probably would be attended by disastrous consequences to it. If a foreign foe should undertake to injure us, with our available troops in Mexico or concentrated on the Mexican border and necessarily engaged there in protecting our interests, what a disgraceful spectacle this potentially powerful nation would present!

The warning that Americans are now receiving is too plain to be ignored or misinterpreted. Yet the curse of posturing for political purposes even now rests heavily upon the American congress and can be lifted only by the clear, imperative voice of the American people.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]

THE name of the Comte Louis des Perrrières among the officers of the French army who have recently fallen in battle serves to recall the origin of his family. He was descended in a direct line from a girl named Marie Poissonnier, who had been wet nurse of Louis XV.

Marie Poissonnier had been driven from her home by her parents for having made the mistake of becoming a mother without going through the ceremony of marriage, and was administering nourishment to her robust infant in the garden of Versailles when she attracted the attention of one of the royal physicians who was passing and who was terribly worried over the sudden sickness that had overtaken the nurse of the infant heir presumptive.

In fact, the royal child was in a critical condition for lack of proper nourishment and was at death's door.

The physician carried Marie Poissonnier and her baby off with him to the palace and without more ado established her as wet nurse to the tiny Louis, who soon recovered and developed, thanks to her, into a strong and healthy child.

Louis remained deeply attached to his nurse throughout her life, also according much affection to his foster brother—that is to say, to her son. When he grew up and assumed the reins of government he bestowed upon her the château and estate of Perrières, along with the title of Comtesse des Perrières, transmissible to her son. It is the lineal descendant of this son who has just fallen in battle at the front in France.

Another noble family which is descended from the nurse of a French ruler is that of the Barons de Saverias. They are descended from that extraordinary old woman, a Corsican peasant, who had been the wet nurse of the first Emperor Napoleon. As in the instance of Louis XV., the emperor remained deeply attached to his old nurse throughout his life. He used to call her "Mammuccia Caterina," and showered money and presents on her, also bestowing upon her the title of baroness, transmissible to that one of her sons who had been his foster brother.

Mammuccia Caterina Saverias nearly died of grief when she heard of the downfall of her "garçon," as she was wont to call the emperor, and she had nothing but curses for the selfish and indolent Empress Louise, who never thought of going to comfort her husband in his exile, either on the island of Elba or at St. Helena.

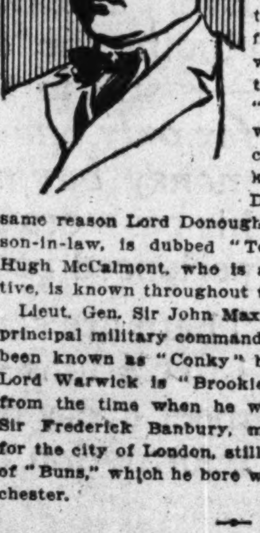
Caterina survived until April 15, 1821, and passed away at Marseilles, just as she was about to embark for St. Helena to join, tend, and care for her former nurseling in his captivity, in spite of all the efforts made to restrain her. He himself died only a fortnight later—that is to say, before she could have reached the island had she survived to make the voyage.

Mention the other day of the fact that Henry Chaplin, who has just received a peerage from George V., was dubbed "the Emperor" by his college chum and old time friend, King Edward VII., serves to call attention to the rôle which nicknames play in English society, where almost everybody is known thereby.

Most of these nicknames hail from school or college days, as in the instance of Lord Gladstone, who is still known to his friends as "Tuppence," a sobriquet which he bore at Eton. It dates from the time when his father as premier or chancellor of the exchequer, I forget which, excited popular indignation by adding twopence on to the income tax.

The Duke of Portland, because of his embonpoint when in the guards, is still known as "Jumbo"; Lord Heneage as "Smike"; the Hon. Harry Stonor, one of the king's gentlemen in waiting, as "Apollo"; Lord Cowley as "Toby"; Lord Valentia, by reason of his formerly intensely black hair and dark Spanish complexion, as "Snowball"; Arthur Balfour as "Fanny"; Burdett-Coutts as "the baron" because of his marrying the late Baroness Burdett-Coutts; the Duke of Marlborough as "Sonny"; the Duke of Newcastle as "Linnie," the short for Lincoln, and serving to recall the fact that during his father's lifetime he bore the courtesy title of Earl of Lincoln.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the Duke of Manchester takes his nickname of "Kim" from his country seat, Kimbolton Castle, now leased to his uncle, Lord Charles Montagu. Mrs. Asquith, wife of the prime minister, is "Jack" to her intimates, while Queen Maud of Norway has always been "Harry" to the members of her family. Lord Alington, who is portly, responds to the nickname of "Trotters," although when in the house of commons he used to be known as "Humpty-Dumpty." For much the same reason Lord Donoughmore, Michael Grace's son-in-law, is dubbed "Toddles," and Gen. Sir Hugh McCalmont, who is also far from diminutive, is known throughout the service as "Baby."



Lieut. Gen. Sir John Maxwell, until recently in principal military command in Egypt, has always been known as "Conky" by reason of his nose. Lord Warwick is "Brookie," a sobriquet dating from the time when he was still Lord Brooke. Sir Frederick Banbury, member of parliament for the city of London, still retains the nickname of "Buns," which he bore when at school at Winchester.

The Marquis of Cholmondeley passes as "the Rock," an abbreviation, of course, of his minor title of Lord Rocksavage, which he bore during the lifetime of his father; while the diminutive and particularly epick and span Earl of Buchan is briefly designated as "P. A.," the initials standing for "Pocket Adonis."

The list of these nicknames might be continued indefinitely. They are, however, nothing new, and have always been customary in English society ever since Charles II. used, for some reason or other, to be known as "Old Rowley," at which he figures in many contemporary verses. The great Lady Holland of Holland house celebrity, who was of dark complexion, went by the nickname of "Madagascar."

INSANITARY COUNTRY LIFE.

WHITE county, located in southeastern Illinois, contains about 500 square miles of good farming land. In the county there are about 23,000 people, practically the descendants of settlers from nearby states, stanch American stock, typical of the plain, every day people who have fought our wars and decided our elections.

Practically the only industry of the county is farming. Thirteen thousand of the population live on farms and the remaining 10,000 on farms supported by villages and towns, the largest of which has a population of 3,000. Everybody speaks English, attends church, sends the children to school, goes to Carmi on court days, reads the paper and talks politics.

If the health of the people in White county is right, if sanitary conditions are at par, then health and sanitary conditions are right. If the conditions of life in White county are making against the physical vigor of the race then the conditions of life of the average farmer's family in America are making against physical vigor.

With the understanding that the county is a type, the average citizen living in an average farming county in the middle Mississippi valley can consider that this survey applies to his neighbors and himself. The citizen living in a rural community as much unlike this as any to be found in American can allow a variation of 20 per cent and consider the result as applying to his neighbors and himself.

This White county survey was made jointly by Miss Harriet Fulmer, representing the State Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, and J. A. Foster, representing the state board of health. The report is published in the Illinois Health News for February. We quote its words on many phases of the community life they found.

The farms vary in size upward from thirty acres and the land is valued at about $90 to $250 an acre. In one community there were forty-seven families living below the poverty line and there were evidences of large amounts of the taxpayers' money spent by the county board of supervisors for relief.

In thirty-one schools there were no jacketed stoves. In nine cases of ten there was no pretense of ventilation. The common drinking cup was to be frequently found and was usually dirty. The towel and washing facilities, if there were any at all, were dirty and insanitary. The filthy, open privy was the rule. There were few exceptions. Under these circumstances we expect to find the following comments made, some by the surveyors and some by others:

There is a very unusual degree of truancy. In one village only one-third were present at any one time, while in a town with a school enrollment of 333 pupils, but 233 were present at the time of inspection. "We have many children in our schools who are pale and anemic and who have, we know, a family history of tuberculosis."

Suppose we shift the parties a little and instead of the school authorities write cattle raiser and instead of school children write cattle. If we said of his cattle pens that they were grossly insanitary and of his cattle that they were in poor condition all the time we would all be agreed that the mortgage would be foreclosed some time next fall.

Or suppose we change again and consider the school system as a big business newly put in charge of a clear headed business man. He would see at once that the business was not on a business basis.

And yet, White county believes in schools and is willing to spend its money for them. They have a school population of 3,600 and for them they maintain four high schools and ninety-nine grade schools—one school for every thirty-five pupils. Perhaps when the roads are better White county will have two schools each with 1,800 pupils. If so, there will be proper sewerage and ventilation, medical inspection and nursing service. The pupils will attend school. They will be healthy and the teachers can work at full efficiency. They would save enough of the present waste to pay for hauling the children to school. But the roads are not good enough for intensely centralized schools.

As an in the meanwhile proposition the survey report makes the following suggestion: "In Herald's Prairie township, for example, there are five one room schools. One school situated in the center of the township would not be over two miles from the home of any pupil." Men who want to keep fit walk four miles a day to and from work. A certain proportion of the pupils in Herald's Prairie township would be better off for a four mile a day walk.

And then there is not enough chance to play in White county. A queer charge to make against a rural community and its small towns, and yet as I look back over life in just such a community I am compelled to admit the truth of the conclusion. "The general cry of the young people was 'there is nothing for us to do.'" There was a little baseball. There were three moving picture houses. "Church and school entertainments constituted 75 per cent of the community amusement."

The city man crowded on ground thickly studded with buildings thinks that in country homes there are no dark rooms. "In several hundred homes inspected and in public buildings, schools and churches darkness and poor ventilation prevailed. Not because of lack of windows, but because the windows were tightly closed and the shades were drawn to keep out the sunlight."

The above observation is reasonably accurate. Country homes are illy ventilated, contain many attic and other rooms without proper windows, and in every home there are several rooms where the sunlight never enters. City tenements contain no darker, damper, mustier rooms than the average country parlor and the ordinary guest room. In the case of these rooms the furnishings are the best in the house, but the windows are always down and the curtains always darkened. When you enter them a musty smell greets your nostrils. Fortunately they are not often occupied. The reason for the musty parlor and guest room is that sunlight and dust spoil the furnishings.

The reason for the illy ventilated bedrooms and living rooms is the poor heating facilities. While the country man has the advantage of the city man in that he gets good air and pure sunlight, when he is out of doors, when he is indoors he gets up with ventilation that is on the whole poorer than that which the city man must stand.

The city man thinks of the country as a place where there is plenty of room for everybody. The number of persons to the square mile in White county is only forty-six. The average square mile in Chicago holds 12,000 people and there are square miles which hold several times the entire population of White county. Yet we can have people sleeping in crowded rooms even where only forty-six people live on a square mile.

A large proportion of the people of White county live in what may be called "close quarters." This is the more significant when we know that in one community, made up of forty-seven families, there were eight cases of tuberculosis. The family, which we designate at B——, consisting of the parents and eight children, lived in three rooms with a rental of $3.50 per month. The family income was $4 per week. Dirt, delinquency, and tuberculosis prevailed.

The average house had four to eight rooms. The occupants usually numbered from four to twelve. This made a problem of sleeping room congestion which, strange to say, was more serious in the rural sections than in the towns. The difficulty of heating was probably responsible for much of the congestion in the rural districts.

The city man thinks of the country man as having plenty of home grown, fresh vegetables, fruit, milk, butter, eggs, and meat. It was found during the investigation that the dietary of fully 75 per cent of the people of White county was lacking in milk, meat, butter, eggs, home made bread, and vegetables. While no one was found to be actually hungry, there were large numbers of undernourished and anemic people.

The reporters state that poverty was a factor in only a small portion of the cases. Customs of the people were more of a factor.

In the olden times the city man thought of the cities as having bad water, while the country people drank pure water from unpolluted wells and springs. In recent years it is well understood that the large cities have relatively pure water. Smaller cities often suffer from polluted and typhoid infected wells, while the average country well contains water that is more impure, but which only occasionally becomes infected with typhoid.

The conditions found in White county on the whole bear out this latter day opinion. "The water supply as a rule is only fair. In most instances, as must be true where privy vaults and surface water supply are employed together, it is a real and serious source of danger. There are few wells. The water usually comes from cisterns which are not properly lined."

The city man knows that one reason why people are leaving the farms and crowding into the cities is because the plumbers are to be found in the city. The house drainage of the city house is good on the whole. The average country house is not drained or sewered. The prevalence of insanitary privies from one end of White county to the other is well nigh unbelievable. Of 119 such buildings inspected there were but four which were fairly decent. Forty-two of these 119 outhouses were so filthy and insanitary as to be absolute menaces to the neighborhood. For the most part the privies in White county are made without vaults, the dejecta remaining on the surface of the ground and exposed at the rear of the buildings. No provision was made in any case to keep out flies.

In a communication to a village council the citizens called attention to the insanitary privy vaults, uncovered manure piles, and pig styes as great menaces, breeding flies and spreading disease, and gave it as their opinion that these nuisances could be abated without working hardship on anyone. Naturally disease and death should follow in the wake of such conditions.

There are no records by which one can judge of the amount of disease in White county. The health authorities get busy when smallpox invades, but the balance of the time the health organization is a paper proposition. "Epidemics are frequent in White county." An epidemic of typhoid fever left behind it four cases of tuberculosis. In this epidemic there were seventeen cases of typhoid fever in a prosperous farming community of less than two and a half square miles in area. The recent prevalance of measles was responsible for several deaths and for a number of cases in which prolonged coughs finally ended in tuberculosis. This same epidemic which might have been prevented by a health agent on the job, was responsible for the partial closing of the public schools.

Malaria, or something akin to it, affects a large number of persons throughout some portion of the county. Many young people were found to be "just dragging around," as they term it. Calomel and quinine are taken without prescription and patent medicines are found to an alarming extent in every farmhouse throughout the country. The board of county supervisors of one township paid a bill for medicines for one destitute family, the items including "Piso's consumption cure, Wine of Cardui, and Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup."

One consumptive maintained at public expense refused fresh air, sunshine, doctors, and good food, but she insisted on having her Piso's. Piso's had helped her and made her comfortable and she was going to take Piso's no matter what was said. A number of young women were found to be using Wine of Cardui and one patient in the terminal stage of tuberculosis states that she drank this nostrum on account of its stimulating effect. The use of stimulating patent medicines readily becomes a dissipation and has its effect on the moral tone among people below the normal of physical health.

The teaching of this White county survey, and of many similar surveys in other parts of the country, is that the country has its health problem. The pictures differ somewhat in detail. The essentials are the same. The city has its life hazards. They have been stated frequently. They need careful thought. The country has its life hazards. They need careful thought. Neither can sneer at, look down on, or refuse to assist the other. A public sentiment in the country should stand with a similar sentiment in the city for support of measures for the promotion of public health.

RELIABLE CONCERN.

Chicago, April 11.—[To the Friend of the Insured.]—Some time ago I took out a policy in a life insurance company which offers the lowest rates for my age (37 years, $12.95 per annum for $1,000 policy). As there is over $57,500,000 insurance in force and the resources show about $1,020,826, I would ask you to examine the inclosed annual report and kindly render your opinion as to whether this is a reliable and dependable concern.

F. SPIECKER.

The company you inquire about is organized under the assessment laws of Illinois. Under those laws it is not required to maintain a reserve and any reserve it accumulates is purely voluntary. The adequacy of the reserve is not tested by any legal standard. Its printed statement shows that its cash assets are $894,889. The company is well managed and among the best in its class.

PAVING RAVENSWOOD AVENUE.

Chicago, April 10.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindy let me know when East Ravenswood avenue, from Belmont to Lincoln avenue, will be paved.

MRS. WEST, 1757 Newport avenue.

A deferred hearing will be held Oct. 17, 1916, at 11 o'clock, on the matter of paving, with asphalt, Ravenswood avenue, between Belmont and Lincoln avenues. The improvement will not be made this year.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

MAY PAVE ALLEY THIS SUMMER.

Chicago, April 8.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When are we to have the alley between Ohio and Erie street, west of Waller avenue, paved? If something is not done soon there will have to be a trestle built, so cars and wagons can pass through.

W. N. C.

It is expected that our proceedings for paving the alley in the block between Ohio and Erie streets, Waller and Menard avenues, will be disposed of before the courts adjourn, and if so the improvement will be made during the summer. The alley is to be paved with brick.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

SETTLING CLAIMS AGAINST ESTATE.

Chicago, April 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. In an estate of a deceased person are there bills against the estate preferable to other bills and what are they? 2. If allowed by the Probate court will these bills be paid by the estate before any other?

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

1. In allowing claims against the estate of a deceased person, under the laws of Illinois, certain claims are given the preference. The various kinds of claims, in order in which they are given the preference, are: [a] Funeral expenses and costs of administration. [b] Widow's or children's award. [c] Expenses of last illness, with the exception of the doctor's bill, and wage claims. [d] Debts due school fund or township. [e] Physician's bill for services during the last illness of deceased. [f] Trust funds. [g] All other claims duly proven and allowed.

2. The debts are paid in the order above given.

LIABLE FOR DUES.

Chicago, April 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I paid my dues in a country club to Dec. 31, 1914. Did not formally resign, but have not been there since May 1, 1914. They now threaten to sue for the 1915 dues. Can they legally collect?

H. K. P.

As long as you did not in fact resign your membership you are liable for all dues incidental to such membership.

BROTHER MAY TESTIFY AGAINST BROTHER.

Evanston, Ill., April 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise me whether or not prosecution can force brother to testify against brother, or husband against wife, or vice versa, against their will.

E. B.

Brother can be subpœnaed to testify against a brother. Whether husband or wife can be subpœnaed depends on what kind of a case is on trial. Give facts.

MR. GOLDBECK AND THE PRESIDENT.

Bloomington, Ind., April 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Apropos of Herr Goldbeck's attack on Wilson, in the course of which he refers to the New Republic, may I call his attention to a letter in that excellent periodical which seems to have entirely escaped his notice? A correspondent, commenting on the fact that his grandfather came to this country from Germany to escape the militarism he hated, points out that the important thing is not that he came from GERMANY, but that he came FROM Germany. That is a consideration which even Herr Goldbeck may ponder with profit. After he has thought that over in the security of personal freedom which his beloved Germany has apparently been unable to offer him, perhaps he will feel less inclined to revile the president.

As to Americans metaphorically spitting in the face of Germans and expecting them to accept it as a mark of high esteem, perhaps the explanation lies in the fact that so many Germans seem eager to play the part of cuspidor or worse in their attitude towards the present militarist regime in Germany. It is perfectly natural for a man of German descent to be proud of his blood. One could have little respect for him if he wasn't.

But the lickspittle, uncritical acceptance of everything promulgated by the German war party as good simply because it is German is what invites the disgust and contempt of Americans. It is hardly edifying, to say the least, to see the spectacle of Germans of military age rushing to the naturalization bureau to escape the military oppression of their fatherland, and the next moment doing all in their power to subvert the government which offered them an asylum. It is only in such cases that Americans are likely to mistake the open Teutonic countenance for a cuspidor.

HORACE W. O'CONNOR.

A REBUKE TO SMITH.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial on "Voting for Ford" in Michigan misses the point altogether, as it seems to me. I am one who voted for Ford—not that I believe in his principles, except in the most abstract form—that is, that war is an anachronism and a relic of barbarity and has no more place than the duello between individuals. So long as human nature and nations are constituted as they are, there is no other alternative than full preparation to meet any nation having possible designs on us and with their methods. I believe in universal service and no favorites. I didnt vote for Ford as a possible candidate, but simply to eliminate Senator William Alden Smith, who has been an absolute failure. He has attended the fewest possible meetings of the senate and was absent or not voting on the Chamberlain bill yesterday.

EDWD. J. BERNSTEIN.

JUSTICE HUGHES' POSITION.

Chicago, April 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I do not agree with you that it is needful for Judge Hughes to declare his position on public policies in order that he may be considered for the presidency. His well known character is a sufficient platform. Gen. Grant did not declare himself on political questions before his nomination in 1868.

In fact, so far from it, his party affiliation was not positively known. Some supposed him to be a Democrat. The fact that he had led the nation's armies to victory was about all that was then considered. Judge Hughes is known as a man of convictions, with the courage to maintain them. This was demonstrated when he was governor of New York. His present attitude on the presidency also inspires confidence in him.

JOHN MAHIN,

ABOLISHING THE VACATION.

Chicago, April 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Shoop's proposition that there be school the year round is erroneous in that it would not only fail to meet the approval of the child (whom, of course, we should never consider), but also would incur the disapproval of thinking parents. That a boy or girl will submit to sitting in a stuffy room for five or six hours on a day when the temperature is about 90—bosh—it can't be done!

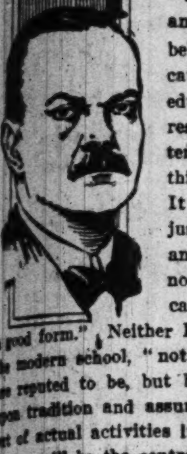
MR GRADGRIND'S REVOLUTION

By Edward Goldbeck



IF you do not know who Mr. Gradgrind is, that is not my fault. Read Dickens, one of the "waning classics," and you will find that Mr. Gradgrind is the man who believes in facts, and nothing but facts. He is a caricature, but the type is still flourishing. The general education board, founded by John D. Rockefeller, has resolved to "revolutionize the present educational system." The modern school, as it is going to evolve from this revolutionary process, will do away with grammar. It will not teach the children "useless historical facts just because previous generations of children have learned and forgotten them," and it will also "have the courage not to read obsolete and uncongenial classics simply because tradition has made this sort of acquaintance a good form." Neither Latin nor Greek will be contained in the curriculum of the modern school, "not because their literatures are less wonderful than they are reputed to be, but because their present position in the curriculum rests upon tradition and assumption." The modern school will build its curriculum out of actual activities in science, industry, esthetics, and civics. The work in science will be the central and dominating feature. A school trying to produce a "resourceful" modern type of educated men and women will provide practical training in one or more modern languages. The period passed in school and college before students begin professional studies is longer in the United States than in any other western country. "An economy of two or three years is urgently necessary."

The program is going to be immensely popular, if I know anything about the soul of the American nation. It is going to be so because it is seemingly new, really "democratic," and flatters the masses. There is no "courage" necessary to formulate such a program. Democracies and pseudo-democracies like new starts. They think that progress is a "law," that every change is a progress, and that a conservative is bound to be an ass. The program is democratic, as the "literary" education came up in feudal times, was applied to the aristocratic classes and raised a barrier between those who knew the dead languages and those who did not. The program flatters the masses because it suggests or even proclaims that most of the things the higher classes have stuffed into their heads are futile. So there is really no courage necessary for this sort of revolution.

The program is only seemingly new. Herbert Spencer published his book, "Education: Intellectual, Moral, and Physical," in 1861, and every feature of the revolutionizing program is in it. This reassuring fact does not prove anything against them, it only should make it impossible to advertise this experiment as something unheard of. But let us look on the merits of the proposition.

I think that grammar is not necessary for the acquiring of modern languages. Studying grammar is a kind of dissecting, and one does not dissect living organisms. There are clever and unprejudiced men who recommend the grammatical study of the ancient languages very highly, and there are learned and unbiased men who think that the occupation with the so-called exact sciences may do just as much and even more for the maturing mind. I shall not go into this question, which to my opinion cannot be answered satisfactorily. None of the parties will be able to prove its contention irrefutably. Each will give some good reasons and will finally decide according to personal temperament, experience, and sympathy.

The purpose of this article is to protest against the belittling of tradition and against a merely utilitarian education.

What this country needs in this moment is tradition. The American nation will never be an historical unit if it does not recordate the fact that a nation is made of past, present, and future generations. Ponder over the following Japanese axiom: "The happiness of the dead depends upon the respectful service rendered them by the living, and the happiness of the living depends upon the fulfillment of pious duty to the dead."

WE are complaining about the over-individualism, the atomization of the American people. There is no way of integrating them but to create a tradition, the belief in common and eternal purposes of the nation, as it was, is, and will be. A nation which loses its past will lose its cohesion in the present. If we have no feeling of duty towards the past generations we shall soon lose the feeling of responsibility for the future. And is not the movement for the conservation of the national resources a sufficient proof that patriotic men saw the danger and tried to prevent it?

The idea of integrating the American nation by creating common national interests—a national railroad and insurance policy—is certainly what the Germans call "positive policy," but we ought not to neglect the preaching of national ideals for that. "We read obsolete and uncongenial classics simply because tradition has made this sort of acquaintance a kind of good form." Simply? This "simply" reminds me of Mr. Wilson's "merely psychological" business depression.

Yes, we read the classics "simply" because for centuries the most enlightened men of all countries have admired and enjoyed them, because through centuries they have given the most invigorating nourishment to the human mind. "The position of the ancient literatures rests upon tradition and assumption." On assumption? The greatest geniuses of all nations have bowed to Homer and Plato, and mankind has only groped in the dark, only repeated like a parrot what some old standpatter said, until Mr. Abraham Flexner, assistant secretary of the Rockefeller educational board, discovered that all the literary glory of these and other men was mere assumption. Well, then, let us judge for ourselves!

I do not think that in the whole world literature there is anything more educational, more uplifting, any better reading for an American boy of fifteen than the Platonic dialogue "Crito." This sort of reading—if any—will teach him "civics" much more forcibly than the most scholarly scientific comment on the American constitution. The reasons which Socrates gives his friend Crito for refusing to escape and for submitting to the Athenian law and the verdict of the jury which has pronounced the sentence of death will hardly seem "obsolete" or "uncongenial" to a normal youth.

FOR at least a generation we ought to get away from the idea that education is given to the individual for exclusively individual purposes. Education is a public business. The aim of this education is to put social impulses in the place of individual impulses, which will always be strong enough. It is social gain through individual constraint. The question whether the realistic or the classical education is better is, although important in itself, not the principal issue. According to Spencer, one might just as well imagine that the science of dietetics depended on the fact whether you nourished yourself on potatoes or bread. The question whether we shall go on despising tradition and indulging in shallow and overbearing individualism is much more important to the welfare of the country. I think the American nation has answered it already.

We need patriotism, and because we need it we must read history. Not as an assemblage of facts, but as a tonic. Write biographies of great men and let youth indulge in hero worship! To most boys and men Alexander Hamilton will be just as interesting as Euclid. And, by the way, the science of "scientists" who inveigh against tradition is suspicious to me. Would there be any science in existence without tradition? Are the Rockefeller revolutionists "traditional" enough to assume that men like Edison, Curie, or Helmholtz were inspired transcendentally and had no precursors?

Secondly, I object to a utilitarian education. Such an education may be all right for the average human being, but every nation must try to produce an aristocracy. Not an aristocracy which is fossilized by privileges of rank or wealth, but an aristocracy which is perpetually losing and gaining, ever renewed from the inexhaustible reservoir of the "common people." In a country like this, where "success" is a magical word and the golden calf the idol of an overwhelming majority, there ought to be at least a small number of unregenerate idealists who go in for "useless," unremunerative things.

In earlier times the saying was that the youths at the universities were studying humaniora, matters the contemplation of which might lead them to a higher sort of human knowledge and understanding. Now the leading point of view is "an economy of two or three years," which is "urgently necessary," as the period passed in school and college before students begin professional studies is longer in the United States than in any other western country. I do not know if this is true with regard to France and England; it is not with regard to Germany. But if it should be true, then I really wonder why there are so many physicians and lawyers in this country who are unable to speak or write grammatically, and whose general education is certainly deplorably inferior to that of any "western" physician or lawyer.

To my mind it is a fact that we need an education which makes for harmonious development, the holokagathia of the Greek, and not for specialists and professionals. Professional schools may take care of that.

The one-sided overvaluation of exact science we find already in Spencer's "Education." He distinguishes knowledge of essential value, of almost essential value, and of conventional value. To know that a feeling of dumbness and rigidity of the limbs precedes paralysis he calls information of essential value. Waving the fact that you may have this feeling in one of your limbs for twenty years and wait in vain for becoming paralyzed, I do not see why this knowledge should be "essential." He says with sincere indignation that some people are not ashamed of being ignorant about the activities of the spine. Well, I have lived forty-nine years of a fairly comfortable, successful, and useful life without knowing anything about the activity of the spine, and I shall leave this meadow of calamity without having even tried to improve. (If I did, where would the attempt lead to? To the silliest dilettantism.) But I remember that a few lines from an old hymn or from a beautiful poem have helped me to go through hours of discouragement which are spared to very few of us, and that is what I call "essential knowledge."

Moral, esthetic, historical, metaphysical values, shall we neglect them all for exact science? If you want to know what a civilization without metaphysical tendencies is, study China. If we intend to perfect the human mind we must not begin by mutilating it. You want exactitude? You want facts? Read Claude Bernard's "Introduction à la Médecine Expérimentale," in which he has shown how often science stated "facts" which were nothing but erroneous interpretations of nature. Where are today the chemistry, physics, and physiology of thirty years ago.? It is true that all this does not impair the position of science as a factor in education because the aim of the education is not to pile up information, but to fit your mind for any sort of exertion, to make it keen and flexible. I only emphasize it because most people argue the same way about literature and language. "What is the use in reading Cicero, as you will sooner or later forget what you have read?" What is the use of getting a shine, as sooner or later my shoes will be dirty again?

IF we look at American theater and literature we must admit that they cannot stand the comparison with the Russian, French, English, German performance. James Bryce, an enthusiastic eulogist of this country, cannot help regretting the monotony of American life. What he calls monotony we may just as well call platitude and banality. The level of conversation is appallingly low in the United States. That is why we should object to a utilitarian and professional education. At least we must oppose the idea that to know nothing about history, ancient literature, Greek and Roman language is the ideal mental condition.

The English are a nation with a sound instinct for the things which may favorize their interest, are they not? What sort of education did they give to their future leaders at Oxford and Cambridge? Athletics and a smattering of the classics. This vigorous, earthly nation felt that an idealistic element was needed in the national education. They wanted their sons to learn something "useless," because they knew that without this counteraction they would become hopelessly trivial. And they fared pretty well under this régime; the reading of "obsolete and uncongenial classics" did not prevent them from accomplishing the greatest political performance this planet has seen up to now. They lived on nothing but tradition; they never tore down, never revolutionized in the sense of 1789. Their educational ideal was not to produce the "resourceful" man, the man who can grab a job and keep it; it aimed at producing the "gentleman."

OF course, there is nothing to say against educational experiments. Without them we would run the risk of petrification. But if the Rockefeller reformers try to advertise their system as a panacea we must protest.

An education which gives us nothing but science (and school in most cases provides only results and cannot impart the spirit of autonomous investigation) may satisfy Mr. Gradgrind, but it will not give us the man who can say: Nihil humani a me alienum puto. (Nothing human is alien to me.) To me this revolution seems another attempt at leveling down the mania and disease of democracies. Danton had the idea of "equalizing the intellects," and he was fearlessly consistent, for as long as one of us is cleverer than his neighbor equality cannot be realized.

But what we need in this country at this moment (in twenty-five years the situation may have changed) is a spirit of patriotic sacrifice and a belief in the noninterrupted, eternal nation, one in past, present, and future. That is why we must not sneer at tradition and must not raise egotists. We need leaders, aristocrats not of birth and wealth but of mind and deed, idealists who believe in imponderables, and that is why we must not found education on facts and nothing but facts.

A PREMATURE PEACE

By Robert Herrick

PEACE rumors increase with the coming of spring. The desperate German drive at Verdun was doubtless a supreme effort to get a conclusion, to force the allies to consider peace. With its practical failure Germany's desire for peace must become constantly more urgent, and the terms that she would offer more nearly what the allies might accept. We may expect more of those well meaning counsels of peace by irresponsible neutrals as Germany's need for peace increases, more attempts at interference to stop the bloody business, secretly instigated by the belligerent who sees her vantage point in bargaining diminishing month after month. It is not likely that the peacemakers will have their way this year, however. The terms that Germany would conceivably consent to could not be considered by the allies. And they should not be considered, for it would mean their virtual defeat, also quite probably a renewal of the bloody business in the near future. A peace conference now would be merely another map drawing tragedy such as Europe has suffered too often in the past, where seed for further wars is thickly sown. For Europe is not ready for peace.

NOTHING has yet been settled, neither the relative military strength of the two groups nor the fundamental questions for which they are spending themselves. Germany has won some battles and overrun much territory; she has not won a decisive victory. The allies thus far, at enormous cost to themselves, have prevented her from overrunning still more of their territory and winning that decisive victory. That is all, and there is no basis for an enduring peace in such a situation. Yet it is commonly asked what is the use of continuing the bloody drawn game of the trenches, in which apparently neither side can make a decisive move.

If after a year and a half neither side can win through the trench wall, why should they hope to do so in two or three or four years of costly efforts? The answer to this is that victory may not come through breaking the wall, or by a decisive defeat in an open field of battle after the old manner. It is more likely to come psychologically through a readjustment commonly in men's minds. Although there are signs of such a readjustment, of the breaking up of the hard crust of ideas and passions which caused the catastrophe, of the elimination of the chief personalities who symbolized old, wrong ideas, it will take more time, more contemplation of ruin and sacrifice to teach the bitter lesson that must precede peace throughout Europe.

Von Tirpitz has gone, but Bethmann-Hollweg and Asquith and their satellites remain. They are tottering, if one can put faith in rumors, but they have not yet been retired from the front of the stage. It is not the "crushing of Germany" that is to be awaited, not the defeat and invasion of England or of Russia, but the perception in Germany that the Hohenzollern method is the wrong one, the perception in England and among her allies that Germany cannot and ought not to be crushed in any physical sense such as the "irreconcilables" have proclaimed to be their intention from the start. When that day of enlightenment dawns quite generally in the different countries there will be no trouble with "Prussian militarism," of which we have heard so much, because it will have disappeared along with its champions, from its own failure. There will also be no more senseless utterances in England of the intention to starve Germany because the new mind of England will realize that a starved Germany is neither possible nor desirable.

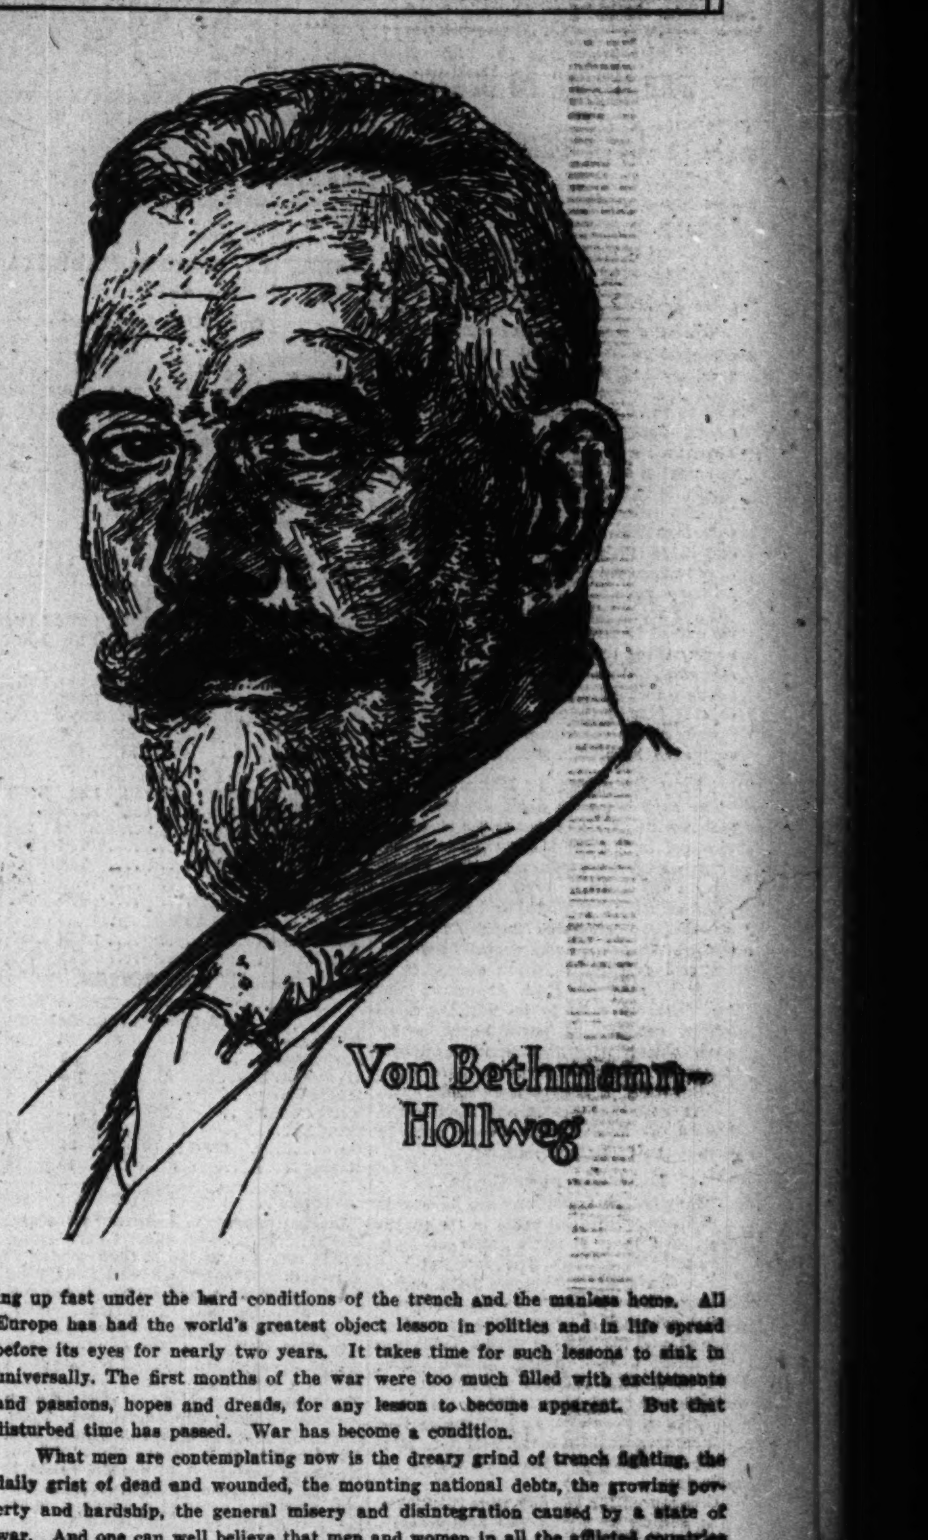
IT may take more than one short year from this time to bring the nations of Europe to the psychological state where an enduring peace can be made. When it comes I believe the conditions of that peace will be drawn by a new set of statesmen, not by the Bethmann-Hollweg, Grey, Berchtold kind; not by kaiser, czar, or emperor, who will also be eliminated virtually if not in fact. For a new generation has been born in the agony of Europe and is growing up fast under the hard conditions of the trench and the manless home. All Europe has had the world's greatest object lesson in politics and in life spread before its eyes for nearly two years. It takes time for such lessons to sink in universally. The first months of the war were too much filled with excitements and passions, hopes and dreads, for any lesson to become apparent. But that disturbed time has passed. War has become a condition.



Von Bethmann-Hollweg

What men are contemplating now is the dreary grind of trench fighting, the daily grist of dead and wounded, the mounting national debts, the growing poverty and hardship, the general misery and disintegration caused by a state of war. And one can well believe that men and women in all the afflicted countries are asking themselves more insistently as day follows day: "Is this thing necessary? What makes it? What can be done to stop it, to prevent its recurrence?" Such chastened self-examination will prepare the world mind for peace.

CONCEIVABLY the war will gradually relax its tension, with fewer bloody slaughters like those of Ypres and Verdun, with less expenditure of ammunition as the national credits become weaker. It will degenerate into the dreary daily grind of factory war in trenches until all men get heartily sick of the business and turn on the leaders who run it. It will be a sad time for women and children with increasing poverty and anxiety. But it will be a fruitful time, nevertheless, for as never before the great nations will face ultimate realities, as private hoards are exhausted and public credits sink. The new generation will come forward rapidly of men who have become used to hardship and simplicity and effort, men and women who have lived, lean and tried themselves to the utmost. A healthier race than the peace-fat generation that tumbled into the great war!

Therefore let the great war go on until the diplomatists, the statesmen, the financiers and business men who had a hand in its making have been eliminated from control, until leaders get into power who have the new sense of realities created by the war. The process of elimination has been going on ever since the beginning. The first notable reactionary to go was Count Berchtold, the Austrian prime minister, pliant tool of Hapsburg and Hohenzollern. The French have dispensed with Viviani, Delcassé, Millerand, Gallieni, and a number of smaller personalities; the English have dropped Winston Churchill, and Asquith himself and Grey are less securely seated than ever before.

The Germans in dispensing with Von Tirpitz have made a large progress towards peace and the new order. Any day we may see Bethmann-Hollweg—him of the "scrap of paper" fame—follow his less conservative colleague, together with Von Jagow and Zimmerman, into the outer silence, their places taken by less intractable statesmen whose hands are not stained with the guilt of the war. It is not conceivable that any peace could be made between the Asquith government and the present leaders of Germany, but it is entirely conceivable that an honorable peace might be made between men who have not themselves been directly responsible for the making of the war, who have not indulged in denunciations of each other, who have not put themselves on record for this or that intemperate policy. Perhaps this year will witness the exodus of the old order of statesmen. The fall of the Asquith government would be the next most promising step towards peace after the elimination of Von Tirpitz.

MEANWHILE there are issues in this war more far reaching than one sees in the headlines of the newspapers, than the taking of Verdun or the entrance of Roumania into the alliance. There is more involved than another drawing of the mangled map of Europe, than the swapping of colonies and trading of spheres of influence in Africa, even than the control of the sea, whatever that may mean. Those are the terms in which the old crowd of statesmen and diplomats think exclusively. What is all the time coming forward more insistently is not national rivalries, not economic competition with trade and tariff wars, but the stark question of human survival.

Europe is fast reaching the borrowing limit. She is becoming bankrupt. Her chief peoples owe more than they can possibly pay, perhaps more than they can pay interest on with the highest possible taxation. Every month that the great war continues the hopelessness of meeting these obligations in the old way by simple taxation becomes more apparent. And in this respect, too, the old order must pass away and give place to some new order of civilization. The great war is the instrument that is rapidly creating that new order by its enormous appetite for money as well as for men. It is eating up private capital; it is exhausting the whole capitalistic system of running the world.

To have the process stop half way and revert under peace and the effort to resume in the old capitalistic way would be a disaster perhaps greater than the war itself. It would mean economic slavery for countless millions all their lives, the slavery of generations yet unborn, a crushing slavery to taxation. It would establish more firmly than before the rule of the financial overlords, the throttle of "business interests." And that, of course, is just what the old type of statesmen and financiers in Europe expects to happen when peace comes. That is what they count on doing the day peace is made—to open the old game of commercial rivalry, the old system of private capital, the old method of using the power of the state to advance their private interests, even to the risk of war.

And that is one very good reason why they are not fitted to make the real peace, because they hope to profit by a resumption on the old social terms. Even now they are preparing, playing for position, creating a new engine of commercial alliances and exclusions, preparing to carry on the great war into trade and finance. Peace obviously comes not thus. Until these leaders and their ideas have been eliminated it is well that peace should not be attempted.

The war is hardening the nations of Europe, preparing their peoples for a new era of civilization. Forward looking minds should concern themselves with that new future rather than with the subterfuges of a premature peace.

IRELAND'S PART IN WAR

By James M. Tuohy

LONDON—The question of what Ireland is doing in the war—not in the field, for there the Irish regiments have won now, as always, the highest fame—but in recruiting, has been raised again in the London Times, the inspiration evidently proceeding from the Orange headquarters in Belfast.

Ever since the war began, the followers of Sir Edward Carson have lost no opportunity of misrepresenting or disparaging the military help given by Nationalist Ireland in the war. For a long time they found it difficult to secure an outlet here for this partisan propaganda—all actuated by anti-home rule and anti-Catholic feeling, which are synonymous terms in Ulster—as even the bulk of the Unionist press realized the unfairness, to say nothing of the impolicy of keeping alive the Irish feud.

But now the terms of the political truce are being less strictly observed, and the Times in the natural fulfillment of its long tradition, readily avails of the opening to stimulate ill-feeling in Ireland and to arouse anti-Irish feeling in England by exaggerating what Ulster has done in the war and depreciating what has been done by the other three provinces. The underlying motive of this apparently gratuitous proceeding is to undermine Ireland's right to home rule. It is thought that if the British people can be impressed with the idea that Nationalist Ireland is, if not hostile, at least apathetic about the war, strength will be given to the Orange demand that the home rule bill shall be repealed.

An authoritative statement of the case of Nationalist Ireland and the war has been given to me by Mr. John Redmond, the Irish leader, as he is specially anxious the true facts should be known in America. Mr. Redmond's statements are based on the very latest official facts and figures. I began by asking Mr. Redmond what was the real justification for the exclusion of Ireland from conscription.

"Ireland in this matter," said Mr. Redmond, "has never been dealt with on the same lines as England. Ireland was excluded from the volunteer acts of 1863, she was excluded from the territorial acts, she was excluded from the registration act last year, and it naturally followed that she should be excluded from the conscription act. The circumstances of the two countries are entirely different. It should be remembered that Ireland was excluded from the conscription act by the unanimous action of a coalition government containing all the leaders of the Unionist party, including Arthur Balfour and Walter Long, who have both been Unionist chief secretaries for Ireland and who agreed that the conscription act would not be the best way to get recruits from Ireland.

"There is a wider view; Ireland in the past admittedly has been disaffected, and it is only since the home rule act has been placed upon the statute book that it was possible to hope for a large enlistment in Ireland. It would be most unwise under these circumstances to have the appearance of forcing Ireland. Even Sir Edward Carson, when the registration act, which was the foundation of the conscription act, was under discussion, said in the house of commons that he would be very sorry to force it on any part of Ireland."

Is it a fact that the voluntary recruiting from Ireland has been a failure?

"On the contrary, it has exceeded everybody's expectation. The latest official figures published give the number of recruits from Ireland to army and navy as 105,181 and the total from Ireland direct at present serving with the colors 155,227. In the army alone the figures are 147,547, of whom 88,080 are Catholics and 59,188 are Protestants."

"There is another fact which should be borne in mind. Up to the outbreak of this war, recruiting for the army has always been slacker in Ulster than in the other provinces in Ireland, and of recent years the disproportion has been increasing. I have before me the figures of recruiting for ten years ending 1912. These figures give Ulster only 7,022 as against 18,602 for the rest of Ireland, and they show a steady yearly decrease in Ulster, from which it would be fair to infer that the reservoir of recruits ought to be larger there than elsewhere."

It is true, therefore, to make the statement, as has been done in Orange organs in Ulster and in the London Times, that Ulster has done magnificently in the matter of recruiting and the rest of Ireland very badly?

"It is quite untrue. They have both, in Lord Kitchener's words, 'done magnificently!' For example, the city of Dublin alone has sent over 17,000 recruits to the colors, and every small town in the south and west of the country stands quite as well as similar towns in England. The slackness in agricultural districts is no greater in the south of Ireland than in the north, and not more in either than in Great Britain, as the lord lieutenant states in his official report."

It has been suggested in the same quarters that the three Irish divisions, the Tenth, the Sixteenth, and the Thirty-sixth, are largely made up of English soldiers?

"That also is quite untrue. The Tenth division was the first established, immediately after the war, and the war office almost immediately drafted a number of Yorkshire recruits into it, much to the disgust of Irish Nationalists. These have been to a large extent transferred. But even counting them, the division was at all times predominantly an Irish division, quite as much as any of the highland regiments today are Scottish regiments. This division met with a frightful cutting up at Suvla, and it was necessary instantly to fill it up with the nearest recruits at hand, and I understand that a number of recruits of various nationalities were drafted into it.

"Since then, however, large reinforcements have gone out from Ireland, and it has today once more regained its Irish character and complexion. It is officered by Irishmen, led by Sir Bryan Mahon, and will be reinforced as need arises from the reserve battalions in Ireland. The Sixteenth division is admittedly an Irish division. The only non-Irishmen who are in it are a number of the Jersey and Guernsey militia, who, as you know, are of French origin bearing French names and speaking French as well as English. When they volunteered for the front they asked the war office to attach them to an Irish division, and they have been warmly welcomed by the Irishmen. They form, however, only a company or two out of the 20,000 who form the Sixteenth division.

"This division was badly treated just as they were almost ready for the front; 1,200 of their trained men were taken away from them and put into another division. They, however, are now at the front, under command of a Catholic Irishman, Gen. Hickie. The Thirty-sixth division, which is called the Ulster division, is composed, we are told, entirely of anti-Nationalist Ulster men. It is, I believe, quite true that no Catholic is allowed into it, either in the ranks or among the officers. But at any rate it is a purely Irish division, and the statement, therefore, that the Irish divisions are largely made up of Englishmen is a malicious lie."

It is stated that Sir Edward Carson's volunteers have freely enlisted, but that the Nationalist volunteers in the south have declined to join the army.

"That is ridiculously untrue. Happily, we have official figures on this subject. We were told before the war broke out that Sir Edward Carson had 200,000 trained and armed men in his volunteer force. The official figures published by the government show that today there are 29,426 Ulster volunteers in the army, and that there are 29,643 Nationalist volunteers in the army, which is sufficient evidence that the Nationalist volunteers from the south and west have enlisted in quite as large numbers—indeed, in a little larger numbers—than the Ulster volunteers did."

Is it true that the political truce which has been in existence since the opening of the war has been broken in Ireland?

"In some respects I am sorry to say it is. The Belfast Unionist newspapers and certain Ulster anti-Nationalist politicians have not ceased from the commencement their anti-home rule campaign, and Belfast newspapers teem day by day with attacks upon myself and the Nationalist party. Nationalist leaders have shown a constant desire to cooperate with Ulster Unionists in support of everything connected with the war. Unfortunately, in many instances they have been repulsed. When Sir Edward Carson and myself were invited to a joint recruiting meeting recently at Newry I accepted, but Sir Edward Carson declined to go upon the platform with me, and the meeting fell through."

What is the state of feeling about home rule in Ulster—that is, non-Nationalist Ulster—is it more uncompromising than ever?

"I do not believe that is so. On the contrary, I believe that most intelligent men in Ulster have accepted the enactment of the home rule bill as an accomplished fact, and that when it comes to a discussion of special measures to safeguard Protestant interests in Ulster under home rule after the war it will be found that among the great bulk of anti-home rulers much of the bitterness has disappeared. Ulster Protestants and Munster Catholics are fighting side by side in the trenches. They will never again fight one another."

I see that the anti-home rule papers in Ulster claim that Ulster is the only part of Ireland that has subscribed generously for war purposes.

"Such a statement would be a shameful and very mean perversion of the truth. Belfast, of course, is the wealthiest city in Ireland; its people are generous and they have subscribed nobly to evry purpose connected with the war from their wealth. But nothing has been more remarkable and more magnificent than the way in which the people in the south and west of Ireland from their poverty have subscribed to similar funds. The truth is that there is not a country parish in the poorest part of the country that did not send comparatively large sums of money to this purpose."

It is asserted that large numbers of Ulster Protestants, anti-Nationalists, have been drafted into the southern Catholic regiments.

"This is quite untrue, although if it had been the fact no one would have been better pleased than many of the Nationalist leaders. One of the gravest causes of complaint which the Nationalist leaders have against the war office is that they permitted the Thirty-sixth [Ulster] division to set up a barrier of exclusion against Catholic soldiers and officers.

"There are, it is true, a number of Ulster men in the southern regiments, chiefly recruited by Mr. Joseph Devlin, the Nationalist member of parliament for West Belfast, from among the Nationalists of Belfast, and they are, I need not say, welcomed with open arms by their southern fellow-countrymen. But there is not a single Catholic or Nationalist allowed into the Ulster division. Indeed, there was a case reported where one of these Ulster division regiments dismissed a cook from the officers' mess because they discovered he was a Catholic."

How have these divisions, the Thirty-sixth Ulster and the Sixteenth Irish, been doing at the front?

"Both of them, I feel certain, have been doing well. I cannot speak with any authority as to the Thirty-sixth division, but I know that the Sixteenth division has already suffered heavily, and I knew that at least two battalions in it have received from their general officers the highest commendations for gallantry."

NEW CROP WHEAT FUTURES FIRMER; MAY SELLS OFF

Pit Offerings Are Heavy Early; Corn Rallies on Better Cash Demand.

The tone of the wheat market was weak early yesterday and prices were under pressure of heavy commission house selling. Support was poor until the latter part of the session, when shorts covered freely, causing a partial recovery. The cash demand was indifferent, and while there was some buying of futures credited to foreign interests, no big sales for export were reported. It was said, however, that a foreign government was in the market for wheat. Final prices were ⅛@¼c to ⅝c lower.

Local cash sales were only 20,000 bu. Offerings from the country continue fair, and there is not going to be any scarcity of old wheat for some time to come. The primary receipts were 936,000 bu, and for the week receipts were 6,379,000 bu, compared to 2,296,000 bu a year ago, or nearly three times as much. The export movement does not seem to be broad enough to prevent stocks accumulating at this rate, although normally at this season of the year there should be heavy decreases in visible stocks.

May Premium Is Narrowed.

The May has been decidedly weak the last few days, compared to the new crop months, indicating the plenitude of old crop wheat as against possible shortage in the growing crop.

Cables were unchanged and the market was called neglected. Receipts were liberal at Liverpool and generally the supply and demand situation abroad is in favor of buyers. Both Argentina and Australia are said to be shipping more freely, receipts at ports being heavy and holders in Argentina at least less reserved. Buenos Aires futures were ½@1c lower. It is expected world's shipments will continue liberal, and in the United Kingdom fairly liberal reserve stocks are being accumulated.

Rains Improve Crops.

The weather conditions are favorable and there were good rains in the southwest and light showers quite generally through Nebraska. The forecast was for quite general showers with cooler weather over Sunday. In the northwest some progress is being made in seeding wheat, and the advices were a little more optimistic in that regard. Receipts were 232 cars, with primary receipts liberal. Northwest receipts were 232 cars, against 96 cars a year ago, and Winnipeg had 381 cars, against 101 cars a year ago. Minneapolis stocks decreased 110,000 bu for one day.

Clearances for the day were 931,000 bu. The selling of wheat was heavy early, led by Armour, Wagner, Logan-Bryan, Slaughter, and Harris-Winthrop. Commission houses and shorts were late buyers. There was less selling on account of political reports.

Corn Shows Firm Tone.

Corn developed a strong tone as the result of reported sales of fair amounts for export. Prices at the close were ⅜c to ⅝@¾c higher, the May gaining on the other months. It is expected there will be fair shipments of corn at the opening of navigation, and receipts are expected to be smaller. Foreign news was favorable to holders, shipments being small, while stocks abroad are light.

Weather conditions generally were favorable. The acreage in corn is expected to be larger than a year ago, and the south is expected to again put in a big acreage. Receipts of corn were 94 cars, with primary receipts of 649,000 bu. For the week primary receipts were 4,431,000 bu, compared to 2,916,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 297,000 bu for the day. Cables were unchanged. Cash houses were fair buyers of corn.

Oats Close Shade Higher.

Oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher at the close, the advance in corn helping the bulls, while there was no heavy pressure. The cash demand was fair and sales were 80,000 bu. Offerings from the country were moderate. Receipts here were 132 cars, with primary receipts of 624,000 bu, and primary receipts for the week were 4,140,000 bu, compared to 3,541,000 bu a year ago. Clearances for the day were 214,000 bu. Most of the export business at present seems to be in Canadian oats. Armour was about the best buyer of oats.

Provisions were quiet and there was not much change in prices at the close. The cash trade also was quiet, without much feature. Receipts here were 14,000, with 40,000 for Monday and 136,000 for the week. Hogs were 5@10c up. Western receipts for the week were 449,900, compared to 392,000 a year ago. Liverpool prices were 9d up for lard and unchanged for meats. Commission houses were moderate buyers. Selling was scattered.

Rye Prices Are Steady.

Rye was steady, with No. 2 quoted 97c nominal and No. 3 selling at 94½c. Receipts, 7 cars.

Barley ruled quiet and unchanged. Malting was quoted 68@77c, with sales at 71@73c; feed was quotable at 60@66c and sold 65c; mixing was quoted 67@68c and screening 45@61c, latter selling 50@59c. Receipts were 37 cars.

Timothy seed held steady, with cash lots $4.50@8.00, nominal; clover seed was unchanged, with cash lots $8.50@16.75, nominal.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 1c higher. Cash on track, $2.07@2.08; May, $2.07, and July, $2.08½; receipts, 1 car. Minneapolis was 1c higher, with cash on track $2.09@2.12. Receipts were 16 cars. Winnipeg closed ½@¾c higher, with May $1.84½ and July $1.86. Receipts, 7 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Corn was more active and had a strong tone. Cash prices were a little firmer and there were reports of considerable corn sold to Baltimore for export, and it was understood that a considerable line of hedges was bought against sales of cash corn with which to rally prices. For the last two days there has been some improvement in the export demand for corn and it is believed that the small world's shipments are beginning to tell on conditions abroad. World's shipments have been small for several weeks and foreign stocks are not at all burdensome. There is a strong local bull party which is buying corn on quite a liberal scale and the market becomes congested easily. It is the theory of the bulls that with the opening of navigation stocks here will decrease rapidly.

An easier tendency was noted in the cash markets and spring wheat was inclined to be draggy. Premiums generally were shaded a little on red winter, No. 2 red being quoted 4@5c over the May. At outside markets there was an easier tone, but generally cash prices were changed with the futures. Cash sales were 20,000 bu. New York reported considerable buying of futures at Chicago and Winnipeg by foreign interests, but the cash sales were moderate. Corn and oats were firm and there was a good trade in corn for shipment to seaboard exporters, although sales reported here were only about 50,000 bu. Oats sales were 80,000 bu. Country offerings of coarse grains were light.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date have been 457,000,000 bu, compared to 392,000,000 bu a year ago and 283,700,000 bu two years ago. Corn arrivals were 143,000,000 bu, against 159,000,000 a year ago, and oats 224,000,000, against 228,000,000 bu a year ago.

Reports received by a leading mercantile institution of St. Louis indicate a loss in winter wheat compared to last year of 200,000,000 bu. Many bad reports were received, but traders were disposed to wait and see what improvement there would be in the next week or so.

Inglis wired Logan-Bryan from Clinton Mo.: "In west central counties of Missouri recent favorable weather has improved wheat conditions, but the general condition is poor and spotted. Still plowing up wheat."

Weather conditions in Argentina are favorable and the interior movement is liberal. Holders were said to be less reserved. Buenos Aires closed ½@1c off. Australian reports indicate that weekly shipments will be fairly liberal.

Private reports showed rains generally through Kansas and Nebraska, but mostly light showers in Nebraska, although it was raining at several Nebraska points yesterday. The forecast was for quite general showers.

Receipts of wheat at Chicago for the week were 21,867,000 bu, compared to shipments of 1,589,000 bu; corn, 1,133,000 bu received and 989,000 bu shipped; oats, 1,706,000 bu received and 2,072,000 bu shipped.

Receipts inspected yesterday: Wheat, 232 cars; corn, 94 cars; oats, 132 cars; rye 7 cars, and barley, 37 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 40,000 head and 136,000 head for all next week.

Local vessel men believe vessels on the great lakes will be fortunate if they get through the straits by May 1. There is said to be a big ice floe north of the Soo.

W. A. Gardner, having discontinued his business as commission merchant, has become associated with King, Farnum & Co.

Stocks of wheat abroad are being built up and liberal reserves are expected in a short time, as receipts are liberal.

Hog packing at Chicago since March 1 otals 849,000, against 880,000 a year ago.

Hog market had a weak opening on fresh receipts of 12,000 head, but developed strength and closed firm to 5c higher than on Friday. The trade was active, with packers, shippers, and speculators aggressive competitors for the offerings. Top sales were made at $10.05 and the bulk at $9.80@10.00. The average price for the day was advanced to $9.92, the second highest of the year to date. Pigs made firm prices.

Final quotations made hogs largely 20@25c higher than a week ago, while pigs showed a net gain of 35c for the week. The average price of all hogs here this week was placed at $9.70, the same as that of the previous week.

Of the 3,000 sheep and lambs received, packers had 2,000 direct. Some prime spring lambs were offered for sale and were taken at $16.00 per hundred pounds.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values finished the week at a decline of 10@15c for all but the best beeves. The latter were unchanged. In view of the fact that receipts for the week were nearly double those of the preceding week, sellers were well satisfied with the basis of values. The trade had good action throughout the week and the market closed in a healthy condition. Cows and heifers closed unchanged to 10@15c lower than a week ago, while calves came in for their annual Easter demand and advanced $1.00. Stock and feeding steers sold slowly and finished the week at a loss of 15@25c. The expectancy is for a much broader demand for thin cattle, however, and traders expected them to do better relatively than the fat animals during the coming week, as it is believed religious restrictions will affect the consumptive demand for beef the closing week of Lent, while promising prospects for summer grass will have a tendency to increase the call for thin stock.

Cattle at seven western markets, 128,800, against 92,900 the preceding week, 118,100 a year ago, and 111,700 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date, 2,163,000, against 1,8893,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Sheep finished the week at an advance of 10@15c, while lambs made a gain of 25@40c and yearlings were up 15@25c as compared with a week ago. Prices were up to record establishing levels, but receipts showed a decrease and consumptive requirements compelled packers to follow the upward movement of values. The trade was of good character and the market closed in a strong position at the week's best figures. As in preceding weeks, the trade in thin and breeding stock was of small volume, scarcity of offerings and high prices serving to restrict the operations of feeders and breeders. Lambs topped the week at $12.00 and sheep reached $9.40.

Dissolution Suits.

It begins to appear certain that the months and years of anxiety which dissolution suits have caused to stockholders of various big industrial combinations were all for naught, and that there is little or nothing in the anti-trust suits that need frighten an investor in the securities of these companies. Several of the suits are pending, after years of argument and taking of testimony, and they will all be decided at some time, but the decisions can have little effect on the real value of the securities.

Most of the so-called "trusts" were formed fifteen or twenty years ago with the idea of bringing about such economies in production as to increase profits without raising prices, and generally with the unexpressed hope of driving competition from the field. In the expectation of big profits the promoters thought inflated capitalization justified.

The subsequent history of each of these "trusts" has followed one of two courses. Where the idea of economies in production dominated, the company proceeded to cultivate its field intensively and to replace the water in its capital by real assets. This process has made some of the "trusts" strong and prosperous. In companies where the idea of eliminating competition dominated, the directors began by buying out—at excessive prices, of course—every independent concern that started. This process inflated the capitalization further and soon came to an end because of the exhaustion of ability to buy; then there was nothing to do but turn to efficiency and economy. Some trusts were nearly bankrupt before they reformed, and have not yet been able to get on a firm footing. Others saw the light sooner, and are now fairly prosperous, but not so strong as the few that took the right course at the start. In practically every case, however, the opposition has grown faster than the "trust."

Evidently the separation of one of the efficiently managed concerns into four or five units would not prevent each unit from operating just as efficiently and profitably as before, while the dissolution of an inefficiently managed concern might make some of the parts more successful than they had been. The fact that in nearly all cases opposition has grown rapidly is good evidence that the size of the great combines is not their strongest point.

Peoria Life.

F. J. R., Dixon, Ill.—The Peoria Life Insurance company has been in business eight years and has had a steady growth. It had $14,745,920 of insurance in force on Jan. 1 last, being a gain of $2,786,914 for the year. Assets were $1,062,387. The company has had the advantage of an unusually low death rate thus far. Its management expenses are moderate. Death claims are settled promptly. Investments are principally mortgage loans which yield a high rate.

Brief Answers.

I. C., Farmington, Ill.—American Tobacco common is speculative. The company pays 20 per cent a year and barely earned it last year. Net earnings have been decreasing slowly for several years. Further decrease will cause a reduction of dividend.

C. A. B., Sioux City, Ia.—Under the Missouri Pacific reorganization plan stockholders on payment of a $50 assessment receive $50 in new general mortgage 4s and $100 par value of new common stock.

MARKET SHOWS WAITING MOOD; QUIET RESULTS

German and Mexican Situations Lead to Dullness Instead of Selling Pressure.

The market was again disturbed in a small way. It opened firm followed by absence of buying power that led to declines below the opening quotations. It would be difficult to discover any special motives operating. The German and Mexican situations did not look favorable. Instead, however, of selling pressure of consequence there was dullness. The underlying feeling was the kind that suggests waiting rather than acting on possible eventualities. Predictions are hardly warranted, but the market's action suggests stolidity over what may happen.

Commission House View.

"Yesterday's market was to my mind rather extraordinary in the strength it showed in the face of all sorts of adverse news. In conversation uptown I find that generally great astonishment is expressed that our range of prices should be only about $3.00 a share over what it was a year ago, excepting only the few spectacular automobile and war stocks, and everyone was trying to explain why, after a year of unrivaled prosperity, the stock market has not shown a more confident spirit.

"I think that this extraordinary phenomenon is due to the great European selling which has had to be digested in the last twelve months; secondly, that the policy of the English government in absorbing securities and selling them from time to time in this market is like a wet blanket on any bull speculation; and thirdly, and most important, that the allies have now for eighteen months predicted that within the next few weeks we would commence to see them accomplish something in the way of an initiative.

"I think this is the main reason why the market hangs fire. If the allies really start to accomplish some of the things they claim they are going to, I predict a real bull movement, but not until then."

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD.

A regular dividend of 10 per cent and an extra bonus of 10 per cent on outstanding common stock has been recommended by the directors of the Cunard steamship line. The directors also have declared the regular 5 per cent dividend on the £1,135,000 of cumulative preferred stock. The operations last year showed net profits of £1,721,186 after deducting a reserve for contingent liabilities arising out of the war. The gross earnings were £4,457,410, compared with £4,078,675 for 1914. The company on Dec. 31 last had twenty-eight ships with a gross tonnage of 304,598, as against twenty-seven ships with a gross tonnage of 316,864 in 1914.

The oil stocks evince a tendency to work lower. No special animating motive appears. Speculation for the time being has died out. As the issues become inactive they lose in price. Meanwhile profits continue to grow.

According to Wall street advices the liquidation in stocks has been followed by a ready absorption of offerings. This appears to be the view held in Chicago. Some houses report their lines have been reduced 40 per cent, a rather noteworthy shrinkage that may be taken to indicate an improvement in the market position.

New York makes the suggestion that in conservative financial circles more attention is being given to the undertone of raw material prices, especially pig iron. It is reported that expert investigators have discovered signs of an approaching reaction since there is evidence that allied munition purchases are likely to diminish from now on.

Directors of the Atlas Powder company have decided that of the $9,500,000 additional stock to be authorized by shareholders at the special meeting on April 18, a certain portion will be put out to provide larger working capital and to cover the company's increased investments in materials and new construction work.

Butte and Superior for the year ended Dec. 31, 1915, showed gross profits of $9,125,947, being equal to $33.47 per share on the 272,697 shares outstanding, against $5.30 per share earned on the 272,018 shares the previous year. While the company is called a copper one it is a zinc producer.

The Pennsylvania railroad has placed orders for steel rails for 1917 delivery aggregating 205,000 tons. This is one of the largest tonnages of rails that the Pennsylvania system has ever placed at one time, and is said to be about six months ahead of the usual period for ordering the next year's requirements.

In the copper market domestic consumers are reported to continue anxious as heretofore to place orders, while new foreign inquiries are putting in an appearance. Producers express the belief that there will be a continuation of buying for a much longer period than was thought possible.

An order for twenty-six locomotives was placed today by the Reading railway company with the Baldwin locomotive works. Twenty of the engines will be of the Mikado and six of the Mallet type. The order will amount to about $1,000,000.

For the first time in months steel manufacturers report a quieter market. Inasmuch as the mills are sold up for the remainder of the year and in some instances into next year, no dissatisfaction with the situation is expressed.

The annual report of the Eastman Kodak company shows net profits of $15,741,453 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1915, against $11,303,012 the previous year. The surplus after dividends was $3,651,831, as compared with $5,083,230 in 1914.

The Columbia Copper company reports a deficit of $24,917 for the calendar year 1915.

OIL UNITED WESTERN
has advanced 25 points in the last month
WHY?

BECAUSE—The Standard Oil Company advanced the price of oil on this company's contract.

BECAUSE—The United Western has just bought another producing property in California.

BECAUSE—Drilling has just started this week on the company's large acreage in Wyoming.

Write for Special Circular No. 18

Stock active on the N. Y. Curb around 80c per share and is the most attractive purchase of the low priced oil shares.

BUTTE-DETROIT COPPER AND ZINC MINING COMPANY
At 70 Cents a Share
Capitalization 2,500,000 Shares
Par Value $1.00

This company has acquired control of the Ophir mine and mill located in the heart of Butte, in which it is believed immense copper and zinc ore bodies will be opened up at depth. A shaft is now down 1065 feet.

Engineer Creden says the Ophir mine contains some of the strongest of the veins that have made the Butte Camp the world's largest producer of copper, and that the Ophir is in the same peripheral zone as the Butte & Superior mine.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS
J. F. AUSTIN - PRESIDENT
Manager, Ingersoll-Gaukler Co., Detroit, Mich.
J. S. PISHON - TREASURER

ELLERY C. WRIGHT - DIRECTOR
Woodward & Wright, Last Manufacturers, Brockton, Mass.
CHAS. A. WILCOX - DIRECTOR
Chas. A. Wilcox & Co., Merchants, Boston, Mass.

MINE MANAGEMENT
Wm. L. Creden, E. M., Managing Director of the Company, will be in charge of the mine development work. The shaft will be sunk to the 2,000-foot level as rapidly as possible. A fund of $300,000 will be provided for the deep development of the property. This sum is larger than the estimated cost of sinking the shaft an additional 1000 feet.

We recommend the purchase of stock in this mine because of its market possibilities and also because Engineer Creden believes that with deep development it will become one of the richest in the Butte Camp.

Copper Dividends Paid in First Quarter of 1916

¶ The unparalleled prosperity of the copper industry is reflected by dividends, as above, distributed by thirty-two strictly copper producing companies.

¶ These dividends, though the greatest to date in the history of the industry, by no means reflect anywhere near the extraordinary profits of the copper producers. They are, in fact, 50% less than the indicated earnings of the companies in question.

¶ As a result, copper shareholders are receiving millions of dollars in increased dividends, and they may look for still larger disbursements.

¶ Free statistical Copper Book sent upon request, together with circular giving list of the best purchases among the dividend-paying coppers. Ask for 18-CT, including booklet explaining

WALL STREET COMPLACENT.

New York, April 15.—Wall street chose to regard the foreign situation with more complacency today and prices of most important stocks hardened slightly after an early period of hesitancy. Trading was too light and circumscribed, however, to justify detailed or specific comment, aside from a fair demand for the rails, notably the eastern group. New York Central led that division, probably in consequence of the remarkable statement of earnings for the last year.

The bulk of the trading, which included the usual week end settlement of outstanding contracts, was made up of such speculative favorites as Crucible and United States Steels, Mexican Petroleum, Mercantile Marines, and a few equipment issues like American and Baldwin Locomotives. Mexicans improved generally and a few obscure specialties showed irregular gains.

Paris Exchange Recovers.

In the broader field of finance the outstanding was the substantial recovery in exchange on Paris, the demand rate falling back to 600 from yesterday's record quotation of 609. The change was naturally attributed to the statement of the French financial agent in this country, which bore promise of early relief from recent anomalous conditions.

According to authorities general trade shows no fear of international conditions and higher prices for raw and finished materials are in themselves no check to superabundant activity. Jobbers and retailers in mercantile lines report a continuance of demand and legitimate enterprises are enjoying a full measure of prosperity.

Bonds were easier today, that trend being most marked in the Anglo-French 5s, in which heavy sales were made at 95. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Mercantile paper, 3@3½ per cent. Sterling: Sixty day bills, 4.73; demand, 4.67½; cables, 4.77 1-16. Francs: Demand, 6.01; cables, 6.00. Marks: Demand, 73¼; cables, 73⅜. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds irregular.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS

LONDON, April 15.—Money supplies are shrinking owing to purchases of treasury bills. The stock market was decidedly dull, even for a Saturday, but the tone was generally good. British funds were sustained, oil shares were strong, and a moderate business was done in rubber and mining stocks. The French loan declined. The recovery in Wall street yesterday helped the tone in the American section, though business was very slack. Bar silver improved further on a continuance of buying orders on a market bare of stock. Bar silver, 30⅝d per ounce. Money, 4@4½ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 4⅝@4¾ per cent; three months, 4⅝@4¾ per cent.

PARIS, April 15.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Rentes, 61f 80c; exchange on London, 28f 75c; 5 per cent loan, 88f 25c.

STATE BANKS OF CHICAGO SET NEW HIGH RECORD FOR DEPOSITS—REACH $658,022,058 ON APRIL 12

Reports of ninety-three Chicago state banks setting forth their condition at the commencement of business April 12 made a new high deposit record with a total of $658,022,058, an increase of $21,419,000, or 3.3 per cent. Combined with the deposit figures of March 7 of the national banks at the date of their last published statements the total of deposits for ninety-three state and twenty national banks the grand total is over $1,320,000,000, an increase of more than 10 per cent. Cash resources of the state banks under review gained 3 per cent, while loans expanded about twice that amount.

Among the individual exhibits the Illinois Trust and Savings bank shows a new high record in deposits with a total above $112,000,000. The Continental and Commercial Trust also made a record with $40,110,000, a gain of about $8,500,000. The First Trust is also at its highest point with a gain of $400,000 over Jan. 25. The Central Trust company is up $600,000. A typographical error was responsible for figures in THE TRIBUNE yesterday indicating the Central Trust had decreased its cash by nearly $5,000,000. The cash account is steady; the error lay in the fact the previous statement was about $5,000,000 above the actual amount. Following is a summary of loans, deposits, and cash resources of state and national banks, together with individual exhibits of the state institutions:

EASTERN FREIGHT EMBARGO MODIFIED BY NEW HAVEN.

Domestic Shipments for All Points in New England Will Be Accepted with Minor Exceptions.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, where the freight blockade, due largely to the export situation, reached its peak, has modified its embargo so that domestic freight for all points in New England will be accepted, with minor exceptions. The new order became effective Friday night at midnight and is probably a forerunner of a general embargo modification by New England lines. Export and coastwise freights are still under the ban except where definite sailings have been arranged for before shipment. In conclusion the order says:

"Impress on all shippers and receivers of freight that it will be necessary for them to arrange shipments in moderation and to utilize to the fullest extent the carrying capacity of all cars used if another embargo is to be escaped."

Bridge Closed Today.

The city bridge department will close the Twelfth street bridge to street car and vehicular traffic today from 6 a. m. to 12 noon.

NATION-WIDE CELEBRATION FOR ELECTRICAL INDUSTRY.

Leaders in Enterprises Plan Week's Observance to Educate People in Uses of Power.

New York, April 15.—Men prominent in electrical enterprises throughout the country met here today and decided to hold a nation-wide celebration from Dec. 2 to 9, this year, "to bring home to persons in every town and city of the United States the increasing adaptations of electricity in human effort, both in peace and during war."

The plan will include special illuminations and parades in many cities and the promoters have designated the period covered by the celebration as "Electrical week." Prizes will be offered for a suitable design to commemorate the occasion.

WISCONSIN NORMAL SCHOOL WINS 200,000 ACRES OF LAND

Supreme Court Approves Findings of Referee on Litigation Over Forest Reserve.

Madison, Wis., April 15.—Long litigation over the ownership of the lands in the state forestry reserve in northern Wisconsin was closed today, when the Wisconsin Supreme court approved the findings of Judge S. D. Hastings, the referee, declaring that the state normal school fund owns practically 200,000 acres of these lands as a trust.

Moreover, the court orders the state to restore to the normal school fund over $1,000,000 which has been used by the general fund of the state from the normal school funds.

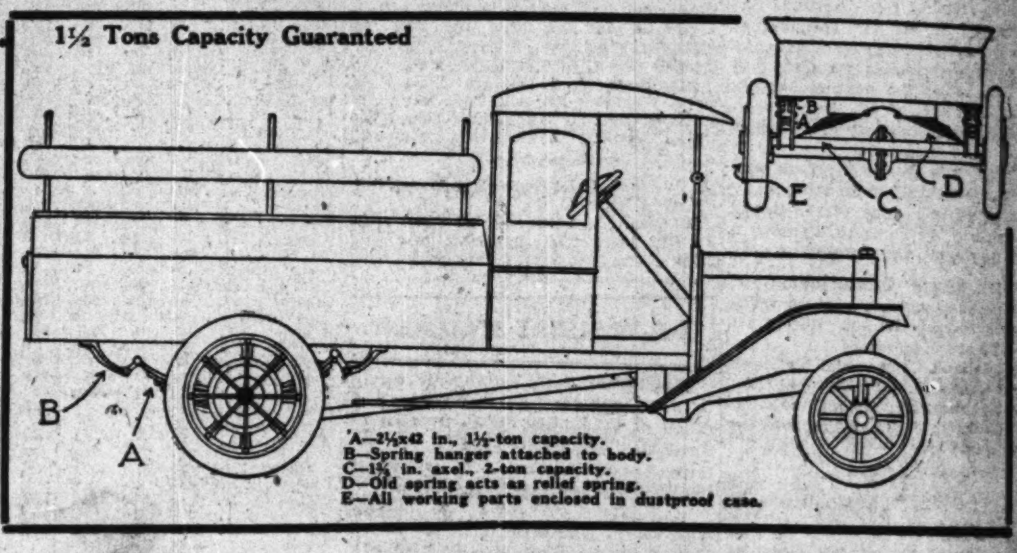
From Pleasure Car to Truck and Back Again
IN ONE HOUR

Lakeside
2 MOTOR TRUCK IN 1 PLEASURE CAR
Convertible

SETS A NEW PRICE RECORD $195



1½ Tons Capacity Guaranteed

A—2½x42 in., 1½-ton capacity.
B—Spring hanger attached to body.
C—1¾ in. axel., 2-ton capacity.
D—Old spring acts as relief spring.
E—All working parts enclosed in dustproof case.

ONE YEAR AHEAD OF THE TIMES

Pleasure and utility combined

The Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible is an answer to the demand of the man who wants to use his pleasure car as a pleasure car week-ends and on special occasions—and yet wants to be able to convert it into a strong, reliable, economical truck for hauling merchandise during the week.

In other words, why buy a formed truck with no patent protection that, once converted from a pleasure car into a truck, cannot be changed back again into a pleasure car, when you can buy a Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible with patent protection?

Or why spend your good money for both a truck and a pleasure car when you can take ANY PLEASURE CAR, new or second hand, with a chain or shaft drive, convert it into a one-ton truck (1½ ton capacity guaranteed) and then back into a pleasure car as you will—in not more than one hour's time? This we guarantee you can do with the Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible.

Lakeside convertible advantages

First of all—consider this never-before price—$195. Then consider, if you will, the convenience BOTH for pleasure and utility.

Another advantage is the long wheel base that will, without any extensions whatsoever, carry between 7 to 8 feet loading capacity back of the driver's seat. When converted into a motor truck—it is a REAL MOTOR TRUCK—not a make-shift.

Here's another big Lakeside Convertible advantage well worth considering: It has its own SEPARATE axle of high grade steel, which we do not believe it will be possible to bend or break under the heaviest loads—it is UNLIKE many of the so-called appliances and attachments which claim that all the weight rests on the wheels.

Mechanism enclosed dustproof

The working parts in any motor truck to give long, reliable service must be protected from dust, mud, and rain. In the Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible ALL moving parts are enclosed in housings that keeps the dust and grit out of the mechanism. This is a big money and trouble saving precaution—no expense has been spared in building the Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible RIGHT from front to rear axle.

There is nothing complicated. It has simple parts—few parts—nothing to get out of order. The change can be made by one man in less than one hour and he need not be an expert mechanic—no other tool necessary than a monkey wrench. We give you full detailed instructions—and you simply follow directions. There is nothing extra to buy—the Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible comes to you complete at the amazingly low price of $195—all ready for instant use.

Many uses, too

Get this: Your regular tournig car or runabout wheels may be put back on the pleasure car as it appeared originally if you desire to take your family out for a pleasure spin.

You can use your pleasure car as a Tractor for towing light or heavy loads and for many other uses, WITHOUT REMOVING THE PLEASURE CAR BODY.

By simply jacking up both hind wheels, the rim of one wheel may be used as a pulley (or a separate pulley put right on to our axle). By reversing our hubs, BOTH wheels are locked, throwing the differential out of play, thus preventing any wear or movement whatsoever on the small gears or pinions. This insures very much HIGHER POWER than by the old method of jacking up only one wheel. The Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible will work equally as well with a Maxwell, Buick or Ford as with a 60 H. P. car. Farmers and truck growers can use it for tractor and cultivating work with absolutely satisfactory results.

$195 price a big surprise

If you have investigated other so-called "convertible trucks," you have a pleasant surprise coming to you when you examine the Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible, and you, too, will wonder why we can afford to sell such remarkable value at such a low price.

There is no secret about it. Our Engineer simply applied every day common sense in the construction. Fewer parts means lower cost. Economies in the factory also mean lower cost. Being satisfied with a fair, legitimate live-and-let-live profit also means a lower cost to you.

Demand will exceed supply

Just as we furnish you easy to follow instructions how to convert the Lakeside 2-in-1 from a Pleasure Car to a One Ton Truck and back again, so do we furnish you with easy to understand instructions how to operate it as a truck—you can drive it just as easy as a Maxwell, Buick or Ford, or any other big pleasure car.

Owing to the European war it isn't any easy job to get a liberal stock of ALL the materials we require. We are putting through a large quantity now—but at this unheard of price of $195, and the many advantages, we cannot promise that you can get your Lakeside 2-in-1 Convertible unless you ACT PROMPTLY. One thing we DO know—there is such a tremendous demand for a combination pleasure car and motor truck at this price that the demand will exceed the supply.

ZEAL, NOT TALK, YIELDED STATE MORE ARTILLERY

What One Citizen Has Done to Help Reduce the Pitiable Shortage of Guns.

TEST NEW RADIO PLANT.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The wireless operator at the stockyards has often heard the continents whispering to each other. His network of antennae, stretched above the roof of the pavilion, has often caught from the air messages on their way from South America to Europe. But yesterday that commonplace miracle bored him. He had more important business on hand.

Every sixty minutes, on the exact hour, he was straining his ears to get the last word from a little portable wireless outfit which was being moved along the road from Chicago to Willow Springs. And each time he caught the impulse he snapped back a message of congratulation.

Given Field Test.

It was the first time any part of the equipment of Batteries D and E, Field artillery, I. N. G., had been in service, at least outside of the armory. Along with the wireless plant, a gift to the batteries from a friend, went the headquarters detail of some fifteen men and officers, the reel wagon, furnished by the war department, which carries three miles of telephone wire for field use, and some of the most daring scouts in the organization. From the city limits to Willow Springs they covered the country thoroughly, stringing their phone wires as they went, picking out the best location for their three inch guns, and keeping in constant touch with headquarters at the stockyards.

It was a little more than a year ago that the present Maj. Charles R. Vincent of the artillery battalion was badly bitten by the bug of military preparedness. Unlike the majority of patriots, he did not stop with talk. His study of the facts revealed that of all the weak spots in the military establishment of the United States the shortage in field artillery was the most alarming.

For One Mile of Front.

In the whole army, he discovered, there were only six regiments of field artillery, with a total of 144 guns, by no means enough to take proper care of a single mile of battle front. He thought of the hundreds of miles of battle trenches in Europe, and made up his mind that the improvement of artillery conditions was the most pressing need.

Along with the lack of guns goes, of course, an equal lack of trained artillery officers. Vincent decided to start a school for the training of such officers. It is significant that more than 100 young men, most of them college graduates, with a background of engineering or other technical education, were quickly interested. Without official recognition or equipment of any kind they drilled regularly for more than eight months. Their drill hall was the lobby of a downtown office building. Finally it became clear that they must have guns to work with and a regular military organization to hold the men together. But the state law provided for only three batteries. They were already organized. A new battery was out of the question. At least it would have been to most men.

Lobbies Bill Through.

Vincent went down to Springfield, where the legislature was in session, and lobbied through a bill authorizing the organization of not one, but three, new batteries of field artillery—batteries D, E, and F. The bill went through so late in the session that there was no chance to get any appropriation for housing the new troops. It sounds rather difficult to organize a battery of 130 men, with guns, wagons, horses, and a lot of other traps and not a sign of a roof to cover them. Not at all—provided you have energy and friends.

Battery D was mustered into the national guard last September with Vincent as captain. A month later there were so many recruits that Battery E was formed, with H. J. Reilly of THE TRIBUNE, a West Point graduate, at its head.

Meanwhile the tireless Vincent was out using pull, "drag," influence, eloquence, and all other possible levers with the idea of finding at least a temporary home for the two commands. Somehow and somewhere he got the money to rent an old Turkish bath establishment out near the stockyards and to remodel it for armory purposes. Through Arthur Leonard permission was secured to use the International pavilion at the yards as a drill hall.

Presently a third battery—Battery F—was organized among the students of the state university at Urbana. The three new batteries were formed into a battalion. Up on the north shore Battery C was organized, with a membership largely made up of young men who live in the suburbs between the city and Waukegan. With Battery B here in Chicago and Battery A down state, it forms another battalion. All that is lacking now is a regimental organization to put Illinois in the front rank of states for field artillery.

The war department at Washington has been generous to the new batteries. To each of them have been sent four three-inch field guns—corresponding closely to the famous French "75s"—a dozen caissons or ammunition wagons, a battery wagon, a wagon for stores, and three escort wagons. The government has also bought some fifty horses for the use of the batteries.

Details of Equipment.

Each private in the artillery is armed with an automatic revolver and carries a blanket roll, with half a shelter tent, a canteen, saddlebag, first aid kit, and extra clip case.

All the batteries in the state are ordered to go into camp for a couple of weeks in July at Sparta, Wis., where, billeted with the men of the regular army, they will have a chance to use their three inch guns for the first time at regular distances.

A first class crew can fire twenty shots a minute from one of these guns, and their effective range is from four to five miles.

It would be a tremendous advantage if, before encampment, all the batteries in the state could be consolidated into regimental formation under the command of a regular army officer.

"PUT OUT"

That's What Attractive Young Wife Says Her Husband Did to Her One Night Late at Their Home Four Miles from Town.

Mrs. Clifford Cherry

Young Mrs. Cherry Files Suit on Grounds of Misconduct, Cruelty, Drinking.

PUT OUT AT NIGHT, CHARGE.

Aurora, Ill., April 15.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ruth Myers Cherry, 20 years old, a young woman whose beauty and charm have won her note in the Fox river valley, today filed a suit for divorce at Yorkville, Ill., against her husband, Clifford Cherry, 34 years old, one of the biggest land owners in Kendall county.

Makes Three Charges.

Mrs. Cherry charges cruelty, excessive drinking, and misconduct. She asks the custody of their baby girl, 1 year old.

The couple were married three years ago. Cherry is a son of the late Charles Cherry, who was one of the prominent men in the legislature ten to fifteen years ago, and a manager of former Senator Albert Hopkins' campaign for his seat in the upper house.

Six Feet, Weighs 400.

Clifford Cherry ran for the legislature several years ago. He is an immense man, standing over six feet and weighing more than 400 pounds. Mrs. Cherry said today that she and her husband separated about two weeks ago.

"We lived together until he put me out at 10:30 o'clock at night," she said, "at our home, four miles from town, and I went to a neighbor's for refuge. I am now staying with my mother, Mrs. Ida W. Meyers of Oswego."

IF HIS NAME WERE JANUS THIS HEAD WOULD BE EASY.

We Could Say Something About a "Two Named Janus" or About the Symbol of Peace.

If a man has a name that offends him the law says he may change it if his reasons appear good to the court. But the law forgot friend wife, and so did Lawrence Janas, 1413 Cleaver street.

On March 24 Janas went to the Superior court, where he was sworn in as a naturalized American citizen.

As a little surprise for his wife and daughter he took home a new name, that of his maternal grandfather. It was Lawrence Wendrychofski.

The next day he appeared in the office of Merton A. Sturges with his wife and daughter.

"They won't stand for the new name," he said. "It is the first time in my married life that I have had trouble at home."

Yesterday Judge Sullivan gave Wendrychofski permission to become Janas once more.

SALOON LICENSE REVOKED.

Women Are Allowed to Frequent Back Room, Police Chief Says.

The saloon license of Sam and Harry Goldberg, 500 North Clark street, yesterday was revoked by Mayor Thompson. According to the police, Goldberg brothers allowed women to frequent the back room. The report of Capt. W. F. Russell, who was recently appointed captain and assigned to the Chicago avenue station, said Judge Uhlir characterized the Goldbergs as "unfit to operate a saloon." The license was previously revoked by former Mayor Harrison and restored "on condition they keep women entirely out of the place."

"THE FAIRIES' CHILD"

Austin School Children Present Fairy Queen Play.

Janice Beverly
Elizabeth Smith
Gene Tucker

Fifteen children from Austin, pupils of the Chicago College of Music and Expression, all under 9 years of age, presented a one act play called "The Fairies' Child" at the Ziegfeld theater yesterday morning. Teresa Hand played the rôle of the fairy queen and others who took leading parts were Janice Beverly, Elizabeth Smith, and Gene Tucker. The performance was under the direction of Miss Ethel Woodstock and Miss Marjorie Valentine.

DIVORCES C. P. GOODSON, FORMER CHICAGO PASTOR.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—[Special.]—Mrs. Bertha Chapman Goodson, daughter of the Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, evangelist and formerly pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian church, has been divorced from her husband, the Rev. Columbus Polk Goodson.

The decree was obtained in Lima, O., on Feb. 21, and only became known today. The grounds for the divorce were given as gross neglect. Two months before the divorce was given Mrs. Goodson returned to her father's home, Jamaica Estates, Jamaica, L. I.

Mr. Goodson and Bertha Irene Chapman were married at Warsaw, Ind., on June 2, 1908. He then was pastor of the Highland Park Presbyterian church, Chicago, and was about 30 years old. After the honeymoon they lived at Highland Park until 1911.

MINSTREL PRIMROSE WEDS.

Rochester, N. Y., April 15.—[Special.]—George Henry Primrose, the minstrel, was married this afternoon in this city to his secretary, Mrs. Viola Katherine Trueblood, of Jacksonville, Fla. Mrs. Trueblood is a widow, 31 years old. Primrose gave his age at 62. He lives in Oregon.

CITY CLUB HOLDS ELECTION.

The City Club of Chicago held its annual election yesterday. The officers for the ensuing year are: President, Frank I. Moulton; vice president, William Scott Bond; secretary, Roy C. Osgood; treasurer, Harold H. Rockwell; directors, Alfred L. Baker, George H. Mead, Edgar A. Bancroft, and Shelby M. Singleton.

WHO WROTE MIDWAY MOTTO? CHORUS OF PROFS.: "I DID."

Several Claim Authorship of "Let Knowledge Increase So That Life May Be Enriched."

Somebody wrote a line of Latin which came to be accepted as the motto of the University of Chicago. Converted into English, it runs like this:

"Let knowledge grow from more to more and so be human life enriched."

Who was it that wrote the motto? Really, they're in quite a stew about it out on the Midway.

Dr. Paul Shorey, professor of Greek, says he wrote it. There is a persistent rumor to the effect that Dr. William Gardner Hale, head of the Latin department, is the author, and Dr. Hale hasn't denied it. There is a report quoting Prof. G. J. Laing of the Latin faculty as saying a Storey-Hale collaboration produced the pithy sentence, but this Prof. Laing yesterday denied. And Thomas Wakefield Goodspeed, secretary of the board of trustees, who is writing a history of the university, says the truth must be discovered, if it requires the combined energies of Diogenes, Sherlock Holmes, and Capt. Nicholas Hunt.

Gotham Lawyer Arrested.

Henry W. Scott, a New York attorney, was given into the custody of Detective F. M. Cornwall of Washington, D. C., last night, to be taken back to the capital city, where he is accused of passing a worthless $50 check. Scott denied the charge and returned voluntarily to face the accusation.

COAL TO GO UP 50 CENTS A TON, DEALERS' ORDER

Announcement Made by Retailers, Who Blame War and Labor.

THE CONSUMERS ARE HIT.

Coal is going up.

Unsettled labor conditions, increases in the cost of explosives brought on by the large demand made by the European war, and an advance of 25 cents per ton in freight rates to Chicago, dealers say, will necessitate a raise in price of from 10 to 50 cents a ton to the consumer for both domestic and steam fuel.

Wage Advance Granted.

An announcement to this effect has been issued by N. H. Kendall, commissioner of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association. While the hard coal operators and the miners have agreed there will be suspension of operations until after negotiations over the wage scale have been completed, he says, winter prices will be continued.

"Operators in the smokeless districts have granted their men a flat 10 per cent increase," said Mr. Kendall. "Basic wage scales in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio have been fixed. Operators in those states declare their minimum advance due to the higher pay to the men and the rapid increases in the costs of materials will be at least 10 cents a ton. In other districts the minimum will have to be considerably greater.

Freight Rate Factor.

"Some of the supplies used in and about coal mines have advanced as much as 300 per cent during the last year.

"In addition the railroads have petitioned the interstate commerce commission and the Illinois public utilities commission for an advance of 5 cents a ton in the freight rate on Illinois and Indiana coals."

SHE FOUND HEADACHE CURE

And Then Mrs. Mary Powell of Evanston Married Him.

Mrs. Mary Powell of Evanston, whose headaches were a source of annoyance until she met Dr. Merritt Craven, an osteopath, has taken measures to dispel headaches hereafter. She was married to the doctor yesterday in Oak Park. The ceremony took place in the home of the Rev. Charles Craven, an uncle of the groom. Dr. Craven is a son of the late Rev. Thomas Craven, a distinguished Methodist divine and brother of Dr. Jane Craven, a Pittsburgh physician, who is now in France engaged in field hospital work.

NEW COUNTRY CLUB FORMED

Only Those Who Own Cottages at Paw Paw Lake Are Admitted.

Plans were completed yesterday at a banquet in the Hamilton club for the permanent organization of the Cottagers' Country club at Paw Paw Lake, Michigan. The club is to be an exclusive organization composed only of those who own summer cottages at the lake.

A building, which will be completed in June, has been bought for $25,000.

At the banquet yesterday the following were elected officers: Fred L. Meckel, president; Dexter B. Sweet, vice president, and Chester I. Monroe, secretary and treasurer.

TIGERS VICTORIOUS!

Baseball fans, to the number of 31,000, turned out in Chicago April 12 to witness the opening game of the season between the "Tigers" of Detroit and the Chicago "White Sox." It is said that this is the largest crowd that ever attended an opening game.

APACHES TRAIL VILLA.

The war department has chosen a large band of man-hunting Apache Indians to help trail Villa. In this issue of the Selig-Tribune you are shown the red men holding a "war hop" before leaving to join the columns of Pershing.

ZOUAVES DISPATCHED TO MEET GERMANS.

A regiment of Zouaves arriving in Saloniki, Greece, were hurriedly dispatched to the front to meet the new German offensive. The picture showing the hasty march is a good one and from it one acquires a pretty fair idea of what the word "hurry" means in war.

GOLFERS GET EARLY START IN TOURNEYS

Clubs Stage Events for Players Brought Out by Fine Weather.

FORE!

With the opening of the local golf season yesterday J. G. Davis, dean of Chicago golf writers, will keep "Tribune" readers posted on all news and gossip of the local clubs. Mr. Davis attended the first national tourney held in Chicago in 1897 and has "covered" the field ever since.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Time was when Decoration day generally marked the opening of the local competitive golf season, but this is a rapid age, and yesterday a number of the clubs tilted the lid on what promises to be the busiest season in the history of the game in this locality.

This assumption is based on the unprecedented business done on the southern and California courses this winter, and the early patronage given the Chicago clubs. Almost every course in the Chicago district was open for play, the fine weather during the week having dried out most of the wet spots.

Throng at Jackson Park.

Jackson park was the mecca for enough players to create a wait of two hours, and the Jackson Park club swung into line with a class event. Glen Oak, whose new drainage canal has worked wonders on the lower parts of the course, was able to stage the qualifying round of a spring tournament, while Park Ridge, Calumet, and Maywood held their initial competitions.

Patrick M. McCann won the tournament at Jackson park, finishing first in Class A with a score of 77. J. H. Dillon was second with 78. J. F. Stewart and A. B. Cole tied at 85 in Class B, W. J. English topping the field in Class C, with an even century.

Six Flights at Glen Oak.

Glen Oak members qualified in six flights of eight each for the spring tournament, the first round of which will be played next Saturday. The qualifiers:

First flight—E. Moriel, Dr. Nichols, E. F. Fogarty, V. A. Biggs, Frank Lavin, Frank Liddy, J. Byrnes, L. L. Rittenhouse.

Second flight—H. A. Fosburg, A. H. McKenzie, E. B. Murphy, A. W. Lindstrom, R. C. Kersley, E. Garneau, Ed Middleton, F. Sturgis Jr.

Third flight—A. Gasnick, E. B. Monteith, T. J. Hyman, G. A. Knight, R. J. Speck, M. F. Scanlon, G. Hill, G. Wood.

Fourth flight—H. R. Foster, F. D. Kilmer, O. George, G. McReynolds, F. W. Pringle, W. F. Sargent, C. Elliott, J. Yates.

Fifth flight—D. James, H. S. Elliott, W. Hodge, A. Adland, P. H. Olson, A. Barrett, F. L. Rossbach, F. A. Jones.

Park Ridge Sweepstakes.

Fifty members competed in the ball sweepstakes at the Park Ridge Country club, G. M. Lewis getting the biggest amount of the pot with a card of 91. T. P. Hodge, with 96, took second prize, W. E. Oliver and J. B. Davis dividing third. F. Baldwin was fourth and R. A. Gunn and Berry Rockwell split fifth prize. W. W. Durham was sixth. Play was over temporary greens.

Handicap at Calumet.

Charley Grimes, F. W. Puckey, W. H. Leonard, and C. S. Rainey tied in a blind bogey handicap at Calumet, eighty-five players taking part. The quartet equaled the blind figures, which were 83. Grimes, who is club champion, led the foursome with gross of 88, but held a handicap of five. Puckey made the round in 101 and took an allowance of eighteen. Rainey and Leonard had 108 strokes, but were handicapped twenty-five.

Low gross honors for the day also resulted in a tie at 85 between W. L. Eulass, E. A. Eulass, and W. C. Becker. W. L. Eulass and Becker held handicaps of ten, while E. A. Eulass took six. W. Eulass made the first nine holes in 41 and took 44 for the return. E. A. Eulass and Becker took 43 for the first half and tied with 42 for the second nine. Play was over temporary greens.

Other leading scores:

W. H. Langzettel, 104—20—84; H. L. Clapp, 100—16—84; A. H. Witzelben, 109—25—84; J. J. McCutchan, 110—25—85.

Peterson Wins at Maywood.

K. Peterson won opening honors at Maywood when he made the round in 81, in the eighteen hole handicap. He also tied for low net with a handicap of six, which left him with 75. These figures were equaled by W. S. Royce with 110—35—75. Twelve prizes were awarded for the first dozen best scores. Forty members took part in the event, play being over temporary greens. Other prize winners:

Dr. T. A. Davis, 106—30—76; G. E. Munch, 91—12—79; W. R. Brewer, 84—4—80; J. Pettigrew, 95—15—80; Dr. A. H. Whitney, 110—30—80; D. R. Davis, 85—4—81; A. W. Anderson, 90—9—81; H. Rautenbusch, 83—scratch—83; R. A. Appleyard, 103—20—83; Paul Burnett, 84—scratch—84.

INDIANS GET LOWDERMILK.

Manager Jennings of Detroit unloaded one of his wild men of Borneo on Cleveland yesterday when he released Grover Lowdermilk to the Ohio club. After Friday's awful exhibition of pitching in which Lowdermilk got one ball out of a dozen across the plate, Jennings asked for waivers on the human string. Cleveland refused to waive claim and Jennings jumped at the chance to get the waiver price of $2,500 for the elongated Lowdermilk before the Indian owners wised up.

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

APRIL 12.

LENNIE is in town and my hand shakes so that I can hardly write. For diary what can his presence in Chicago mean except that he really cares and has came back in the hopes of seeing me and patching up the differences that is breaking both our hearts. The nine is in Cincinnati for the opening of the season. Then why is Lennie here? My heart tells me the answer. It tells me that he has got permission from Mr. Tinker to be excused from the games at Cincinnati, that he could remain away no longer from the city that holds what is dear to him, that his feelings for me is stronger than his love for the game that he excels in.

I have not yet heard the sound of his voice, but I am expecting every minute to answer the phone and hear the tones that so thrilled me the first time he opened his lips to address me. O diary what will I say when he calls? I must seem cold at first and make him sorry for the words he used in that cruel letter, but it will be hard to not let him judge from my voice that I am dying for a sight of him.

APRIL 13.

Lennie has been here in the office and I have talked to him. But the words I wanted to say I kept back, though I could see it tortured him to find me cold and unresponsive. O that I could of overcame my foolish pride and met his advances half way.

He came in this morning and at first did not speak to me. The silence was inbearable, so at last I assumed an attitude of polite indifference and spoke.

"What did you wish?" I said.

"I certainly don't wish to talk to you," he said, though it nearly killed him to speak the words. "I came up to see Weeghman," he said. "I want to tell him what I think of him."

"Mr. Weeghman is in Cincinnati with the nine," I said.

But I knew Lennie knew that as well as I for the papers had all printed it in the different papers.

"It's a good thing for him he is not here," said Lennie. "I would probably bust his jaw. I guess that is why he ran away to Cincinnati. But he cannot stay in Cincinnati all his life and I will get him sooner or later."

"O, Lennie," I said, "try and calm yourself. In the heat of passion you might go to extremes and ruin all our lives."

"What do you mean?" said Lennie. "What have you got to do with it?"

"O, Lennie," I said, "I guess you know what it means to me."

"Yes," he said. "You tried to make a boob out of me, but I am not the only boob. If I am a boob there is other boobs. It is lucky for you that you are a girl who a gentleman cannot fight with or there would not be enough left of you to flirt with other fellows and try and make a monkey out of them."

"O, Lennie," I said, the tears nearly chokeing my voice. "How can you think that I am a flirt?"

But he was gone and the tears that I could no longer restrain fell unheeded on my desk. That the man I love should think I am a trifler.

APRIL 14.

I could bear it no longer. I have written Lennie a cold dignified note to let him see that a lady will stand for no insults like being called a flirt. My pride demanded that I should write the note which I have coppied down.

"Lennie:

"You are makeing a big mistake and I hope it will not break your heart as it has broken mine. All is over between you and I after what you said yesterday unless you relent and give me a moment of your time to explain. I do not think it fair that my life should be wrecked because of your quarrel with Mr. Weeghman. In that letter I told you exactly what he said about you and I understood little of what it means except that I thought it a compliment. Do not let a misunderstanding blight both our lives. As a gentleman you should come to me and give me a chance to explain. Otherwise it is all at an end between us.

"Your (?) miserable Little Girlie."

And now how can I live through the hours till I hear from him?

WILD BOB BURMAN BURIED.

Imlay City, Mich., April 15.—The funeral of Wild Bob Burman, auto speed king, who met death in the race at Corona, Cal., last Saturday, was held here today. The body lay in state in the Masonic temple until 2 o'clock this afternoon, when the services were conducted. Imlay City was Burman's boyhood home.

TINKERS, HELD TO TWO SWATS, LOSE 2-0 GAME

Schneider Hurls Great Ball, While Reds Earn Runs Off Seaton.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Cincinnati, O., April 15.—[Special.]—Being absolutely helpless at the bat Chicago's new Cubs were licked again today in the final game by the pesky Reds, making the series end with only one victory and three defeats. The score was 2 to 0 and the Cubs were held to two hits, one made by Saier in the second and one by Mulligan in the eighth.

Pete Schneider, who was mauled so badly by the Cubs in the first inning yesterday that he was taken out, came back in a vengeful mind and got even. He hurled as pretty a game as one is likely to see in a season and he was backed by a team playing ball for all get-out.

Seaton Also in Good Form.

Tom Seaton was in dandy form himself, but not strong enough to pitch a shutout game, and a shutout game was the only kind that would have helped. It looked as if Schneider could have gone on shutting out the Cubs until the moon and stars were shining.

Only five hits were made off Seaton and only two of the five were used in the manufacture of the two runs. One, a double by Griffith at the start of the second, was developed into a tally with the aid of Groh's sacrifice bunt and Louden's sacrifice fly. Another, a double by Mollwitz, came in the seventh after Groh had walked and stolen second. The Reds didn't need any more, so it matters not if Seaton was pitching a pretty game.

Both Reds' Runs Earned.

The Cubs did some bad playing in spots, but it didn't help the Reds to their runs. Both were earned, and nothing outside of miracles could have prevented them. Manager Tinker began pulling out the wrecking crew in the eighth, but they were as helpless before Schneider's shoots as the regulars had been.

It is doubtful if the game could have been won even had it been possible for Tinker to call out Ty Cobb, Hans Wagner, Larry Lajoie, Benny Kauff, Ed Delahanty, and Dan Brouthers.

The familiar face and figure of Hal Chase were seen on Red field before the game. The former Sox first sacker reported this morning, coming from his California home, and is expected to replace Mollwitz at first base before many days have passed. Hal has been working with the Coast league teams and seemed ready to go into the game at once.

Artie Phelan passed through Cincinnati on his way from Florida to join the Kansas City team, which opens Tuesday at Columbus. Artie spent the morning visiting with his former Cub pals.

Redlegs Score in Second.

The Cubs could do little with Schneider's curves in the first two rounds. They died three in a row in the opener and Saier began the second with a single, only to have Schulte hit into a double play. Seaton began the first by hitting Killifer on the head with a pitched ball, but Herzog slapped into a double play and K. Williams tapped to the pitcher. In the second the Reds earned a run when Griffith led off with a double past third base. Groh bunted him to third, from where he scored on Louden's sacrifice fly to F. Williams.

A bad play by Mulligan spoiled the third for the Cubs. He started by getting hit by a pitched ball. Fischer bounced to Mollwitz, who stepped on first, then shot to second too late to get Mulligan, but the latter stumbled over the bag and was caught.

In the fourth the Reds added a run when with one out Groh walked and stole second, Fischer's throw going to center field. Schulte got Louden's fly, but Mollwitz drove over Schulte's head for two bases, sending Groh home. Clarke's roller to Yerkes ended it.

Tinkers Weak in Attack.

In the fourth, fifth, and sixth the Cubs were helpless. Flack walked in the seventh, but never got away from first base. Mulligan singled in the eighth after two were out, but his hit was harmless. In the final attack Williams walked after two were out, but the contest ended when Heine Zim rolled an easy one to Louden.

PHILLIES DEFEAT GIANTS IN NINTH BY SQUEEZE PLAY

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—Today's game between Philadelphia and New York, like the two others in the series, was decided in the ninth inning, the home team putting over the deciding tally by working the squeeze play with the bases full and one out. The score was 5 to 4.

E. Burns scored the winning tally when Paskert bunted. Twice during the game New York tied the score, three of the Giants' six hits counting in the run getting. McKechnie joined New York today and played third base. Score:

TRIPLE BY MAGEE WINS FOR BOSTON BRAVES, 4-2

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 15.—With the score tied in the eighth and two men on bases, Magee tripled over Hy Myers' head, winning the second game for Boston against Brooklyn, 4 to 2. Sherod Smith held the Braves to four hits, but poor fielding behind him let in two runs. O'Mara's shortstopping was glaringly bad. Hughes was hit nine times, but perfect support saved him. S. Smith's double, O'Mara' base on balls, and Wheat's two bagger in the sixth scored Brooklyn's two runs Score:

BILLY SUNDAY UMPIRES BALTIMORE PRACTICE TILT.

Baltimore, Md., April 15.—Billy Sunday called balls and strikes on Jack Dunn's Orioles and the Mount St. Joseph college boys this afternoon. Sunday hurried from the tabernacle to the ball park after the afternoon services, in which he preached on the promises of God.

"I have never seen a Christian hitting the ties and panhandling. I have never seen a Christian who was a hobo," said Billy.

After umpiring the ball game the evangelist said 17,559 persons had "hit the trail" while he was in Baltimore. His collections were $44,815.48.

SOX ROOTERS TO CLEVELAND

Members of the Woodland Bards, the White Sox rooters' association, will invade Cleveland on April 25 to attend the opening game of the season there for the Rowlands. President Dunn and Vice President McRoy of the Indians are Bards, and other stockholders also belong to the club. The Chicago delegation will leave at 11:15 on the night of April 24 and get back at 8:10 o'clock the morning of April 26. A banquet will wind up the celebration at Cleveland.

NOTES OF THE CUBS

Cincinnati, O., April 15.—[Special.]—The Cubs, none the worse for wear, left for St. Louis at 9 o'clock to open a three days' session tomorrow.

About 6,000 persons attended the contest, the weather being fine and the enthusiasm aroused.

Either Jim Vaughn or George Pierce is the likely pitcher tomorrow. Tinker thinks left handers ought to lick the Cardinals, so he may give them three in a row.

Hal Chase, looking quite chipper, joined the Reds, arriving from California, where he has done some training. The first time Mollwitz does something wrong Hal is likely to replace him.

Zeider split his finger in tagging Herzog out at second in the ninth inning. Because of that accident he was permitted to go to Chicago tonight and Mike Doolan was kept with the team.

Sixteen youths were presented with diplomas on the diamond before the game, each being a graduate of the school of umpiring conducted here by Bill Hart and Carpenter, two professional umpires. So far none of the sixteen has a job.

Heine Zim became peeved at Umpire Quigley when the latter called a strike on him in the ninth. Heine followed by bounding one to Louden and then running only a little more than half way to first base. If Louden had fumbled or Mollwitz dropped the ball Heine would have had his first trouble of 1916.

CALLAHANS WIN FROM CARDS, 6-1

St. Louis, Mo., April 15.—By bunching hits in the fourth and ninth, Pittsburgh took the last game of the series from St. Louis, 6 to 1. Two singles, a sacrifice, and a double by Schultz gave the visitors two runs in the fourth. Two singles, two bases on balls, and Johnston's triple netted four more in the ninth St. Louis got its lone run in the fifth when Betzel drew a pass, went to second on an infield out, and scored on a single by Snyder. PHILS DROP BAUMGARTNER.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—Ben Tincup, Indian right hand pitcher, and Stanwood F. Baumgartner, former University of Chicago southpaw, were released today by Manager Moran of the Phillies to the Providence club under an optional agreement. Both twirlers joined the Phillies in 1914.

They will leave for their new berths next week.

RED SOX RALLY IN ROUND EIGHT NIPS MACKS, 2-1

Boston, Mass., April 15.—The Red Sox defeated Philadelphia, 2 to 1. It was not until the eighth inning that Boston gained an advantage, and in the ninth Foster's temporary wildness almost cost the Red Sox their one run lead. Foster walked two men but retired Pinch Hitter Stellbauer.

Bush was given a one run lead by Philadelphia in the first inning, when an error by Scott assisted, but Foster was strong from that time on. Barry's single and heady base running, with a single by Foster, counted one for the Red Sox in the fifth, and a double by Scott, a fielder's choice, and Shorten's ringing single sent the locals ahead in the eighth.

Witt, a schoolboy playing his first game for the Athletics, made a good showing notwithstanding three errors. After batting safely in the seventh he went from first to third on an infield out. Score:

KLEPFER BLANKS ST. LOUIS AS CLEVELAND WINS, 3 TO 0.

Cleveland, O., April 15.—Cleveland won its first game of the season, defeating St Louis, 3 to 0. Klepfer pitched great ball, allowing only three hits. Only twenty-nine men faced him, as he issued no passes, and his support was flawless. Not a St. Louis man went beyond first base. Cleveland got numerous men on, but three double plays held the score down. Turner's pop double scored the first two runs, while Gandil's double scored the third. Score:

SUB'S SWAT BEATS YANKEES.

New York, April 15.—New York defeated Washington, 3 to 1. Mullen, substitute first baseman, drove in the winning run with a single in the sixth inning. Fisher was effective in the pinches and was well supported, the locals making three double plays. Joe Judge, first baseman for Washington, was presented with a diamond ring when he came to bat in the first inning, a gift from a large number of fellow employés who attended the game. Score:

SOX SYDELIGHTS

St. Louis today.

Eddie Collins drew three bases on balls in succession, two of them in the first inning.

The Tiger jinx seems to have been completely frozen to death. Long live Chicago's lake zephyrs.

This will be Fielder Jones' first appearance at Comiskey park, as his previous efforts in Chicago's behalf were all exerted on the old Thirty-ninth street grounds.

The Rowlands have yet to learn the necessity of making all the runs they can, for they were careless in their attack yesterday after they had gained a seemingly safe lead.

Ray Schalk made nearly one-third of the base hits accumulated by the White Sox. All three of his swats were singles. Weaver, J. Collins, and Cicotte grabbed two apiece.

It is a long, long time since the White Sox won three straight games from the Tigers, and unless Jennings tames his pitchers it will be longer before he can trim the Sox three straight.

The south side fans gave Billy Sullivan a warm welcome when he donned the mask to catch for the Tigers after Stanage was removed for a pinch hitter who didn't hit in the seventh inning.

Ty Cobb went through the game without a hit, although he drew three bases on balls. He was up in the ninth where a swat would have made a lot of trouble, but Tex Russell disposed of him on a sharp bounder which Tex himself fielded.

John Collins nearly knocked a wheel off Ray Schalk in the second inning. John let the bat slip out of his hands in making a vicious swipe at the ball and the stick went straight at Schalk, who was waiting his turn at bat. Ray tried to hop over the bat, but failed, and it knocked his legs out from under him. In spite of that Schalk went to bat and made a clean hit.

ILLINI SHUT OUT NOTRE DAME, 6-0

Urbana, Ill., April 15.—[Special.]—Gyp Davis, backed by sharp fielding by Illinois, shut out Notre Dame, today, 6 to 0. Walsh held the Illini to six hits, but his wildness was costly and his support shaky The Catholics filled the bases in the ninth, but could not put across a score. Two double plays by the Illini featured. Score:

KEATING SIGNS WITH YANKS.

New York, April 15.—Ray Keating, Yankee pitcher, has signed for the season, ending the only holdout case troubling Manager Donovan. The slim pitcher thought he was entitled to more money than he was offered and for several days would not attach his name to the contract.

ROWLANDS GET SEVEN IN FIRST; CRUSH TIGERS

Walks and Hits Give Sox Great Start in Contest, Ending 9 to 4.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

From a frightful travesty on what Judge Landis dignified as a "national institution," the White Sox emerged victors over Detroit yesterday by a score of 9 to 4 in the final game of the set.

Handed seven runs right off the reel by Bernard Boland, one of Hugh Jennings' zooful of wild men, the Rowlands were able to stave off the determined attacks of the Tigers who rallied and rallied again in the closing innings until they compelled a switch of Sox pitchers and had most of the 15,000 spectators sweating with terror in spite of the cold.

Boland, who started the game against the Sox, was so wild he passed four out of the first five men to bat. Weaver, the exception, poked out a single off the only good ball he was given. This was so bad that Jennings rushed Bill James to the slab only half warmed up. Before James got his bearings the Sox banged home seven runs.

Tigers Put Up Battle.

With that lead the Rowlands apparently were content and, as James had the range when he came back for the second inning, they mogged along, wasting opportunities to increase their score until Detroit twice threatened to tie up the count in the seventh and eighth innings. It required sterling work to subdue them in those rounds.

Scared a bit by these threats the Rowlands combed in two more tallies in their eighth, and still the Tigers fought so hard that they compelled Rowland to switch his defense.

Cicotte, who started on the slab, held the Tigers hitless for four innings and allowed only two hits and one run in six innings. But Eddie was not ready to go the full route and showed it plainly the rest of the way. He had difficulty in getting the ball over. After Cicotte issued his seventh pass, putting two Tigers on the paths with only one out in the ninth, Russell was sent to his rescue and ended the game quickly by disposing of Cobb and Veach.

Seven Runs in First.

The White Sox were handed a long lead of seven runs in the opener, while Jennings was trying to find a pitcher with control. Boland passed Felsch, then put one where Weaver could reach it, and Buck cracked out a single. E. Collins walked, filling the bases. Then Fournier and Jackson were passed forcing Felsch and Weaver home.

Boland was canned after that and James went in with nobody out and the bases choked with Sox. John Collins instantly emptied them with a crashing double to left center. Schalk caught the Tigers off watch with a bunt to Vitt, beating it out easily. J. Collins reached third from where he scored when Terry forced Schalk at second. Cicotte singled to right. Felsch was hit, filling the bases again. Weaver popped out, but Eddie Collins drew his second pass in the inning, forcing Terry home with the seventh tally. Fournier lofted to Cobb for the third out.

Sox Waste Chance to Score.

The Sox threw away some runs in their fourth by bum base running, then the Tigers started scoring in the fifth. Heilman opened with a double to right, and Young followed with a single to left, but Jackson stopped Heilman on third. Stanage fouled out. James forced Young at second and Heilman crossed the plate. Bush popped.

Once more in the home fifth the Sox wasted good opportunities. A base on balls, a batsman hit, and a wild throw, failed to score a run because the locals were so far ahead they scorned a sacrifice. A fast double play, with Terry pivoting, spoiled a Tiger chance in the sixth, and the White Sox subsided three in a row.

Detroit crept two runs closer in the seventh. Crawford singled, Heilman doubled, and Young walked, filling the bases with none out. Jennings rushed his militia to the front. Kavanaugh, batting for Stanage, forced Crawford at the plate. Harper batted for James and hit to Terry, who fumbled, letting Heilman score. Bush flied to J. Collins, scoring Young from third. Vitt ended it with a rainbow to Jackson. Jennings put Boehler on the slab and Billy Sullivan behind the bat, and disposed of the Sox easily in their half.

Tigers Score in Eighth.

One more Tiger run came over in the eighth, which Cobb opened with a walk. Veach lined a fly to Felsch. Crawford's out put Cobb on second, and Heilman scored him with his third straight hit. Young walked. Burns batted for Sullivan and forced Heilman out at third.

Roused to action by the threats of the enemy Rowland's men scored two in their eighth. Fournier smashed a three bagger against the right field bleacher screen and scored on Jackson's single. J. Collins' out put Joe on second and he scored on Schalk's single to center.

McKee batted for Boehler in the ninth and singled, then let Fuller run for him. Bush popped out. Cicotte's wild throw to first let Fuller to third. Vitt walked. Cicotte was taken out and replaced by Russell, who retired Cobb and Veach.

MAROONS POUND RIVAL PITCHERS FOR DOUBLE WIN

Swamp Crane College, 13 to 2, and Outslug West Ends by 13-9 Count.

BY MAROON.

The Maroons went on a batting spree yesterday and won a pair of games. In the morning contest they defeated Crane college, pounding the ball all over the lot for a 13 to 2 victory, and they came back after lunch and trimmed the West End semi-pro team, 13 to 9, in another slugfest.

The Maroons had the home run fever. Little Bobbie Cahn finished up the morning fray with a four base swat after making a double and a triple and in the second battle Shull, Hart, and Larkin completed the circuit on drives to the outskirts of Stagg field.

Larkin held Crane to three hits and never was in trouble after the first inning. Cahn, Marum, and Gerdes hit Sotola hard. The Maroons got enough runs in the first to win, but waited until the sixth round to sew up the game with six more.

Six runs in one inning also won the afternoon battle, for in the fourth Page's team fell on Lou Fiene, former White Sox pitcher, for that many scores. Two of the home runs came in that inning and clinched the game, which was a close affair up to that time. Capt. Shull went the full nine innings for the Maroons and got by with a victory, although he was hit fairly hard and issued passes freely. Scores:

Millers, 5; Quincy, 1.

Quincy, Ill., April 15.—The Minneapolis American association team defeated the local Three Eyes club, 5 to 1. It was the first game of the season for the local team, and inexperience of the pitchers and heavy hitting by the visitors was responsible for the score.

AMATEUR BASEBALL NOTES

Normal Juniors would like to schedule games with teams averaging 12-14 years of age. Call Bill, Wentworth 1562.

The Villa Grove High school nine defeated Eastern Illinois State Normal school at Charleston by a score of 7 to 4.

Spaulding A. C. wants to sign four ball players ranging from 9 to 11 years in age. Call at 3337 Fillmore street.

Norwood A. C. want players averaging 15-17 years of age. Show up for tryout Sunday, April 23, at 3:30 o'clock at Sixty-first avenue and Irving Park boulevard.

Athletic A. C. will play Lyons, Ill., at the latter's home grounds this afternoon. For games against latter address Lyons Baseball club, Lyons, Ill.

The Lutheran ball league wants a Lutheran church nine from the south or southwest side to complete a six team schedule in the southern division. The northern division has six clubs and the northwest eight, and the league will close the schedule Tuesday. Address H. L. Scott, 311 East Forty-fifth street, or phone Drexel 9470.

AMATEURS READY FOR BIG SEASON

Young clubs are going to prove as big a factor in the National Catholic association baseball race this year as they did last, when the Queen of Angels ran off with the pennant, although playing its first year in the league. The National Catholics will hold their meetings at the headquarters of Chicago chapter of the Knights of Columbus, at 116 South Michigan avenue. Officers will be elected at Tuesday's meeting and the job of assigning teams to the different divisions started.

Amateur baseball leagues are planning the greatest season ever. Last year there were fifty-four leagues in action, counting the various divisions in the large leagues like the Bible Class, Knights of Columbus, and National Catholic as separate leagues. A month from now that mark is expected to be passed.

The Modern Woodmen of America elected baseball officers last week with O. E Alcshire as president. A. C. Mabee was made vice president, E. A. G. Dudach secretary, W. P. Dowd treasurer, and E. A. G. Dudach chief umpire. Play will start on April 30, all of the games being billed for Sundays. Teams wishing to join can do so by applying at the next meeting on Thursday night at room 314, 110 South Dearborn street.

Jack Lowery, 160 North Fifth avenue, is scouting for three more clubs to join the Mercantile league, which plays baseball every Saturday afternoon. He can be telephoned at Franklin 1081.

Week day baseball is to be a bigger factor in local circles this year than it has ever been, according to plans mapped out by several leagues. Two of the leagues which have already completed organization are the Elevated Railroad and Chicago Surface Lines. The "High Line" circuit will play on Tuesdays, starting the first week in May, while the street car men will play Wednesdays, starting the same week. Each league has six clubs signed up.

TWELVE GAMES SCHEDULED FOR JUNIOR NINES TODAY.

The Chicago Junior Baseball league has booked twelve games for today. The clubs average from 12 to 18 years. The league meets every Tuesday night at headquarters, 120 North Dearborn street. Games carded today are:

National A. C. and Frankes at Hamilton park.
Hartland Colts and Alpines at Fiftieth and Adams.
Douglas Cubs and Dalton Tigers at Dalton, Ill.
Thistles and Invincibles at Eighty-second and Exchange.
Hermitage Tigers and Berwyn Feds at Sixteenth and Clinton, Oak Park.
Melrose Sox and Central A. C. at Seventy-sixth and Greenwood.
Royal A. C. and Keeler A. & T. club at Forty-first and Chicago.
Clovers and Crawford's Elks at Mark White square.
Waverleys and North Ends at Bessemer park.
Original Iroquois and Drummond A. C. at Forty-second and Sixteenth.
Overlands and Lincoln A. C. at Fifty-first and Wood.
Roseland Speed Boys and Nectars at Fifty-second and Ogden.

INDIANAPOLIS' CLAIM OF $10,000 FOR KAUFF IS BEATEN BY GIANTS

Cincinnati, O., April 15.—The claim of the Indianapolis American association club to $10,000 from the New York Nationals for the services of Player Benny Kauff was denied and the case dismissed by the national commission today. Indianapolis claimed to have entered into an agreement with the Giants on Aug. 28, 1914, for the sale of Kauff to New York. The agreement, however, stated:

"Within contract is signed with the understanding that the Indianapolis Athletic association shall have a legal contract with said Benny Kauff."

The Indianapolis club admitted it did not have a contract with the player, its claim to his services being through draft and reservation. The commission held further that Kauff did sign a contract with the Brooklyn Federal league club and that at the time the peace pact was signed he became the legal property of the Brooklyn Federals, who had power to dispose of his services, which they subsequently did to the Giants.

KAUFF GIVES COBB PRAISE; DENIES OTHER INTERVIEWS.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—[Special.]—Bob Maxwell, sporting editor of the Evening Ledger, cornered Benny Kauff today and extracted the following:

"Get me right just once," said Kauff. "I want to give out a real interview and it is the first since joining the big league. In New York a reporter would visit me and say, 'Good morning,' and the paper would come out with a column interview with me telling what a great player I am and how sorry I feel for poor bums like Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Sam Crawford, Joe Jackson, and scores of others. I want to label it pure bunk.

"Ty Cobb is the greatest ball player in the world. He is in a class all by himself. I only wish I were almost as good as Cobb."

PURDUE UPSETS PURPLE SQUAD IN OPENER, 9-8

Overcomes Lead of Five Runs After Sixth Inning—Five Twirlers Used.

Lafayette, Ind., April 15.—[Special.]—Purdue took a hard fought game from Northwestern today, 9 to 8, the Boilermakers staging a rally toward the close of the contest that overcame a five run lead. Shrode and Kaufman proved ineffective and Loy went to the mound for Purdue in the seventh, holding the Purple scoreless after that.

It was Purdue's first conference game and Coach Pattison's men were nervous. They made seven errors and the Purple got four. Loy's two bagger gave Purdue two runs in the seventh, and Benson's sensational catch in the ninth was another feature.

Rose, Northwestern's regular third baseman, was declared ineligible today and a shift had to be made in the lineup. Five hurlers were used. Score:

PAPERS ARE ISSUED FOR TINKER'S BALL SCHOOL.

Springfield, Ill., April 15.—Articles of incorporation were issued today by Secretary of State Stevenson to the Joe Tinker Bureau of Baseball Instruction, 64 West Randolph street, Chicago. The capital stock is given at $1,000. The object is to give and furnish by correspondence or otherwise instructions in the game of baseball. The incorporators are Joseph B. Tinker, Joseph M. Bishop, and C. R. Skillin. The correspondent is Lee B. Lowenthal, Chicago.

ROGER SECURES COLLAMORE

Toledo, O., April 15.—Allan Collamore, left handed pitcher, was purchased today by Manager Roger Bresnahan of the Toledo American association club. Collamore was at the local park when the deal was completed by a telephone conversation between Bresnahan and Vice President McRoy of the Cleveland Americans.

CAP ANSON AND OLD MATE DISCUSS GAMES OF 1874.

Hackensack, N. J., April 15.—[Special.]—"Pop" Anson, the famous Chicago baseball manager and player of other days, who came to Hackensack today with his daughter to fill a vaudeville engagement, was doubly repaid for his visit.

By chance he learned from a newspaper man that Alfred W. Gedney, who was a member of the first American baseball championship team to make a tour of Europe, in 1874, was a resident of Hackensack. Capt. Anson was also on the team, and the old players were brought together tonight and enjoyed an hour of reminiscences. They had not seen each other in many years.

Gedney is still enthusiastic over baseball and occasionally gets out on the diamond for a little practice.

Decatur High Wins Meet.

Decatur, Ill., April 15.—Decatur High won a dual track meet from Bloomington High today, 96 to 37. Decatur athletes took fourteen of sixteen first places.

SEMI-PRO NINES TO OPEN SEASON THIS AFTERNOON

Nearly All the Leading Teams to Be in Action for the First Time.

Chicago's semi-pro baseball season will start officially today, nearly all of the big local parks having scheduled games for this afternoon. The City league still has two weeks to wait before the formal opening of their schedule, but three of its grounds will open their gates today. Almost the only absentees today will be the American Giants and West Ends, whose parks will not stage games for another week at least.

The three City leaguers to start action today, none of the games counting in the standing, are White Giants, Roseland Eclipse, and Rex Tigers. The West Ends will open their year with a game at the former Cub park with Rogers Park as their opponent. The White Giants will have the Chicago Giants as their attraction. John Kezlik has added a lot of seating capacity to his park the past month for the benefit of the Cub fans he figures will stick by the west side teams.

Willard and Coulon at Game.

Jess Willard, who will pitch the first ball at the old Cub park, will not have the limelight to himself. Johnny Coulon, ex-bantamweight champion, will appear with Jess on the diamond to give the fans a chance to size up the extremities in pugilism. County Clerk Bob Sweitzer, an ardent amateur and semi-pro ball fan and booster, will introduce the two ring stars.

Another big opening of the day will be the one at Albany avenue and Lake street, where Jack Keary and Neil Kelly have built a stand and christened it Marquette park. Their team will run under the name of the Wiederrechts, the Switzer cup winners last year, with Bucholz pitching. "Pinky" Grey's Ideal Billiards will be the attraction today.

Rex Tigers Play Dodgers.

Manager Bryan Pierce will give the Rex Tigers their first workout with a game with the Dodger A. C., George Stellers and Frank Kafora, the Wiederrecht battery last year, working for the Rex team, with Anderson and Weldt in the points for the visitors. Another City league game of the day will be played at Roseland between the Eclipse and Normal teams.

Manager Billy Niesen will start his new Garden City team on its 1916 career today with the Waukegans playing as the visiting attraction. Waukegan has a big following in its own town and is one of the hardest clubs to draw into Chicago for a contest.

Games Scheduled Today.

Semi-pro games listed for this afternoon are as follows:

White Giants and Chicago Leland Giants, at Twenty-second and Rockwell.
West Ends and Rogers Parks at Cub park, Lincoln and Polk.
Normals and Eclipse, at Roseland.
Waukegans and Garden Citys, at Kilpatrick and Lake.
Wiederrechts and Ideal Billiards at Marquette park, Albany and Lake.
Romeos and Murleys, at Elston and Kedzie.
Rex Tigers and Dodger A. C., at Forty-second and Chicago.
Ciceros and I. P. C., at Forty-eighth and Twelfth.
Gunthers at South Chicago.
John Magnus' Colts and SS. Peter and Pauls, at Thirty-eighth and Paulina.
Southwest State Bank and Galvin A. C., at Fiftieth and Oakley.
Merrimacs and Rothschilds at Kedzie and Van Buren.
G. & Gs. and Lawndale Blues at Harlem and Twelfth.

What do you know about the GRANT-SIX?

PAY IN A YEAR $795

Do you know that the Grant Six is the pioneer low-priced SIX—the first SIX to sell below one thousand dollars?

Do you know that Grant Six has established itself as one of the most remarkable cars of the year?

That in spite of our best efforts and constantly increasing production, at no time has it been possible to keep pace with the demand?

That the new Grant Six—which we are now showing—has the largest, handsomest body of any car below a thousand dollars?

Do you know that the Grant Six has a valve-in-the-head motor of exclusive design—not a stock motor—that is one of the quietest, smoothest, most powerful motors built.

Throttles down to 1½ miles per hour. Speeds up over 50.

This motor has established wonderful economy records. Owners everywhere average over 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—many get over 28.

Do you know that Grant true cantilever spring suspension makes Grant Six one of the easiest riding cars in the world?

That the Grant Six has achieved leadership solely by giving excess VALUE—in the motor—in the chassis—in the body—in the equipment.

All the flexibility, all the smoothness, all the virtues of the SIX at its best are conspicuous in the Grant Six.

When you know these facts you will be eager to own a Grant Six.

Better order early.

Take the A. A. F. Championship by Winning Overtime Contest by 20 to 18.

Wilson Avenue Y. M. C. A. Exmoors won the Amateur Athletic federation basketball championship for the second consecutive time, defeating the West Side Browns, 20 to 18, in the Sinai Social center gymnasium last night before a capacity crowd. Carlson shot the winning basket in the overtime period. At half time the Browns led, 13 to 6, but at the close of the second half the score was tied, 14 all. The Browns shot a basket and the Exmoors followed with two. Lineup:

Bantam Title to Emersons.

The Emerson school of Gary, Ind., had things entirely its own way in the finals for the 115 pounders' trophy. The Hoosier bantams swamped Palmer Park Monarchs, 20 to 4, holding the Chicago quintet without a score, second half. BEALL CAPTURES TROPHY IN PINEHURST GOLF MEET.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 15.—E. C. Beall, medalist, of Uniontown won the president's trophy in the finals of the annual April golf tournament today, defeating Charles Hartwell of Boston, 3 and 1. Neither Beall nor Hartwell played up to form, both taking 81 for the course.

In the second division, Spencer Waters of New York won the governor's trophy, defeating B. E. Smith, Owosso, 3 and 2. The secretary's trophy in the third division was won by Dr. E. W. Bush, Southern Pines, who defeated I. W. Champion, Brantford, 1 up in 20 holes. J. T. Newton, Brooklyn, beat N. D. Clark of Woodbridge, 5 and 4 in the fourth division.

LET YOUR MIND WANDER WHERE IT WILL—THE BAR FLY IS BUNKING WITH THE "EARLY-TO-BED" ADVOCATE.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

LOTS of people think a baseball manager's work begins when his team goes on the playing field and ends with the game. Some of them are pretty well educated in baseball, too. Lots of bugs think the manager's work is done when he picks his team and arranges a batting order at the start of the season, and that the responsibility thereafter rests on the holder of the practically obsolete job of captain. The latter class only thinks it knows baseball. It doesn't.

Even those who know how much of a team's success or failure depends on the manager are not aware of every little thing he has to think of. Some of them are of mighty importance. Did you ever think of the little matter of "rooming" a major league team while on the road? That term may not mean much to the layman, so is susceptible to explanation.

When contracts are made for housing and feeding a big league team away from home during a season it is specified that double rooms with two beds in each shall be reserved in sufficient number to accommodate the team. Sometimes the contract provides for feeding the players on the American plan and sometimes on the European plan, but that is something else yet.

This system compels dividing the players into twelve or fifteen pairs or roommates, according to the size of the roster. Some big league managers allow their players to choose their own "roomies," but the wise manager does not, for he realizes what important factors influence and association are in a ball player's career.

This is particularly true of the young fellows breaking in. Few of them have been taught to take the game seriously. Their whole minor league experience consisted almost wholly of playing, hoping and praying that they might be purchased or drafted as soon as possible by a major league team. Once that desired thing happens the average recruit believes he has attained the pinnacle and that the rest of his diamond career is assured, provided only that he make enough base hits and home runs to give an excuse for asking for a raise in salary annually.

The foregoing is not true of all young players breaking into the big show. It would be an injustice to some of them to convey that impression, but the proportion of recruits who come up with a full realization of what is expected of them is small.

It is easy to determine to which class a recruit belongs a few hours after he reports for spring training and the wise manager has them all tabbed in his mind right away. As soon as he begins to find out what men are good enough to keep he also begins to separate them into roommates, and frequently he is able to do this so wisely that a pair of players will room together all one season while on the road. For the benefit of the layman it may be interpolated that the players choose their own quarters while playing at home, subject to veto power by the manager if an undesirable locality is selected.

In pairing off his men congeniality and temperament are important things, but not of most importance. There are some things taken into consideration before them. For instance, it would hardly be wise to room two rivals for the same position together. On the other hand, the influence which each roommate will have on the other is of primary importance.

Two youngsters just breaking into fast company might have reciprocally bad effects. Two veterans inclined to the rough neck class might egg each other on to the great detriment of the team's reputation off the field. A pair of players inclined to break club rules regarding intoxicants or late hours would be a mighty bad combination. So you see the manager does some thinking just about the little matter of pairing off his players while touring the circuit.

Perhaps a concrete illustration will explain the problem more lucidly. In sentencing Cicotte and Felsch to be roommates for the coming season Manager Rowland of the White Sox hit upon an almost ideal combination.

In the first place, one of them is a pitcher and the other an outfielder, so there cannot possibly be any rivalry or jealousy in that room. Then they are fairly congenial, for both of them are lighthearted and quick thinkers. Cicotte, if he could go out on the vaudeville stage and deliver one of his famous monologues the way he hands them out to a group of convulsed players, could get more money for it than he can for pitching. Felsch not only can see a joke but can parry it. There will be no gloom in the Cicotte-Felsch room this year.

Cicotte, however, takes baseball seriously. When he is out there on the slab there is nothing on his mind but the business of baffling the batsmen who face him and keeping runs away from that plate. And when he is not working Cicotte pulls no jokes on the bench except to cheer up somebody who has had a bad break. He has seen enough years of service to realize the seriousness of baseball as a business from the player's standpoint and its dignity as a sport from the public's standpoint. He is not a tightwad, a teetotaler or a truant. But he obeys club rules and is careful to keep himself in shape to give the team his best any time he is asked to. Those are the men a manager and club owner prize highly. Experience can never teach some players that; others learn it by observation or example.

To the latter class belongs Felsch. Only one year old in major league baseball, he has a big future before him and a fair idea of the seriousness of the proposition that confronts him.

Association with a player like Cicotte will crystallize Felsch's ideas into the right form in the matter of personal effort on the ball field and personal conduct off it. Association with an older player who had not learned to take himself and the game seriously might wreck Hap's career. Rooming Felsch with a younger player fresh from the bushes might have a deleterious effect on both of them.

HAWAIIAN LOSES TO M'GILLIVRAY IN DETROIT RACE

Chicagoan Wins 220 Yard Swim—Kahanamoku Captures the Century.

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—[Special.]—Detroit swimming fans had their first view of Duke Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian, who classes with the world's greatest sprinters, in the D. A. C. natatorium tonight. The duke was beaten in the 220 yard free style event, which featured the program, but captured first honors in the 100 yard race.

Perry McGillivray of the Illinois A. C. of Chicago, who has finished ahead of the duke in numerous events within the last two weeks, took first in the 220, due mostly to splendid form in taking the turns. That was where Kahanamoku had his only trouble.

Spectators Cheer Hawaiian.

So natural was his stroke and so graceful, however, that it required an expert to realize that the turns bothered the world famous swimmer. He proved the most natural swimmer who has appeared here this year, and his efforts were greeted by much applause.

In the century the duke was just one and one-fifth seconds shy of the world's record. He was given strong opposition by Wheatley of Chicago, the only other starter, and was forced to the limit to win.

McGillivray Strains Leg.

McGillivray was scheduled to compete in the 100 yard race, but refused to tsart due to a slightly strained tendon in his left leg. Summary:

220 yard race, free style—Won by Perry McGillivray, Chicago; Kahanamoku, Honolulu, second; Wheatley, Chicago, third. Time, 2:28.

100 yards, free style—Won by Kahanamoku; Wheatley, second. Time, :55 4-5 seconds.

SEPPALA'S WOLF HOUNDS AGAIN WIN ALASKA RACE.

Nome, Alaska, April 15.—Leonard Seppala, twice winner with his team of seventeen Siberian wolf dogs of the 412 mile all-Alaska sweepstakes, was proclaimed the racing hero of Alaska today following his victory last night over four contestants in the great northern classic.

Seppala's time was 80:27:00, nearly 1:40:00 slower than his winning time last year. Fay Delzene's team of fourteen Alaska bred malamutes was second, and Fred Ayer's team of fourteen fox hounds was third. Two other contestants failed to finish.

Seppala stood the strain of the race fully as well as his hardy wolf dogs, and when he drove down Front street toward the finish line the entire winter population of Nome—some 2,500 persons—cheered him wildly. Delzene's dogs also finished in good condition, but Ayer's were very tired. Seppela gained a purse of $2,000 by his victory.

This is the fourth time in the last seven sweepstakes races that the Siberian wolf dogs have outdistanced the malamutes.

Pin Title to Seth Thomas.

The Seth Thomas Clock team won the championship of the Clock Bowling league by two out of three games, while the Kuehl Cuckoos beat the New Haven Steam Rollers by a similar margin. The Kuehls finished second, Waterburys third, and New Havens fourth.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

THE twenty-sixth annual congress of the American Whist league will be held at the New Monmouth hotel, Spring Lake, N. J., during the week of June 26, 1916.

In bridge kindergarten a player is given some general rules, such "second hand low," "third hand high," "exhaust the adversaries' trumps," etc. When he has acquired the rudiments of the game he begins to learn the importance of ignoring such rules when the situation demands. Note the following deal from a local club. The hands:

D.—None.

12	D J	Q S	D 10	7 S
13	D A	K S	D 8	8 S

West secured nine tricks only.

At trick two, west should have led a spade. If south won and led a diamond, west should have trumped and led a club. This would have given west eleven tricks, or ten if one of the adversaries secured a ruff in the club suit.

The spade should have been led at trick two in preference to clubs to avoid the possibility of an adversary trumping the club suit twice. Taking out all the trumps at once was fatal play.

Here is another. East dealt and bid one spade, west two hearts, and the bidding closed. The king of clubs was led and the dummy was as follows:

Spades, A, K, J, 9, 5, 4; hearts, 9, 7; clubs, 9, 7, 4; diamonds, J, 4.

West held spades, 2; hearts, A, K, Q, J, 10, 4; clubs, A, 6, 3; diamonds, 10, 8, 5.

West won the first trick with the ace of clubs, made the ace and king of spades, discarding one club, and then led the knave of diamonds from dummy. Eventually he ruffed one diamond in dummy and secured game, which would have been impossible had he taken out trumps at once.

The declarant should play with only his losing cards in mind when there is a declared trump.

ANSWER TO QUERIES.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—A player plays from his own hand and then reaches over and plays a card from dummy before the opponent plays. The original player then places his card back in dummy and awaits opponent's play. The point is, can dummy play out of turn and be held strictly to such play? F. S. W.

Ans.—A card from dummy cannot be withdrawn, and fourth player, if he desire, may play before his partner.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—A player melds 150 in trumps; later he draws a king and melds it with the queen already on the table—total score 190. Still later he draws the other queen. May he meld it with the other king on the table and make the total score 230? S. R. C.

Ans.—When a player melds 150 he cannot afterward use either the king or queen on the table for a royal marriage.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—May an adversary say to his partner, "That is your book," virtually saying don't finesse, but make one more trick, and the contract is defeated? Or may dummy say the same to the declarant? One would seem as fair as the other. E. B. S.

Ans.—This is a hard question, but I think comes under the provision of law 93, making the penalty the same as for a lead out of turn. This penalty would apply to dummy or either nondeclarant.

GOLFING SCRIBES HOLD FIRST GOLF MEET WEDNESDAY

Golfing scribes of Chicago will get into action for the first time this year on Wednesday when the Press Golf Club of Chicago will hold its first monthly tournament at the Calumet Country club. From then on until the final annual tournament for the Chatfield-Taylor cup there will be a lively event each month, according to the schedule of competitions announced yesterday by President Basil G. Wyrick of the Associated Press.

The club starts its second year under auspicious circumstances. There are two reasons why enthusiasm among the members is at a high pitch. The membership has been doubled, largely because of the interest displayed by the publishers and editors themselves.

The principal prize among the dozen to be played for on Wednesday will be a cup presented by the newspaper champion, Paul D. Hammett, managing editor of the Drovers' Journal. John C. Eastman, editor and publisher of the Chicago Journal, has offered a cup for the best net score at the May tourney.

In June the news gatherers will compete for a cup given by the Examiner through C. S. Stanton, editor. The guest of honor at this meet will be Chick Evans, western amateur champion.

The Victor F. Lawson cup, proffered by the editor and publisher of the Daily News, will be the chief trophy in the July contest, in which T. A. Ballantyne, former club champion, will pit his par golf against the field to retain the Lawson cup in the home office. The R. R. McCormick cup, presented on behalf of THE TRIBUNE, will be the prize at the August competition.

GIL ANDERSON QUITS AS PILOT FOR STUTZ FIRM

Rumor Says That Speedway Champion of 1915 Will Drive Peugeot.

BY J. C. BURTON.

Gil Anderson, speedway champion of 1915 and winner of the Vincent Astor cup race at Sheepshead Bay last October, no longer is on the pay roll of Harry Stutz, whose cars he has campaigned for the last six years.

Anderson left the employ of the Stutz Motor company yesterday. His resignation is thought to be the result of Harry Stutz's determination not to race his cars druing the impending season. Gil is ungry for more prize money to add to the $30,000 bank roll he won last year.

Slated for Peugeot?

According to a report current in Indianapolis, Anderson will switch his allegiance from the Stutz to the Peugeot and drive one of the two French cars that he owners of the Hoosier speedway imported from Europe last summer. He will have for his teammate Johnny Aitken.

Rene Thomas, winner of the 1914 Indianapolis race, was announced as one of the drivers of the speedway Peugeots, but it is reported that he has been forced to abandon an American invasion this year because of his inability to obtain passports.

Merz May Join Hoosiers.

Charley Merz, who formerly drove for Stutz, also may join the Indianapolis racing team, it is said. The Hoosier promoters have eight cars, but are shy on drivers. Carl Fisher, head of the Indianapolis track, is considering rescinding the rule that married men cannot be members of the team in order to solve the driver problem.

ATHLETES IN ARMY; TOUR OFF

LONDON, April 15.—The projected tour of America by Swedish amateur athletes, says a dispatch from Stockholm, has been postponed until after the war. This action, it was said, was taken because the best of the athletes now are in military service.

ALMOST BEATEN, FIGHTER COMES BACK WITH K. O.

Drops as He Floors Opponent, but He Gets Up at the Count of Five.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

There are many funny happenings in the ring if one gets a chance to "catch them right off the bat." Incidentally it is the "green" boys who usually pull the stuff that's good for a laugh, and as there's always going to be green ones there's bound to be a lot of laughs for the ringsiders.

One of these stunts occurred in the ring of the Cream City Athletic club of Milwaukee a few days ago when a pair of scrappers named Johnny Hoffman and Joe Dunn furnished the opening bout to the show in which World's Champion Freddie Welsh and Richie Mitchell furnished the windup. The things that Hoffman and Dunn didn't know about the boxing game would fill a book the size of a city directory.

Starts to Shake—Bing!

When the gong clanged starting the fight, Dunn made a bluff to shake hands, but instead of grasping his opponent's mitt he swung a left to the body. It was plain to everybody at the ringside that it was a goat getting trick, but Hoffman showed that he had the nerve, and as the punch didn't do any damage, he went right along with the fighting business just as if it hadn't happened. Hoffman showed that he had a better left jab than his opponent and gained the shade in the opening round. The second session was about an even thing, but the real stuff came off in the third and sent the crowd into an uproar.

The boys had hardly got the round under way when Dunn nailed Hoffman on the jaw with a hard right, knocking him to the canvas. Hoffman stayed down for the count of eight, and when he regained his feet was wabbly. Dunn seeing a chance for victory, charged like an enraged bull, slamming left and right to his opponent's bean. Hoffman was leaning against the ropes and glad to get even that support, and from that position let go one despairing right hand swing for the jaw. If that punch hadn't landed it was all off for Hoffman, but it did just as a left hand jab caught him on the chin. When the punches connected both boys went to the canvas.

Out on Feet, but Wins.

The referee started counting over the prostrate form of Dunn, while Hoffman, making a desperate effort, finally regained his feet at the five count. He staggered over to a corner and rested on the ropes while the referee was tolling off the seconds on Dunn, who had been knocked stiffer than a three inch plank. As he stood against the ropes the facial expression of Hoffman was something worth going miles to see. He was dazed and nearly out himself, and as he watched the knocked out Dunn he alternately laughed and cried, while the crowd yelled wildly. His seconds finally piloted him to his corner and conveyed the information to him that he was a winner. Then his chest began to expand.

Perhaps as clean a knockout as ever was scored was turned by Matty McCue of Racine over Walter Jacobson of Chicago, who gave great promise of becoming a star in the lightweight ranks, in the same ring in which Hoffman and Dunn pulled their stunt. Jacobson was going along nicely until the third round, with not a single damaging blow landed by either fighter, when suddenly McCue's terrific right shot out, landing squarely on the point of Jacobson's jaw. He fell on the ropes and slowly slipped to the canvas, the hemp breaking his fall so he scarcely got a bump when his head hit the floor.

Didn't Know to Was Hit.

But there wasn't any need of the referee counting. The Chicago boy was gone. After ten had been counted on him McCue ran over, picked him up, and carried him to his corner. The stunt brought cheers for Matty. When Walter opened his eyes and was back in the world again the first thing he said was: "Say, wasn't that funny. I didn't know that I was hit. I feel fine. Haven't even got a headache."

Another little thing happened after this scrap which will be interesting reading to the fans. It shows that McCue is a gentlemanly sort of chap. After Matty had finished dressing he hurried to Jacobson's dressing room and handed Walter a lot of cheering conversation.

"Say, Walter," said Matty, as he patted the Chicago boy on the back, "you sure did slip me a good bunch of punching in the first round. You can hit, all right."

Of course, that kind of consoling talk sounded good to Jacobson, but as a matter of fact not one of Walter's blows even stung Matty.

Mickey Anderson Is Introduced.

Few folks around this section of the country ever heard of a scrapper by the name of Micky Anderson until he recently entered the ring to perform against Eddie Tancl, also a Chicagoan. Now there are a lot of fans who know him, for he made his mark (with reverse english) in a single night. The boys, who are welterweights, met at catchweights, and were scheduled to go six rounds. But they didn't and there wasn't any knockout, either.

When the second round opened Tancl rushed, and, planting a right on Anderson's left eye, put it in mourning. When the blow landed Anderson picked out a soft spot on the floor and gracefully sat down. The bump on the optic was enough for him, and he was perfectly willing to quit.

Again Seeks Soft Spot.

The referee saw there was no fight left in Mickey, and with an air of disgust ordered him to his corner.

When Mickey was doing the disappearing act a fan in the crowd who has a good line of humor, remarked, loudly enough for all the ringsiders to hear:

"I guess Mickey thought he had lost that eye and sat down on the floor to look for it."

CHARLIE WEINERT STOPS ANDERSON IN SECOND ROUND

"TRIBUNE" DECISIONS

At New York—Charley Weinert knocked out Andre Anderson (2).
At Philadelphia—Johnny Nelson beat Harry Donahue (6).

New York, April 15.—[Special.]—Charlie Weinert effectually disposed of Andre Anderson of Chicago in the second round of the main bout at the Stadium A. C. tonight by knocking Andre clear through the ropes. The falling fighter dropped out of the ring and landed on the stage beyond with such a thump that he stayed down until Referee McPartland had counted him out.

Luckily for Anderson, no reporters were seated at the ringside where he fell, and the part of the stage which he fell on was padded. If he had fallen on some reporters or upon bare boards he might have been badly hurt.

First Round Uneventful.

The first round was not eventful, although Weinert got in some left jabs now and then which seemed to shake up Anderson a bit. When the second round began, however, there was plenty of action. Anderson began it by landing a hard right on Weinert's mouth which caused blood to make its appearance.

Then it was Weinert's turn, and before the round was half over he had Anderson backed up against the ropes and was doing some good infighting. A stiff right jolt delivered from close quarters ended the proceedings. It lifted Anderson off his feet, swung him to the ropes, and dropped him on the floor.

Arises Outside the Ring.

The Chicago fighter lay face downward and never moved until McPartland had reached seven in the count. Then he began to struggle up and was on his hands and knees outside the ring when the count ended.

OFFERS PACKEY $10,000 FOR NEW ORLEANS BOUT.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 15.—Tom Andrews, local fight promoter, was authorized by Dominick Tortorich of New Orleans, La., to make Packey McFarland a flat offer of $10,000 to meet the winner of the Kid Lewis-Jack Britton welterweight bout, which will be held in the Crescent City April 24. Tortorich wants the McFarland bout for May or June, and over the twenty round route. Tortorich also told Andrews to feel out the Chicago battler regarding another fight with Mike Gibbons over the marathon distance.

MORAN-DILLON BOUT NEAR.

New York, April 15.—Frank Moran and Jack Dillon are practically matched for a ten round bout here the last week in April. A club has offered $25,000 for the bout, guaranteeing Moran $17,500 and Dillon $7,500. Moran is willing, and as it is the largest guarantee Dillon has ever been offered it looks like plain sailing. Fred Fulton, who is to box Al Reich, has been denied the privilege of giving exhibitions with colored sparring partners in his training bouts.

ELKS PLAN ATHLETIC MEET.

What promises to be the biggest thing Chicago has staged in many a day in an athletic way was launched last night by a committee of Elks, headed by Judge Joseph Sabath, when they laid plans for a monster athletic and vaudeville program at the Coliseum on May 2. The Elks' lodge in Chicago today has something like 2,000 members. The services of Jess Willard, Packey McFarland, Joe Stecher, Charlie Cutler, Charlie White, and Johnny Coulon have been secured, and Mr. Coffey has the promise of Frank Gotch. The Elks are erecting a building to cost $500,000.

Navy Eight Takes Race.

Annapolis, Md., April 15.—The navy's eight won an easy victory over Washington oarsmen, representing the Analostian Boat club, today when it pulled across the line fifteen lengths ahead in the first race of the season here. The time was 10:37. The Middies' track team followed up that victory by defeating Johns Hopkins, 79 to 21, in the season's first track meet.

FALL RIVER ROVERS REACH FINAL IN SOCCER SERIES.

Pawtucket, R. I., April 15.—Fall River Rovers today defeated the Continentals of New York, 1 to 0, in the semi-final tie for the United States soccer championship. Neither side was able to score in the regular time of ninety minutes and two extra periods of fifteen minutes were ordered. In the first of these periods each team scored once, but because of offside play the goals were not allowed.

Both teams battled without a score through the second extra period up to the last moment of play, when Bouchard of the Rovers shot the only legitimate goal of the game.

The Rovers will meet the winner of the match tomorrow between the Bethlehem, Pa., [illegible] Pullmans of Chicago.

PUGILISTIC POINTERS.

NATE LEWIS, manager of Charley White, the local lightweight, yesterday received an offer from promoters in Tulsa, Okla., for White to meet Bobby Waugh early next month. The promoters offered Lewis a $2,500 guarantee with a liberal percentage of the gate receipts. Lewis said he will accept if the promoters bind Waugh to a big enough forfeit to insure his going through with the contest.

Ever Hammer, the local lightweight, under the management of Kid Howard, will start active training at the Arcade gymnasium tomorrow for his ten round bout with Champion Freddie Welsh at Milwaukee on April 24. Hammer will give an exhibition at the Swedish American A. C. this afternoon.

Three fingered Jimmy Murphy is anxious to know why all the lightweights are sidestepping him. The Italian is willing and anxious to meet any of the boys of his weight.

Al White, brother of Charley White, is going back into the game. Al wants to meet any of the local 122 pounders, and he intends to start training at O'Connell's tomorrow.

Eddie Ratsch has taken Jimmy Travers under his managerial wing and hopes to put him in the front rank of 130 pounders.

Bennie Yanger, known in the old days as the Tipton Slasher, will be the star in a vaudeville sketch at an Englewood theater this week. Benny will show the punches used in his palmy days.

Mark Lewis, known to all the old time followers of pugilism as an expert ticket handler, was around town yesterday and is recovering from the attack of paralysis.

STREETS CLOSED SO BOY SKATERS CAN HOLD RACES

Monroe street, from Ashland boulevard to Loomis street, was a haven of boys yesterday in the annual roller skating contests. The streets were kept free of traffic for the afternoon, and there were plenty of policemen to see that none but the boys entering the contests went on the pavement. The West Side Y. M. C. A. conducted the races.

There were thirty prizes awarded. Summaries:

Class A, one block race—Won by Daniel Treharne; Russell Angus, second; Roman Goa, third.

Class B—Won by Russell Fabel; Sam Haltzman, second; George Hartigan, third.

Class C—Won by Charles Sampson; William Bishop, second; James Millerd, third.

Class A, two block race—Won by Daniel Treharne; Rista Farber, second; Vorris Vry, third.

Class B—Won by Gilbert Miles; Frank Clancy, second; Edward Ryan, third.

Two block race, final, classes C, D, F, G—Won by Malcolm Berry; Charles Sampson, second; Roger North, third.

Oriannas, 48; Americas, 12.

Orianna basketball players trimmed the Young America quintet, 48 to 12, in a game at the victors' gymnasium yesterday afternoon.

MORE AMATEURS ENTER FIGHT FOR "TRIBUNE" TRIPS

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

One month remains before entries close for the second annual amateur baseball contest under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE. Prizes to the two best players to be chosen by a staff of judges will be trips with the Cubs and White Sox with all expenses paid. That between 500 and 600 ambitious youngsters will engage in a series of tryouts is a certainty, because over 200 boys already have sent in their entries.

During the week forty-seven players mailed their nominations to THE TRIBUNE, raising the total number to 216. This is more than half the total entry of 1915, when 399 competed for three trips. During the final week last year 250 boys enrolled and something like that number is expected to register this year.

Tryouts at Sox and Cubs Parks.

Tryouts will be held at White Sox or Cubs park, as was the case last year. Both Presidents Comiskey and Weeghman have offered the use of their plants to THE TRIBUNE while their teams are on the road. These parks are regarded as the best playing fields in the central west. Should the number of contestants require other fields the old Cubs park also will be used.

The entry blank will be found in an adjoining column. Look it over carefully, fill it out properly and legibly, and mail at once to the Amateur Baseball Editor.

POLO AT SPEEDWAY PARK WILL START ON MAY 2.

The first game of polo to be played on the new field at Speedway park will be held May 20, the date of the western interclub automobile race for amateur drivers. Two teams will be picked from a squad of fifty polo players who are members of the Speedway Park association, according to Eugene Belfield, who is chairman of the polo committee. A carload of polo ponies recently was shipped from Texas for the use of the S. P. A. experts. A committee of five members also has been appointed to take charge of the golfing at Speedway park. The committee consists of Dr. Pierson, chairman; Dr. McFatrich, John P. Harding, Mr. Hood, and Henry Pollard.

PULLMAN MEETS SOCCER CHAMPS IN CLASH TODAY

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Fever heat will be registered on the local soccer thermometer this afternoon when the famous Bethlehem Steel team, national champion, clashes with the Pullman eleven, champion of the west, in the semi-final round of the national championship at Fifty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue. Play will start at 3 o'clock.

The award of this important fixture to Chicago gives local fans their first opportunity to see a semi-final match, and interest is intensified, as eastern critics generally predict that the winner will be successful in the final. If Pullman can win it will tackle the winner of the Fall River-Continental game.

Bethlehems Are Great Team.

The Bethlehem team, which arrived last night, comes with the reputation of being the best balanced team ever gathered in this country, but the bubble of reputation will not scare the Carbuilders.

Soccer football is essentially a game of team work and the opposing clubs today are especially favored over many others in that their fields are located close to the works and it is easy for the men to get together.

The visitors are speedy and strong both in attack and defense. Pullman possesses all these qualifications and the men are noted for their aggressiveness. Bethlehem in twenty league and exhibition games this season has scored 89 goals against 10 for its opponents. It has yet to meet defeat. Pullman has not played as many games, but its percentage of goals is as good and no defeat has marked its record.

Greek Meets Greek.

It looks like Greek meeting Greek, Pullman having a shade in that it's playing before a home crowd. Given fine weather, the battle should be one of the hardest ever staged on a local field, as the ground of the Hyde Park Blues is one of the best in the country.

Three of the most noted players on the Bethlehem team are Duncan, goal keeper, who has appeared in international matches; Tom Fleming, outside left, who is a speed marvel; and Brown, inside left, who has accounted for fifteen goals this year. Duncan formerly played with Airdrie, Fleming with Leith, and Brown with the famous Tottenham Hotspur club.

Pullmans Have One Native Son.

Pullman's team is composed mostly of former English and Scotch players, although Holmes, goal keeper, was born at Pullman, and the Govier brothers learned most of their game in the city of sleeping cars. Preceding the big game the 90 pound teams of Palmer and Calumet Park will give a thirty minute exhibition. Tonight the Bethlehem and Pullman teams will be the guests of Vice President Peel and the officials of the Pullman company at a banquet at the Great Northern hotel. Following is the lineup:

Pullman.		Bethlehem.
Holmes	Goal	Duncan
Blockley	Right back	Fletcher
Page	Left back	Ferguson
J.H.Cartwright	Right half back	Murray
S. Govier	Cent. half back	Campbell
B. Govier	Left half back	Mor'n [Capt.]
Pollitt	Outside right	Macdonald
Mackie	Inside right	Butler
Shallcross	Center	Pepper
J.C.Cartwright	Inside left	Brown
McNaughton	Outside left	Fleming

Referee—Stark, Detroit. Linesmen—Morris and Napier.

The American Bohemians will play the Chicago Screws at Forty-eighth avenue and Fourteenth street at 10:30 this morning.

TWO TIE WORLD'S RECORD.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 15.—Frederick Kelly of the Los Angeles Athletic club, world's champion hurdler, and E. Thomson of the University of Southern California, today equaled the world's record of fifteen seconds flat in the 120 yard high hurdles, in the Southern Pacific association championships of the American Athletic union. They tied for first place. Kelly made this time twice before at Berkeley, May 10, 1913, and May 2, 1914. The Los Angeles Athletic club won the meet with a total of 62 points.

WAR HORRORS?

British Civil Prisoners Form Soccer League in Germany.

LONDON recently heard of what probably is the world's most unique soccer league. It is the Ruhleben Football association. This comparatively new body was formed on March 26, 1915, so that only two weeks ago it completed the first year of its existence. As the Ruhleben Football association has not been affiliated with the International federation, the Deutcher Fussball verein, or the Football Association of England, its football is unauthorized, unrecognized.

The association has been "made in Germany," but the founders and the players are all British; in fact, this is the only British concern conducting operations in Germany. The fact is, this association sprung from the brains of the British civil prisoners of war detained at the camp of Ruhleben, near Berlin.

The league numbers 453 footballers, amateurs and professionals, so that no difficulty was experienced in running two leagues—a first division of fourteen clubs and a second division of thirteen clubs. A cup competition and international matches between England and the rest are being played.

Some famous players who are in the league are Steve Bloomer, Derby county; Sam Wolstenholme, Everton; A. H. Bodin, Glasgow Rangers; T. Miller, Ayr; J. Cant of Alloa; F. B. Pentland, Birmingham, and John Cameron of Glasgow, Queen's Park, and Tottingham.

The camp contains all sorts and conditions of men, including jockeys, trainers, and four golf professionals, the latter being William Jackson, Ernest Warburton, A. Andrews, and Robert Murray.

MAT CONTESTS DRAW 100 MEN AT UNIVERSITY

BY MAROON.

A hundred man wrestling tournament will be staged at the University of Chicago, beginning Tuesday. Coach Ross Netherton hopes to have that many entries for the first wrestling championship of the Midway school. At the rate that the hopeful grapplers are signing the entry blanks it looks as if the century mark would be reached by the day the tournament opens. Gold, silver, and bronze medals will be awarded in the seven weight divisions.

Coach Netherton has been handicapped this year because he had a small squad from which to choose his regulars. In several divisions the Maroons had only one candidate. The members of the varsity team had to go out of their class in the practice bouts to secure wrestling partners. A conference champion is eligible to receive a "C."

There will be classes for assorted sizes of students. The divisions will be 115, 125, 135, 145, 158, 175, and unlimited, so that men of any weight have a chance to demonstrate their skill.

Await Word on Stout.

The entry of Chicago in the Drake relay games Saturday depends on Capt. Stout. Coach Stagg has not made up his mind which teams he will enter and cannot do so until it is known whether his captain is eligible. Stout is working hard to lift his ban and says that it is only a matter of time before he clears his classroom record. He hopes to satisfy the deans in time to compete at Drake on Saturday and at the Penn games the following week.

Stagg may enter a half mile quartet if the men show enough speed this week to justify their starting. Guerin, Feurstein, Agar, and Pershing will be the quartet of 220 men to go to Iowa if the Maroons are represented in the short race. Chicago won the conference mile relay and defeated Illinois at St. Louis in a special race last month.

Strong Team in Mile Race.

Merrill, Cornwell, Clark, and Dismond are a quartet of 440 men that will be hard to beat. If Stout can run, Stagg may save Clark and Dismond to run in the two mile race. The fourth half miler, in that case, would be Hodges, the sophomore, who is eligible for the first time. This team would be as strong as the mile quartet.

NET HEADQUARTERS MOVED FROM N. Y. TO PITTSBURGH.

New York, April 15.—To meet criticism that the administration of tennis affairs has been centered too much in this city, the ranking committee of the United States National Lawn Tennis association has been enlarged and its headquarters transferred to Pittsburgh. President George T. Ade announced today the appointment of Clinton L. Childs as chairman of the committee. Other members are Charles Garland and Harry Seymoure, Pittsburgh; J. C. Royon, Cleveland; and E. S. Reynolds of Dayton, O.

A Davis cup committee consisting of Robert D. Wreen, chairman; Henry W. Slocum, and George T. Adee was appointed, but Adee said he could see no international contests in prospect. Other committees named by the president:

Ball and sporting goods—Watson M. Washburn, chairman; H. F. Johnson, and Dean Mathey.

Women's national championship—A. L. Hoskins, chairman; William J. Clothier, and Craig Biddle.

Paul R. Williams of Utica, N. Y., was appointed field secretary.

NET CHAMPIONS KEEP TITLE.

New York, April 15.—Jay Gould and W. H. T. Huhn of Philadelphia, holders of the national court tennis doubles championship, secured a firmer hold on the title today by defeating Charles T. Sands and Payne Whitney of this city in the final round of the annual championship tournament at the Racquet and Tennis club. The champions outplayed their opponents all through, winning in three straight sets, 6—4, 6—1, 6—1.

Dunne's Son a :10 Man.

EVANSTON HIGH ATHLETES TAKE HONORS IN MEET

Beat Englewood and Austin Teams in Three Cornered Contests.

Evanston Township High school won first place yesterday in a track and field meet with Englewood and Austin High schools in Patten gymnasium. In the senior events Evanston High took first place with 49½ points. Englewood was second with 37 and Austin third with 28½.

In the junior meet Austin won with 42 points, Evanston was second with 33, and Englewood third with 11 points. Evanston's total score was 82½ points and Austin's 70½.

Two Seniors Tie for Lead.

The meet was comparatively fast, although no approach was made to records. Patton of Englewood and Sweet of Evanston High were the highest individual point winners in the senior meet, each scoring 17 points. Patton won three firsts in the 50 yard dash, 220 yard dash, and high jump, and took fourth in the 880 yard run. Sweet scored two firsts, winning the 440 yard run and 12 pound shotput. He also took second in the 50 yard dash and in the three standing broad jumps and was fourth in the 220 yard run.

Snyder and Stresser, both of Austin, were the individual stars in the junior meet. They were entered in practically all of the events and took places in a majority of them. It was their work that won the junior meet for Austin.

ROMEO and JULIET

Reproduction of a Painting by Frank Dicksee

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

From the picture of "Romeo and Juliet," by Frank Dicksee, R. A., in the collection of Charles Churchill. Size of canvas, 66 by 46 inches. It was exhibited first at the Royal academy in 1884 and at the Guildhall in 1897.

THE story of "Romeo and Juliet" is the story of love incarnate. To Romeo nothing in the universe matters but Juliet. And Juliet is love itself. Out of it she has no existence. Before it all else vanishes. Her first look at Romeo is an ecstasy.

> Go ask his name——
> My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
> My love as deep.

She is transported, aghast at the feelings that flood her. She has the swiftness of impressions, as well as their durability and devotedness, for which Italian women, in the opinion of Lord Byron, excel all others. From the instant she sees Romeo to the end, when she dies beside him, love keeps fiery vigil in her heart. It is the life blood in her veins, blending with every atom of her being. Tenderness kindles to enthusiasm, enthusiasm to passion, passion to heroism. Her southern temperament, urged on by measureless capacities for emotion, lifts to Elysian heights its blisses, exaggerates its terrors, and in the end overpowers its reason.

Nor are Romeo's fires any the less rapturous.

> Heaven is here
> Where Juliet lives.

His passion roused, it hurls itself toward its object, through the intricate impediments that hedge it round, defying all dangers and finding death in the arms of his beloved.

They are all love, surrounded by all hate and discord and the stone barricades of a highly polished and artificial life. Juliet is the child of wealth and splendor, brought up in a palace, clasping her gowns with jewels and bedecking her hair with pearls. Before her severe father and tyrannical mother she trembles, but, like a petted child, she wheedles and cajoles her nurse, making of her a confidant. That her family and Romeo's are not on friendly terms does not disturb her. What have their quarrels and wranglings to do with the heavenly harmonies that are singing in her heart?

So in the beginning the blue clear sky of Italy bends smilingly over them, as if approving of their youthful raptures. Then come dark contrast, swift, terrifying action, appalling catastrophe. Nursed in Edenlike luxury, Juliet is at first bewildered by the evil destinies that close about her. She discovers that her adored Romeo, whom she has secretly married, has killed her cousin. She hears her proud mother boastfully vowing to poison him in revenge for his deed. She receives orders from her father—Old Capulet, whom none dare disobey—that she is to marry Paris immediately. Frantically she seeks postponement of her nuptials. First from her father and then from her mother, she begs for time before the ceremony.

> Ah, sweet my mother, cast me not away.
> Delay this marriage for a month, a week.

It is through the irresistible invasion of this crisis that Juliet is transformed. She becomes a woman and wife. She has no struggle between filial and conjugal duties. In the tempest of passion and terror in which she is plunged she preserves a moral and a feminine dignity. She is ready to brave death and suffering in any form to "keep her faith with Romeo."

Desperately she appeals to the friar who married them, holding her dagger close as her last resource against dishonor and broken vows.

> God joined my heart with Romeo's—thou our hands.
> And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo sealed,
> Shall be the label to another deed,
> Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
> Turn to another, this shall slay them both.

In her terror she heaps all of her images of horror together.

> O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
> From off the battlements of yonder tower,
> Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
> Where servants are; chain me with roaring bears,
> Or shut me nightly in a charnel house
> O'er covered quite with dead men's rattling bones;
> Or bid me go into a new made grave,
> Or hide me with a dead man in this shroud—
> Things that to hear them told have made me tremble.

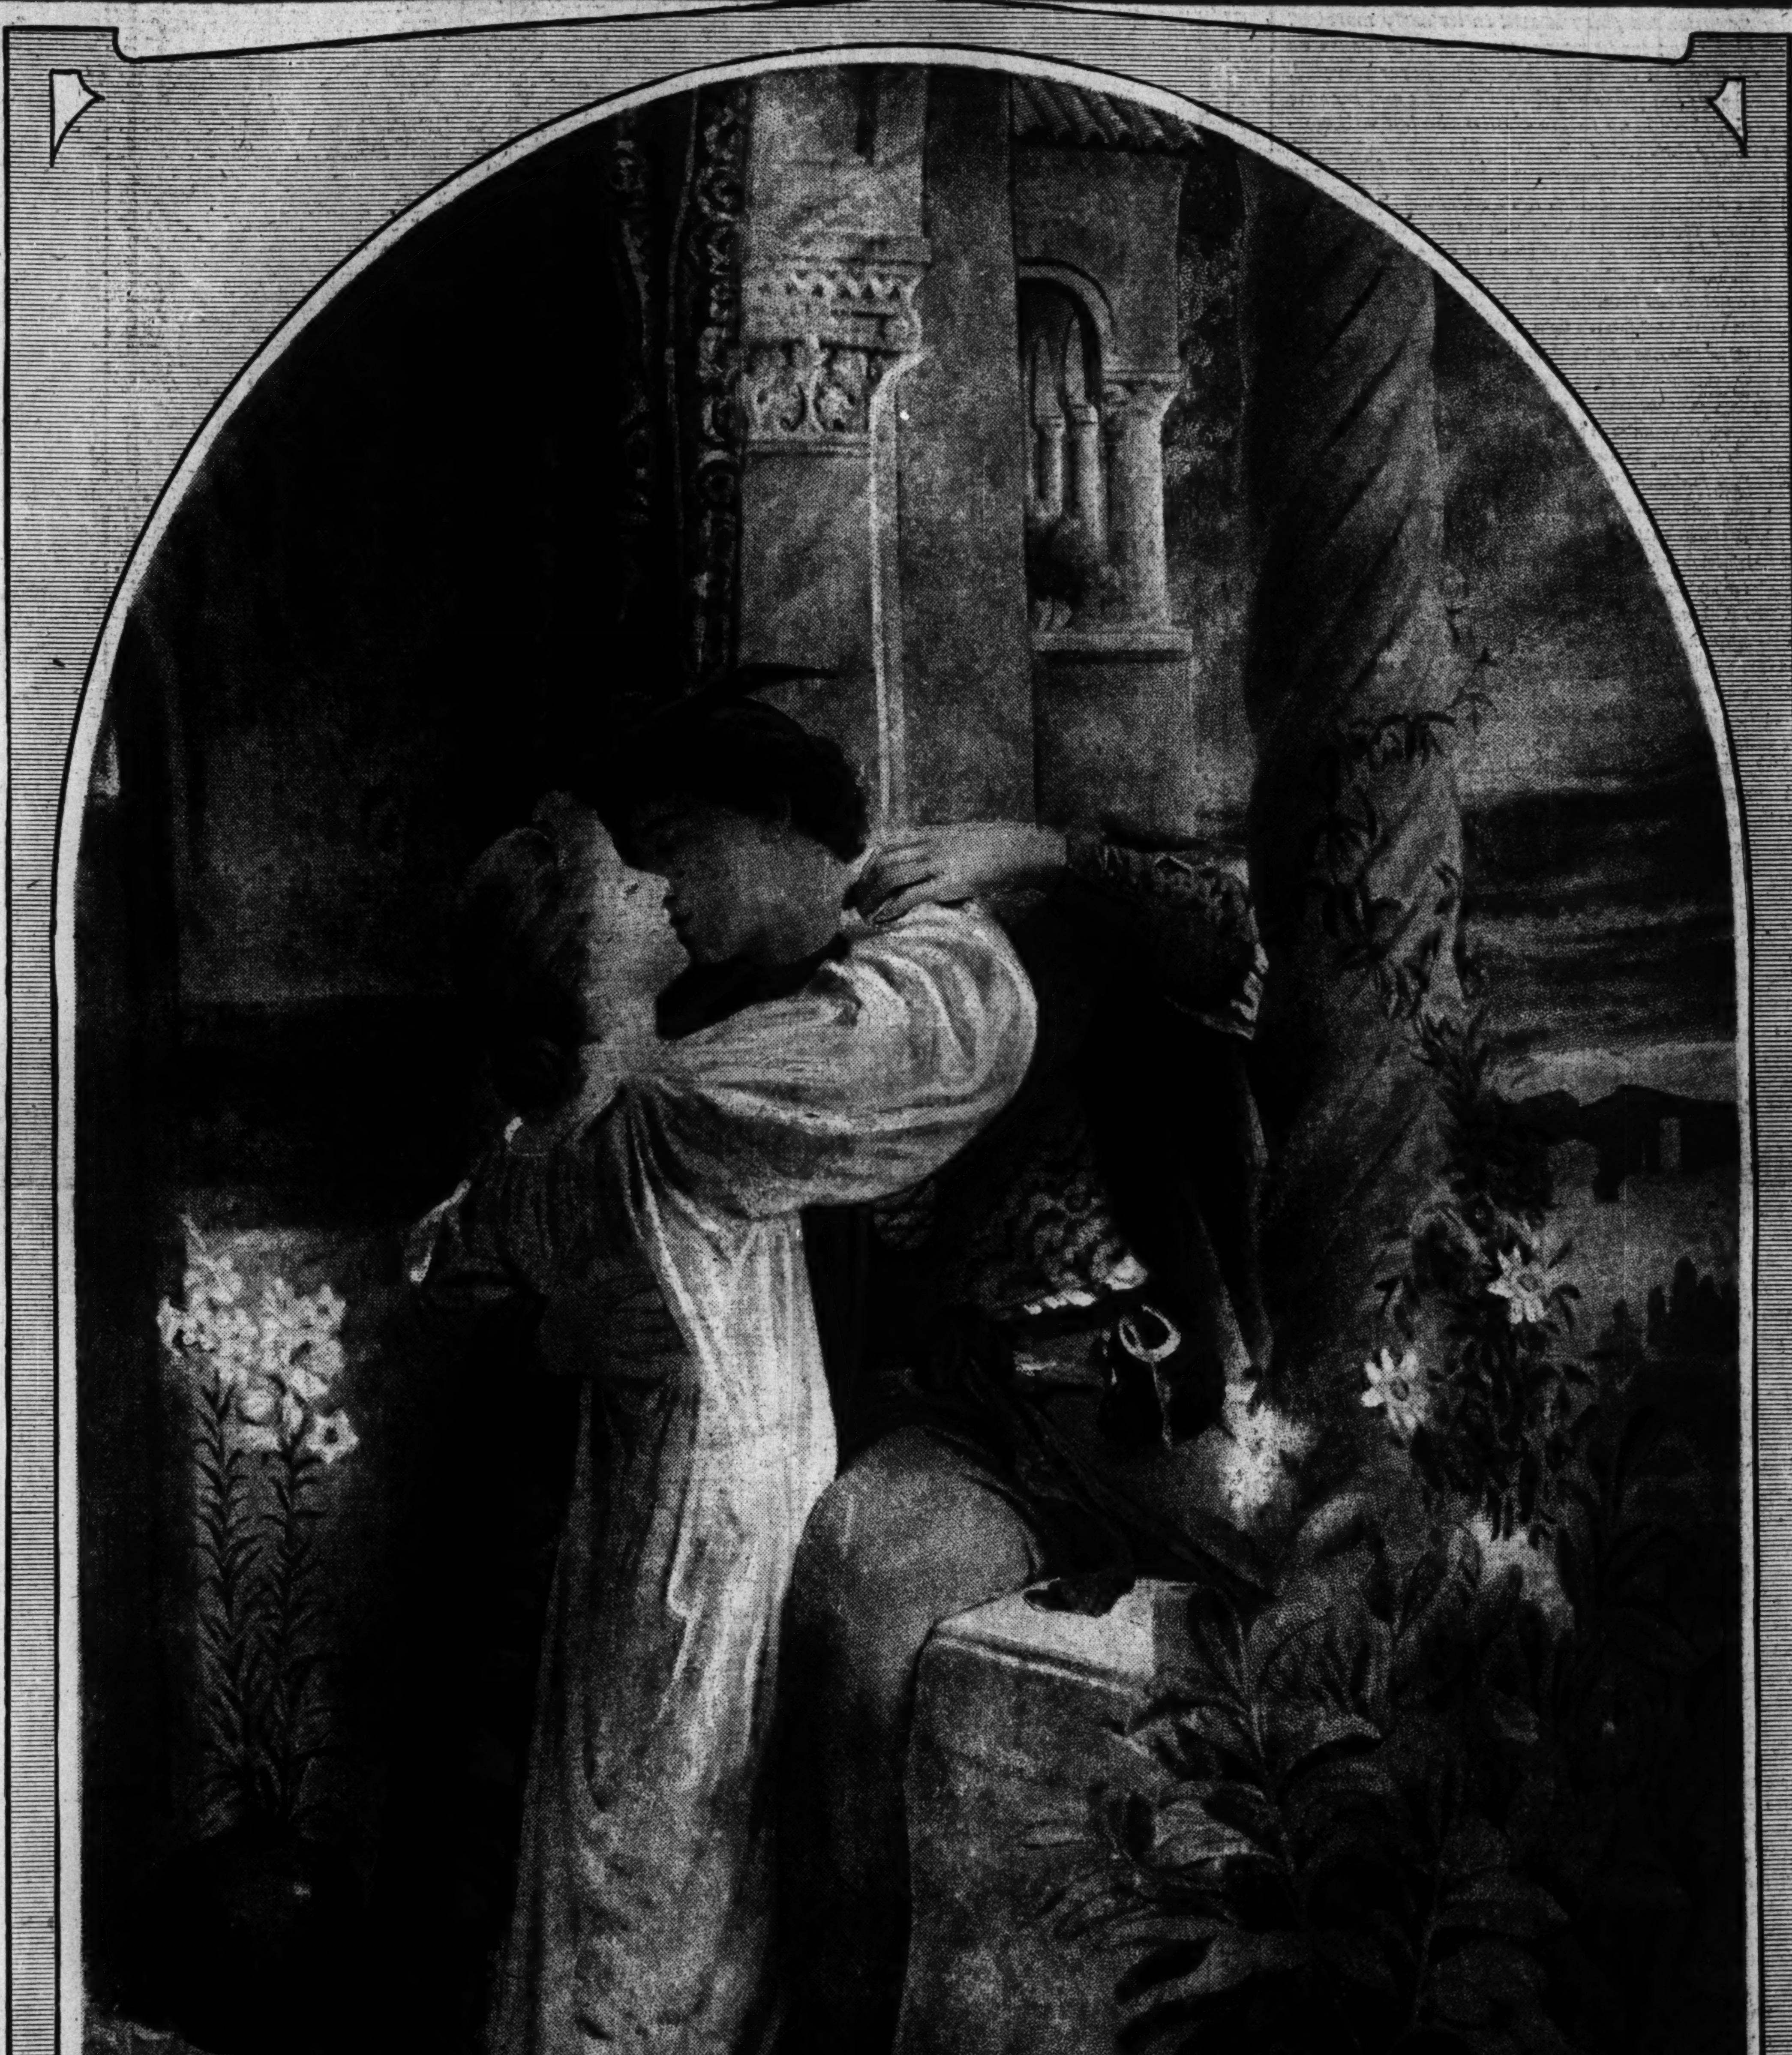
But her spirit does not quail at the end when she drinks the sleeping potion. Waking later to discover Romeo dead beside her from the poison he has drunk, she kisses him, hoping to draw some drop of the drug from his dead lips that she, too, could join him and rest in peace. Failing in this, she stabs herself and falls across his body.

There is no suffocating sense of horror here. Their tomb does not suggest a charnel vault haunted by specters of despair, but a place of satisfied joys. In one intoxicating draft they had quaffed their cup of life with all its pleasures and its agonies.

In the words of Goethe, their passion, like a shell thrown from a mortar by night, rose like a brilliant flash, and dwelt, mixing for a moment with the stars of heaven. Then, falling with a crash, it burst and was consumed.

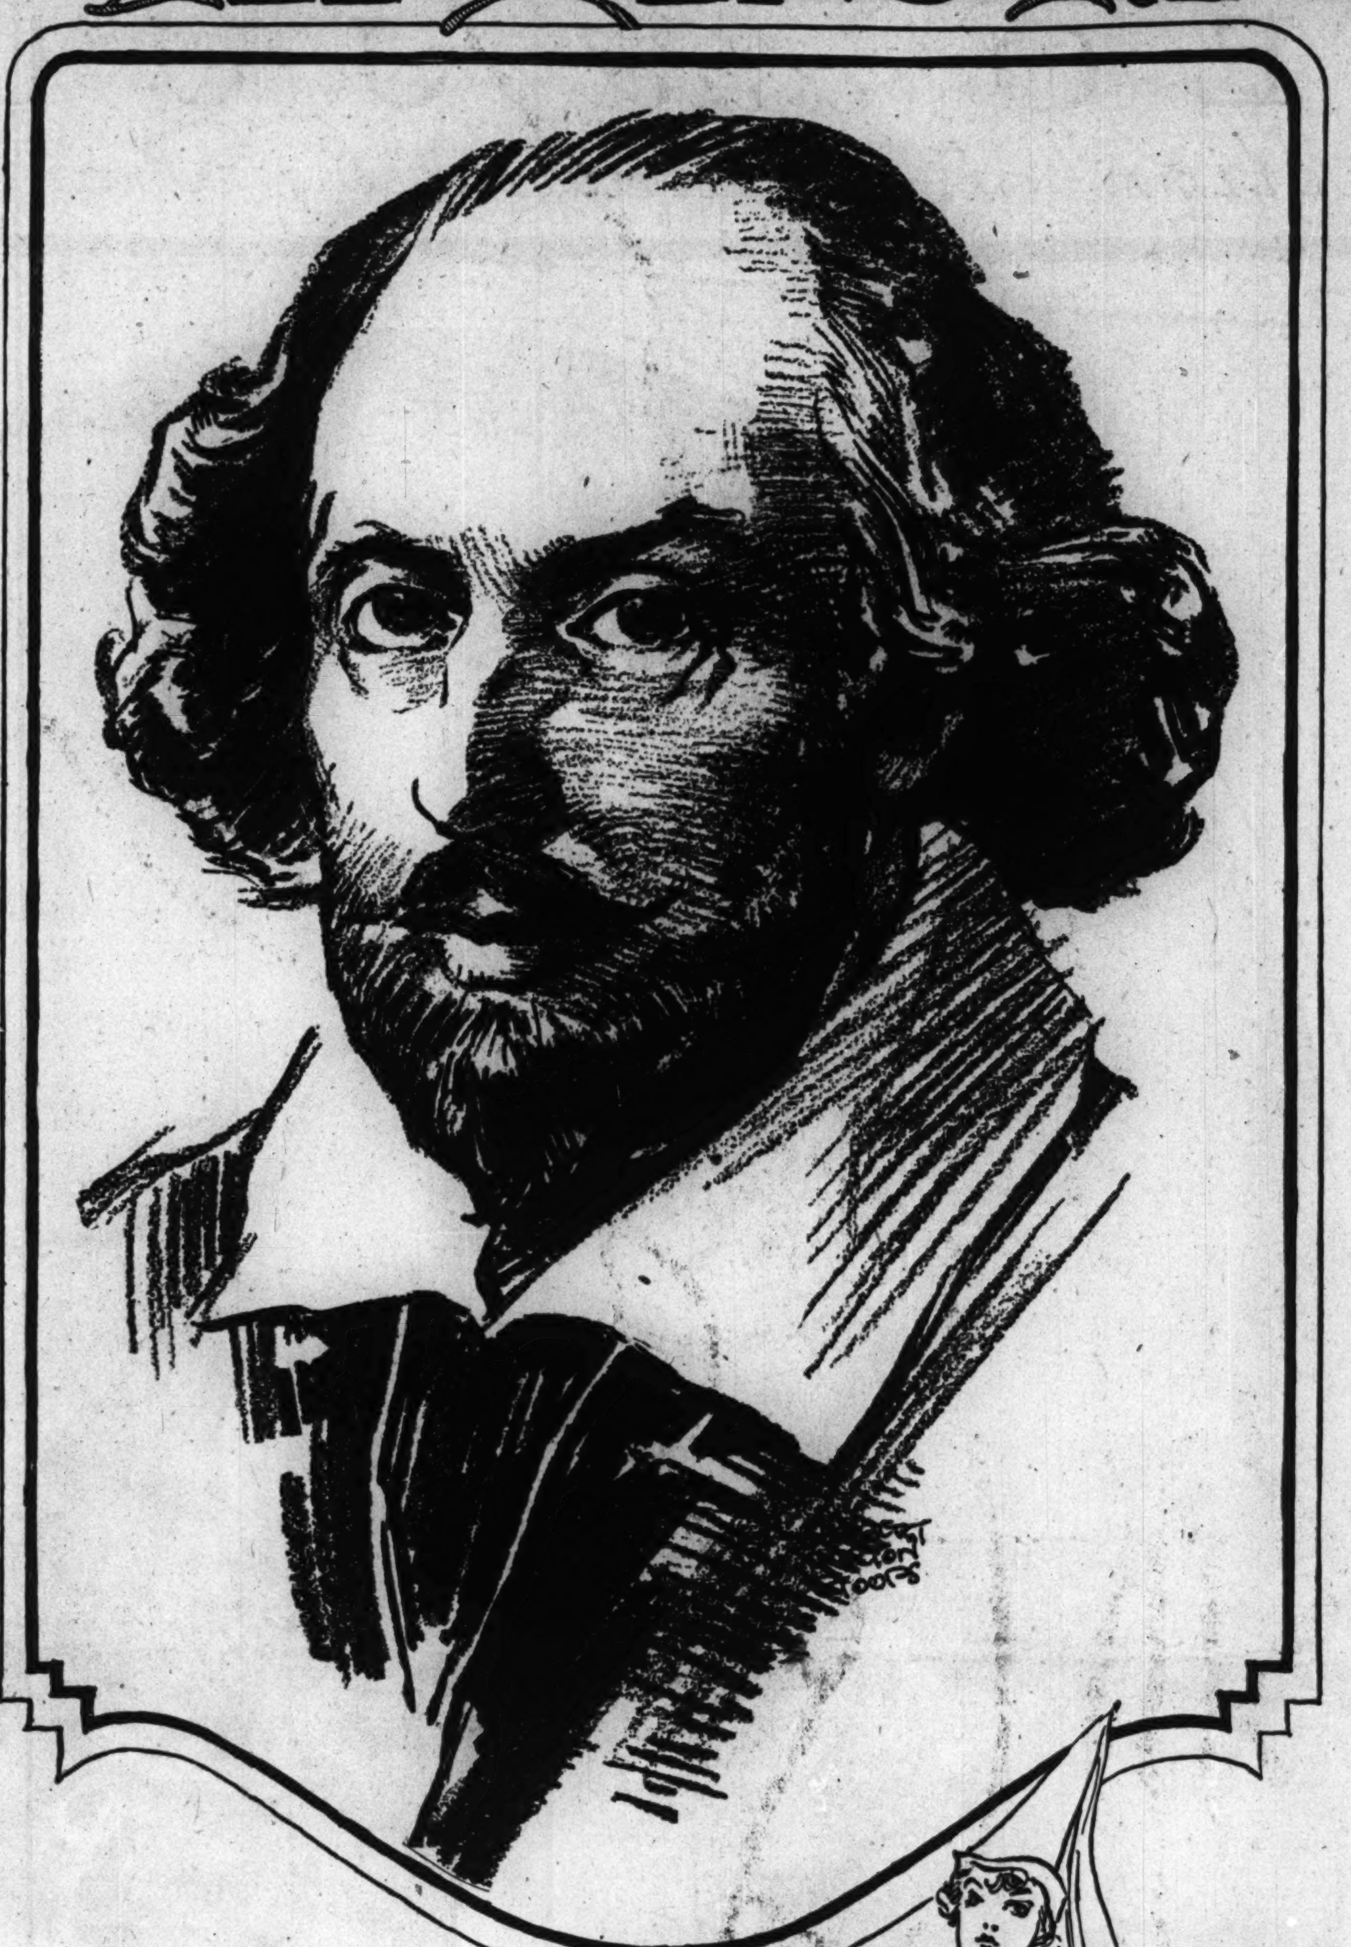
There is an exquisiteness in this painting of the lovers' parting which is markedly "Dicksee." No exaggeration, no coarseness, only two embracing figures desperately conscious of the dawning morn upon the hills, which was to come between and divide them. The delicacy and refinement of the theme's treatment is one of its charms. This, together with the rich beauty of the coloring and the grace of the figures, places it high in its nook among the world famous pictures.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next week.



The SOUL OF SHAKSPEARE IS IN ALL MEN'S HEARTS -Browning

A world today is at Shakspeare's feet and he who understood all men is adored by all men. After three long centuries his glory is still in its early morning. He is read and loved by people whose languages he never spoke and in whose country he never traveled. His heart is the pulse of all men's hearts and because this is so there is no future civilization but will worship at his shrine.



TODAY a world is commemorating the tercentenary of the death of William Shakspeare. It is marking the apex of the observance of one of the great historical events of the ages, celebrating an existence which has had a profound influence on the subsequent life and history of two hemispheres.

After 300 years, Shakspeare's fame is still in its early morning. He is a best seller today, selling by the millions, where the average novel of the hour achieves only a sale into the thousands. The popular vote which places him at the head of the noble line of poets is nearly unanimous. He might be included in that colloquial American phrase, the "big four": "Homer, Dante, Goethe, and Shakspeare, and the greatest of these is Shakspeare."

Time was, perhaps two hundred years ago, when one might with safety have attacked this poet of men. Voltaire's excessive antagonism in the eighteenth century was largely responsible for the retarded growth of Shakspeare's reputation among the French and Latin nations. Now, though, the sharp recoil of that gun is so much greater than its discharge that even men like Tolstoi and Bernard Shaw have found that people paid no attention to them when they shot their shafts of ridicule at Shakspeare.

Even in his lifetime, however, his genius was recognized, and to some extent appreciated. Probably no man knew Shakspeare better than Ben Jonson, who said of him:

"I love Shakspeare, and do honor his memory this side idolatry."

Shakspeare, after all, is the only real biographer of Shakspeare. He is the center of a myth, and that myth is that we know nothing of him. What we understand of his character we understand through his works. There is no mystery he has not shown knowledge of. There is no type of man he has not read. There is no lover he has not outloved, no maiden who has not found him finer than her delicacy.

They say that his sonnets unlock the key of his heart. The love stories they tell are the strangest, perhaps, and the most illuminating in the whole field of literary and artistic biography. His tragedies and comedies, read in their light, become the biographers of his soul.

He was born at Stratford on Avon in 1564. His house was humble, the chamber in which he came into this world wretched. The whole miserable building sheltered a decayed family. His debut he made in a slaughter house, and at 18 he married. His wife, Anne Hathaway, was eight years older than himself. It is said that she rocked him as a tiny babe in his cradle, and later that incipient maternal love was turned into wifely devotion. She had a daughter and twins by him, but their married life was not happy. Shakspeare, like Fontaine, did but sip at married life and then passed on to pastures new. In turn he was schoolmaster, clerk to an attorney, and then a poacher. In the pursuit of this last profession he landed in jail, from which he managed to extricate himself and fly to London. There, in order to gain a livelihood, he commenced holding horses at back doors of theaters. He remained some time at the threshold of theatrical life, beginning his real work therein as a barker or call boy.

Shakspeare became a well known playwright before he was 30 years old, and by the time he was 35 he was in the cast of Jonson's comedy, "Every Man in His Humour," playing an important rôle.

Acting on the principle that a man attains easy circumstances only through his own labors, and if he gains wealth it is by making others labor for him, Shakspeare added to the business of author and actor those of director and manager. He acquired partial proprietorship in the Blackfriars and Globe theaters, bought large tracts of land, and finally retired to his native town on his own property.

Love was his sin, he said to himself, as Heine said of himself, and Alfred de Musset. The "sweet abandonments of love" were the occupations of his life, apart from his work. He was tender hearted and he was a poet. Nothing more is required to live, to be joyous, to be deceived and to suffer, to traverse without pause the circle of illusions and pains which whirls around and around but never ends.

And as he felt all the emotions and works that constitute love, so his men and women reflect every phase of that passion, the sensuous, the esthetic, the intellectual. His love was a modern love, full fledged, and needs no analysis. It was a primitive passion, refined by intellectual and moral culture.

In reading Shakspeare it seems as though almost every saying one has ever heard can be attributed to him. On love his remarks are infinite.

From "The Merchant of Venice":

Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart or in the head?
How begot, how nourished?
Reply, reply.

It is engendered in the eyes,
With gazing fed; and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies.

Let us all ring fancy's knell;
I'll begin it—ding, dong, bell.
Ding, dong, bell.

From "Romeo and Juliet":

When he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night
And pay no worship to the garish moon.

As the Duke says in "Twelfth Night":

If music be the food of love, play on forever.

From "King Henry V.":

She's beautiful, and therefore to be wooed,
She is a woman and therefore to be won.

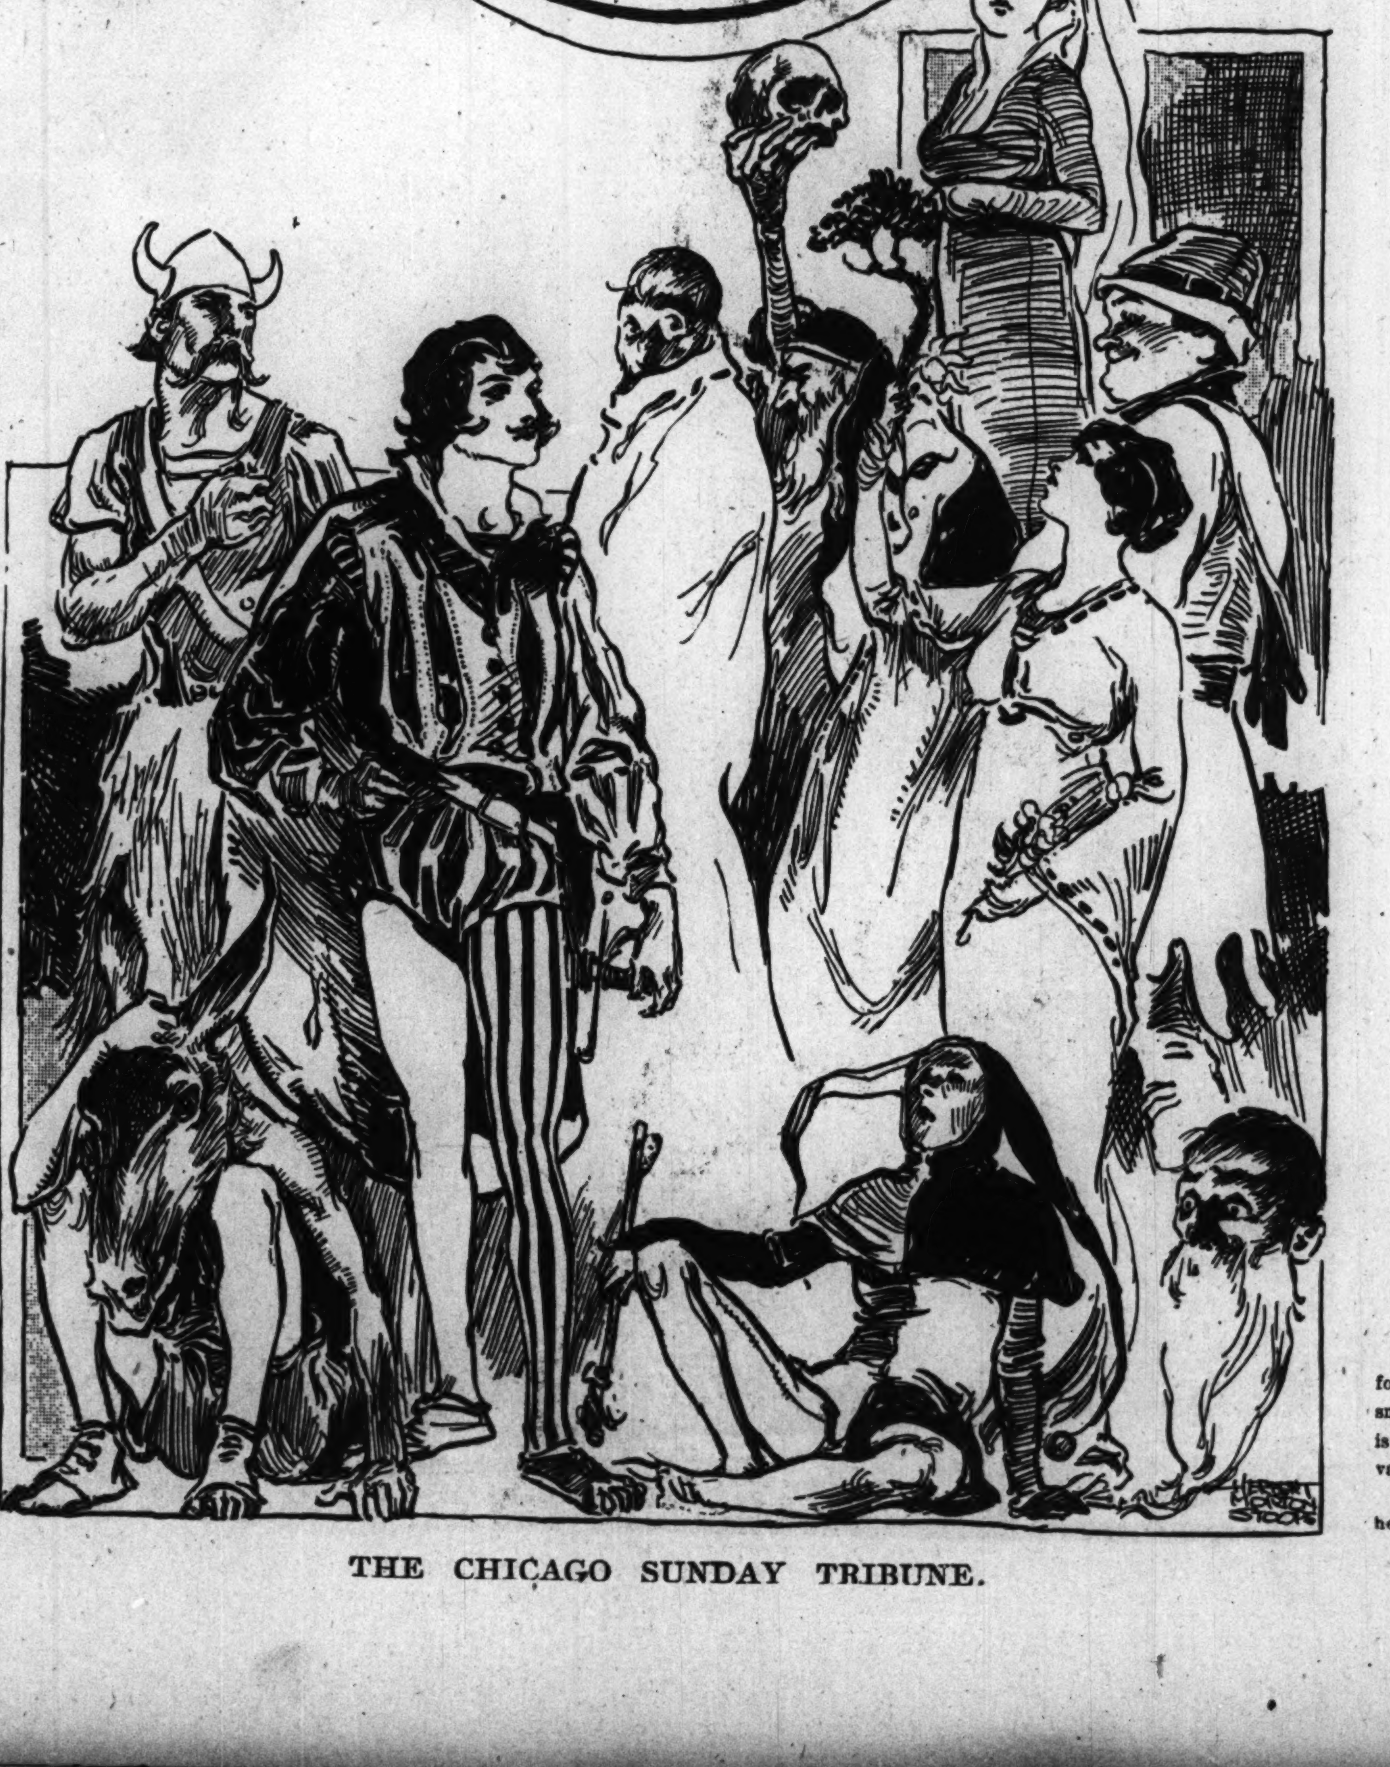
On other subjects his quotations are no less famous.

From "Hamlet":

There is nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so.

From "Cymbeline":

No, 'tis slander
Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world.



From "Hamlet":

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough hew them as we will.

From "All's Well That Ends Well".

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven; the fated sky
Gives us free scope, only doth backward pull,
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.

From "Julius Cæsar":

Men at some times are masters of their fates;
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

From "Macbeth":

Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage
And then is heard no more; it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

From "Macbeth":

Things without all remedy should be without regard.
What's done is done.

From "Love's Labor's Lost":

For where is any author in the world
Teaches such beauty as the woman's eye.

From "Hamlet":

This above all—to thine own self be true,
And it must follow as the night the day
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

From "Macbeth":

I have no spur to prick the sides of my intent.
But only vaulting ambition, which o'er leaps itself
And falls on the other.

From "Hamlet":

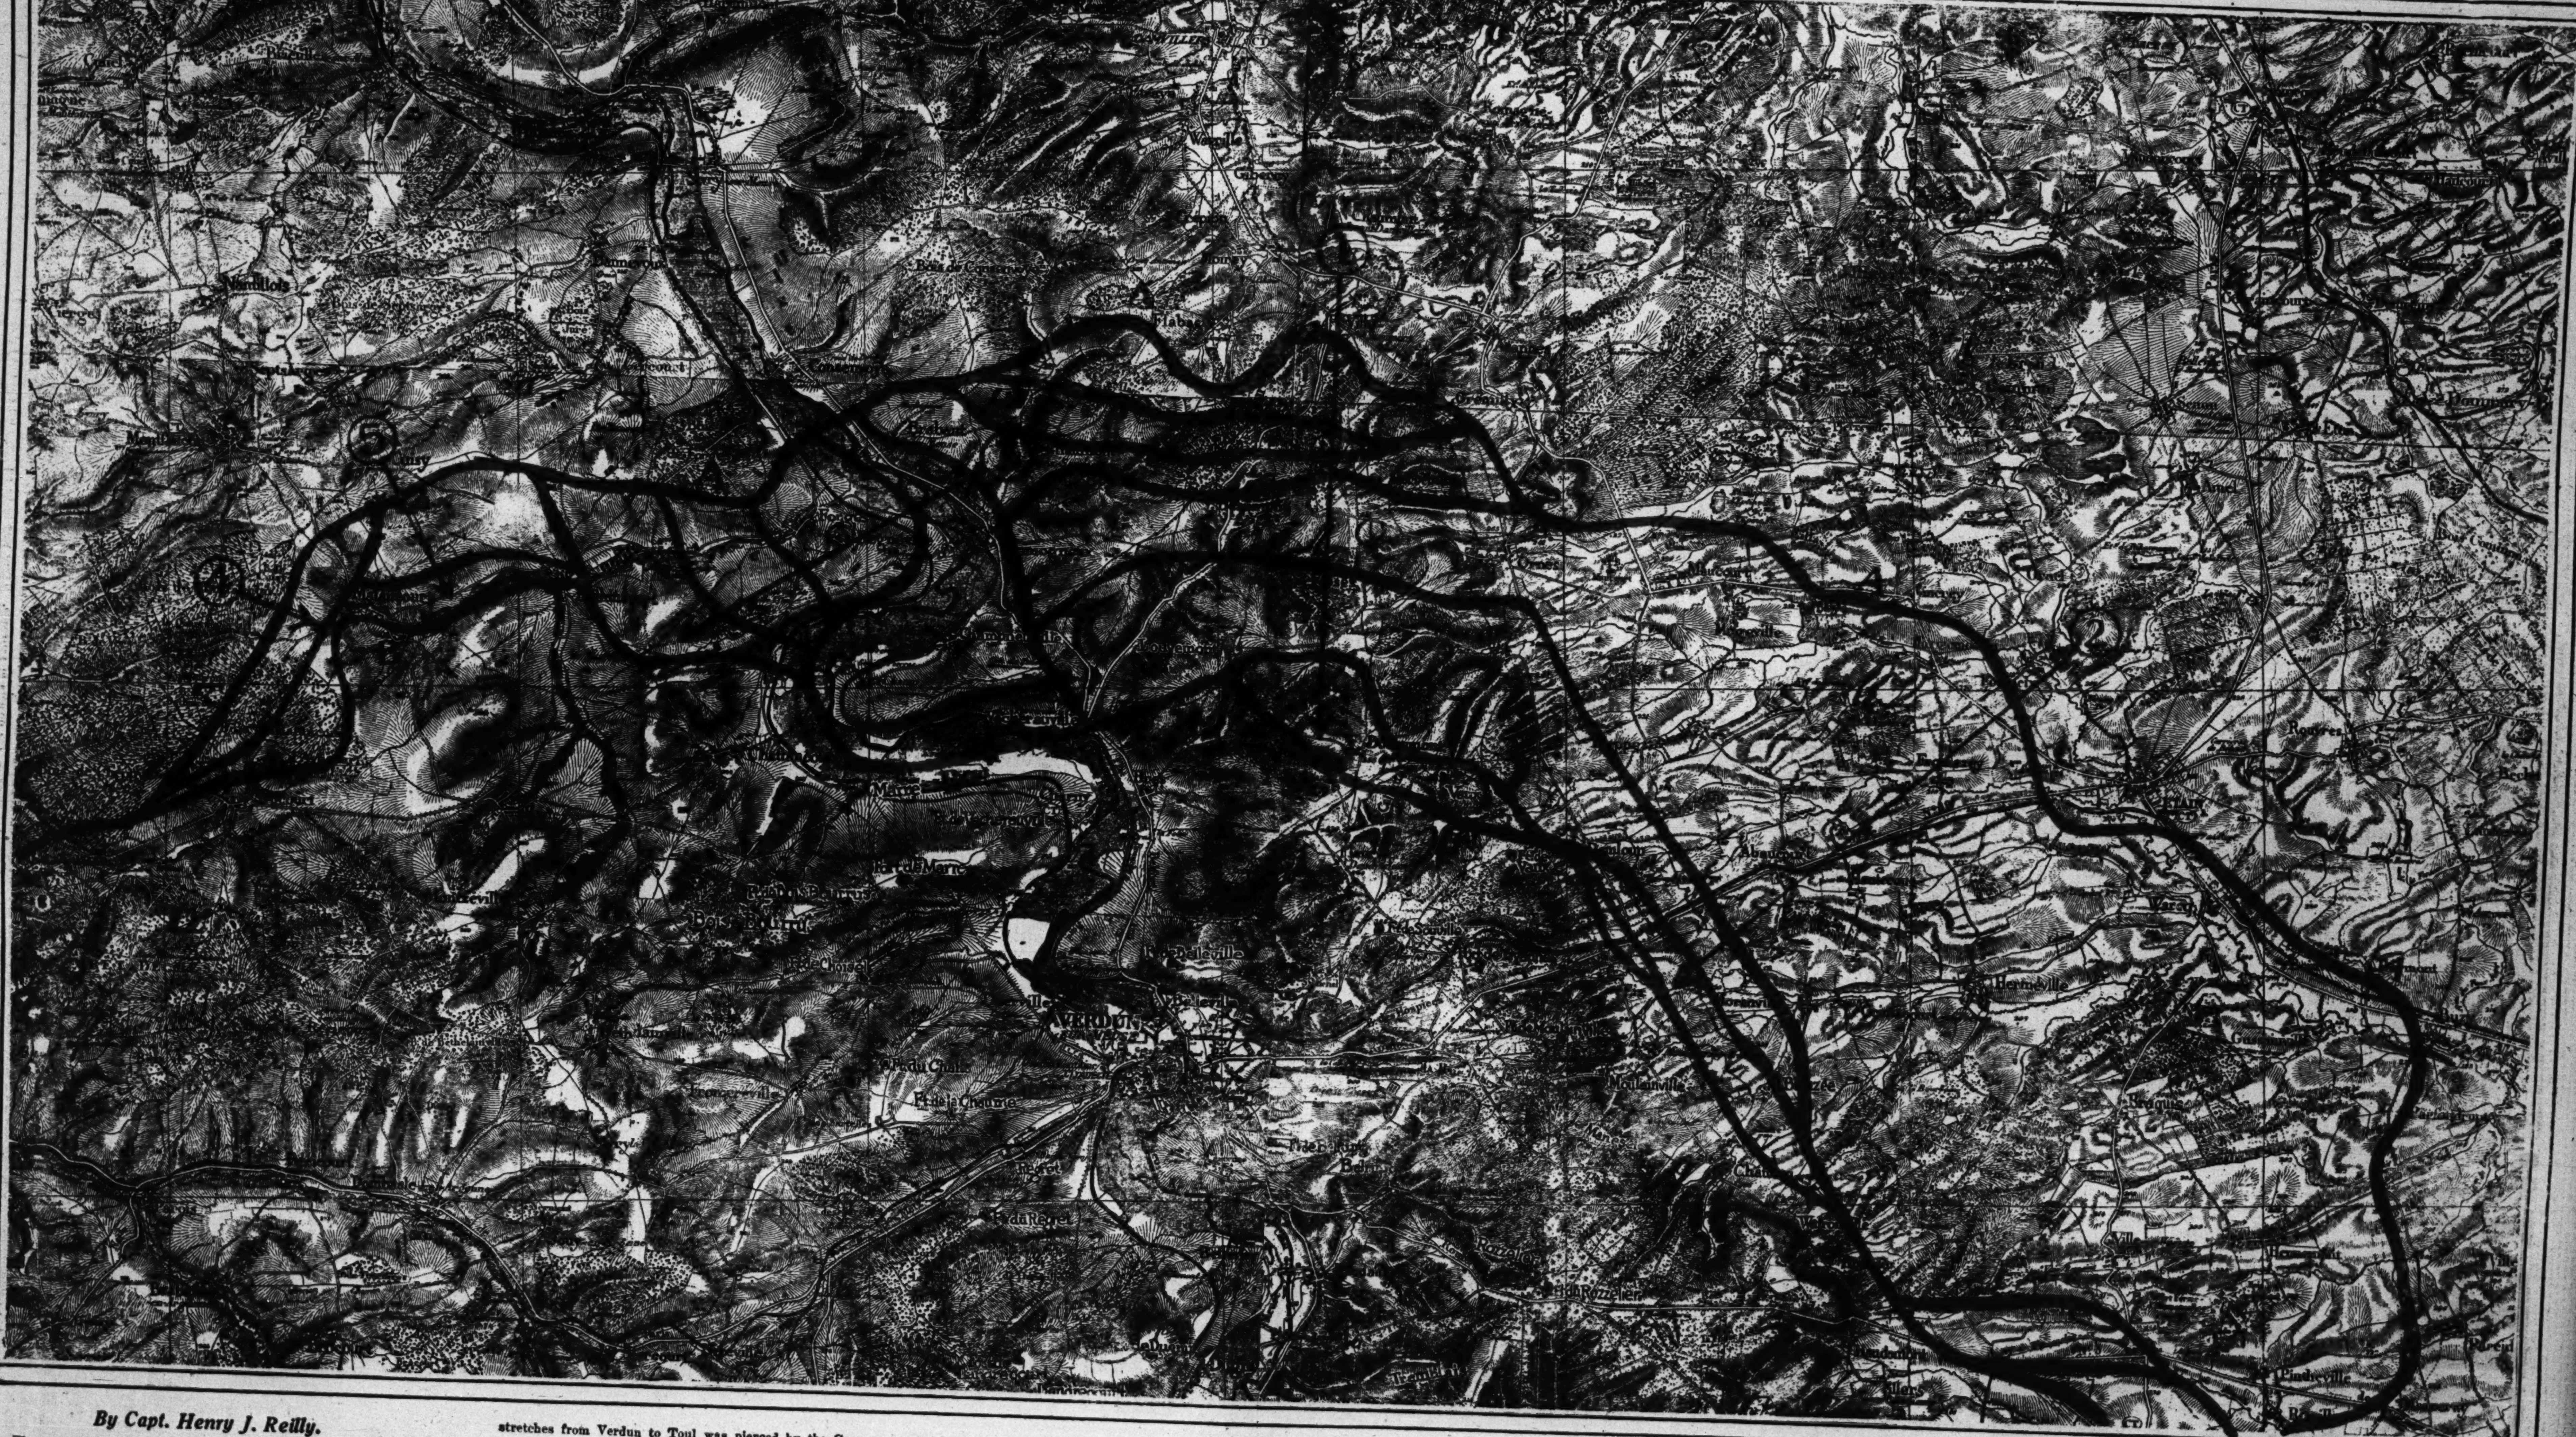
Do not as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Whilst like a puffed and reckless libertine
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads.

As a world conqueror Shakspeare stands unsurpassed. Napoleon fought for years and left the boundaries of that country he so adored smaller than when he began. Shakspeare has a world at his feet. It is hard to conceive of any future state of civilization, however far advanced, in which he will not be recognized, adored.

In the words of Browning, "The soul of Shakspeare is in all men's hearts."

THE BATTLE FOR VERDUN



By Capt. Henry J. Reilly.

The attack on Verdun, which has now been under way since Feb. 21, is one of the decisive actions of the present European war. The taking of Verdun or the failure to take it may mean the winning of the war by Germany or its loss.

Verdun first showed its value in the battle of the Marne, when by its position and strength it held up the army of the crown prince, thus putting the German center in danger from the flank attacks made by that part of the French line stretching from Verdun south and west through the Argonne.

Verdun is the northernmost fortress of the two fortified sections along the eastern frontier of France. The northernmost of these sections which stretches from Verdun to Toul was pierced by the Germans at St. Mihiel after they had taken up a position on the Aisne following their defeat on the Marne.

If they succeed in taking Verdun the possession of St. Mihiel will probably enable them to break through the whole of the fortified section north of Toul, thus opening a line of invasion into France which will take in the rear all the positions now held by the French from Verdun through the Argonne, the Champagne, and farther west.

From the 15th of February the French staff had foreseen an attack on the fortress. The Germans had brought up guns of all calibers and placed them along a front from Montfaucon in the Argonne to Etain in the Woevre. Throughout the 20th and 21st these guns heavily bombarded all the French positions and also the town of Verdun, the citadel of the fortress. The first infantry attack was made the evening of the 21st against the center of the northern front and resulted in a loss to the French of the first and second line trenches along a front of about two and one-half miles.

The 22d, 23d, and 24th the German attacks continued from the north and resulted in steady gains [(1) on the map]. During these same days the Germans commenced to shove in from Etain on the eastern front, with the result that by the 26th they had gained considerable ground [(2) on the map].

The 26th violent attacks resulted in considerable German gains along the northern front and in the capture of Fort de Douaumont. By the 27th they had advanced about five miles from the north and seven miles from the east, thus being about five miles from Verdun in both directions. As during this time they had made no advance to the west of the Meuse, the French on that side of the river by their fire flanked the German positions east of it and north of Verdun.

Therefore the Germans started a series of attacks from the eastern bank across the Meuse in a general southwesterly direction [(3) on the map]. These attacks, coupled with others made from the west [(4) on the map] and from the north [(5) on the map], gradually forced the French back to the line marked B on the map.

During this time they were not inactive west of the Meuse, but captured Fresnes and advanced north of Eix. Later they captured the village of Vaux and the greater part of Caillette wood. Thus from the beginning the Germans have steadily gained as a result of their attacks.

If they can continue these attacks as persistently and with such steady gains as they have been making, it is only a question of time until Verdun will be evacuated or surrendered by the French. The whole question hinges now on the ability of the French to make the German progress so slow and so costly that they cannot keep up their attacks.

Due to the length of time needed to print the map of the battle for Verdun, the above was written more than a week ago. The fight to date will be found in Capt. Reilly's Weekly Review of the War.

The map is a French military map such as is carried by the French officers now fighting at Verdun.

THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

"GIRL-GIRL"

by LOUISE JAMES BARGELT

"Don't Marry Until You Are Sure That You Love. Don't Give Yourself Without Love. Love Only Matters. Wait Till You Are Sure That You Love and Make Your Husband the First in Your Life. It Is Better That Way. Women Don't Know the Horror Men Have of Old Love Affairs. They Won't Own It, but It Is True. There Is Only One Way to Be in Love and Every Additional Love Affair That a Girl Has Is a Copy of the First. Those Who Love Often Bring Nothing Fresh to Its Altar."

THE luxurious private car attached to the rear of the big Canadian limited was speeding on its rapid way toward Winnipeg. It was a clear, purple night, starry, too, but there was no moon. On the railed platform of the observation car a man and a girl sat talking.

"If we make another stop tonight I'll collapse from sheer despair," the girl pouted prettily.

"It is bad," agreed the man sympathetically. "But it won't last always. We are bound to reach New York some time."

"I don't believe it," she returned with a mock wail in her light voice.

Charlton smiled as he lit another cigar, his tenth since early that morning. Marjorie looked too genuinely bored, he decided, to risk a proposal tonight. Tomorrow would find her in better humor. He knew that she was expecting him to propose, some time on their trip to New York. And he knew that she would accept him. Still, even with all things assured, there was a psychological time and place, and the moment at hand did not seem that time.

"There now—we're stopping again! We are, Jack—we are!"

It was true. They were stopping, and the town, like many another diminutive western village, could not even be detected from the station.

"Shall I notify the engineer that the daughter of a railroad president decrees that no more stops shall be made under penalty of death?"

"Please don't be silly! I'm getting a dreadful headache from this perpetual jerking of the train."

"I'm awfully sorry—really I am," said Charlton contritely. Then: "Look—some one's going to miss the train. See—that little figure running down the road. She'll never make it."

They watched the shadowy outline of a girl as she came running—as if from fate itself—down the dusty, narrow country road. The night was remarkably clear and her figure showed distinctly. Streamers from the tam o' shanter on her head were flying far behind.

"Jack, she can make our car if you'll open the door. Quick—open it—hurry!" exclaimed Marjorie excitedly.

Charlton obeyed. He was not a moment too soon either, for, leaning down, he was just able to signal to her, catch her in his arms, and swing her to safety in the middle of the platform.

"Some run that was," he laughed as he released his hold. Then jocularly, to relieve the strain: "What were you going to do if our doors had not opened to receive you?"

"Gracious, but you had a narrow escape! Weren't you scared?" put in Marjorie interestedly.

The newcomer did not answer. Instead she looked from one to the other, genuine positive distress stamped on every feature.

"It was awfully good of you to help me out," she quavered finally. She looked as if, had she her own way, she would retreat back to that same country road down which she had come flying only a moment before.

"Well, don't worry now. You are quite safe," assured Charlton. He was thinking that he had never seen quite such a striking specimen of 19 year old femininity. She was dark, a little on the gypsy type, with soft black hair, warmly white skin absolutely unflecked by color, and dark, heavy lidded eyes, with the strangest slant at the corners. Curiously enough, he was suddenly possessed of a desire to see her smile. He wanted to see the red, expressive mouth with the corners ever so slightly depressed, break into a smile.

"I must go—into one of the other cars," she said, with a desperate little move.

"I beg your pardon, but you must not," returned Charlton. A whimsical wish to see more of her was growing stronger every moment. "Stay and amuse us. We are very bored—at least Miss Van Nostrum is, and her state of mind is contagious."

"I don't think I'd better." The girl was still poised ready for flight.

"Really you had. Sit down, please." Marjorie's manner had changed to pretty pleading and there was a curly note in her voice which few people ever resisted long.

"But I can't—I mustn't—I shouldn't be here at all."

"And why not?" persisted Marjorie.

"Because—O, please let me go into the other car!"

Charlton stared helplessly. Marjorie went closer to the girl and put her hand on her arm.

"Tell me, won't you, what the trouble is?"

Then a most surprising thing happened. She burst into violent sobbing.

"I—I shouldn't have got on this train at all. It was a wild thing to do, but I wanted so to get away. I just had to get away and I hadn't any money, and I thought if I could get to Winnipeg some way things would be better." It all came out in a tearful gasp. "I haven't any money——"

Marjorie and Charlton exchanged glances for the briefest of moments.

"Now I am sure that you are not going to leave us," Marjorie said quickly. "This is our private car and you couldn't possibly pay anything if you had a whole carload of money. So you just sit down and make yourself thoroughly comfortable."

The girl stared hard, a bewildered, pathetic look in her wonderful eyes. Then a wave of color surged into her face, a wave of incredulous joy, and she smiled. It was a smile that could unlock prison doors, Charlton decided.

"You mean that—that I can stay here and ride with you?"

"Surely I do. We will let you go at Winnipeg tomorrow morning."

"O, that is glorious!" She caught her breath and held it an instant and then let it go in a long sigh. "When things get so bad that they just can't get any worse, they always get better," she finished simply.

"Were things pretty bad?" questioned Marjorie.

"Well, rather. No money, no relatives, no anything—and then I just had to get away." She shivered. Then, with sudden abandon: "If I had not come away tonight I would have married a man I don't care about—a man I don't love—a man I would have loathed," she finished, all the tragedy of which 19 can be capable thrown into the last words.

"You are eloping then—with yourself and not with a man," laughed Marjorie lightly.

"Yes, and he will be terribly angry, too, when he discovers I have gone."

"No danger of his pursuing you?" Charlton asked, pulling up three chairs and fitting them into the platform railing.

"I hope not. He won't know where I have gone, you see—and then he's pretty old, too, and can't travel very fast." She unloosened her scarf from about her neck and threw back her sweater, revealing an exquisitely rounded neck and shoulders, only slightly covered by a sheer organdy waist.

"Isn't it funny," she said, yielding herself apparently to the joy of intimate confession, "how when everything goes wrong a girl seems to think that she can make it all right again if she only marries some one?" She brushed her hand across her eyes as though to scatter unpleasant thoughts.

"Don't you want to marry?"

"Some day when I love, but not before. I must love as my father did. No other way will ever satisfy me." Her eyes caught Charlton's and were held a moment. Then she looked beyond, out into the dark country which seemed to be rushing by them on both sides, and a faint color surged into her face.

"Did your mother and father love—very deeply?" Charlton asked.

"Beyond most people, I think," she answered slowly. "My father gave up his home and country for her. He was French and living in Paris. He was of noble birth. She was 'of the people,' as they say over there. But she was very beautiful and he loved her, and they ran away together and came here, to Canada, to live.

"If it had not been for the war they would never have known a day's misery. It was fortunate, though—they died before things were too bad. I shall never forget what father said to me once—very near the end.

"'Don't marry until you are sure that you love. Don't give yourself without love. Love only matters. Wait till you are sure that you love, and make your husband the first in your life. It is better that way. Women don't know the horror men have of old love affairs. They won't own it, but it is true. There is only one way to be in love, and every additional love affair that a girl has is a copy of the first. Those who love often bring nothing fresh to its altar.'

"I remembered those words tonight, and they saved me, I am sure, when I was desperate and much in need. The man I was to have married was good to me and loved me, too, in his way. But he was years older than I, and I—well, I just couldn't marry him, that's all. I tried hard enough. For weeks I tried to force myself to do it. The wedding was set for tonight. I waited until ten minutes of the time he was to come for me. Then it came over me, a wave of horror at what I was to do. I remembered that this train had not gone through and that I might still catch it. I fled out the back door of the house where I was staying—and here I am!"

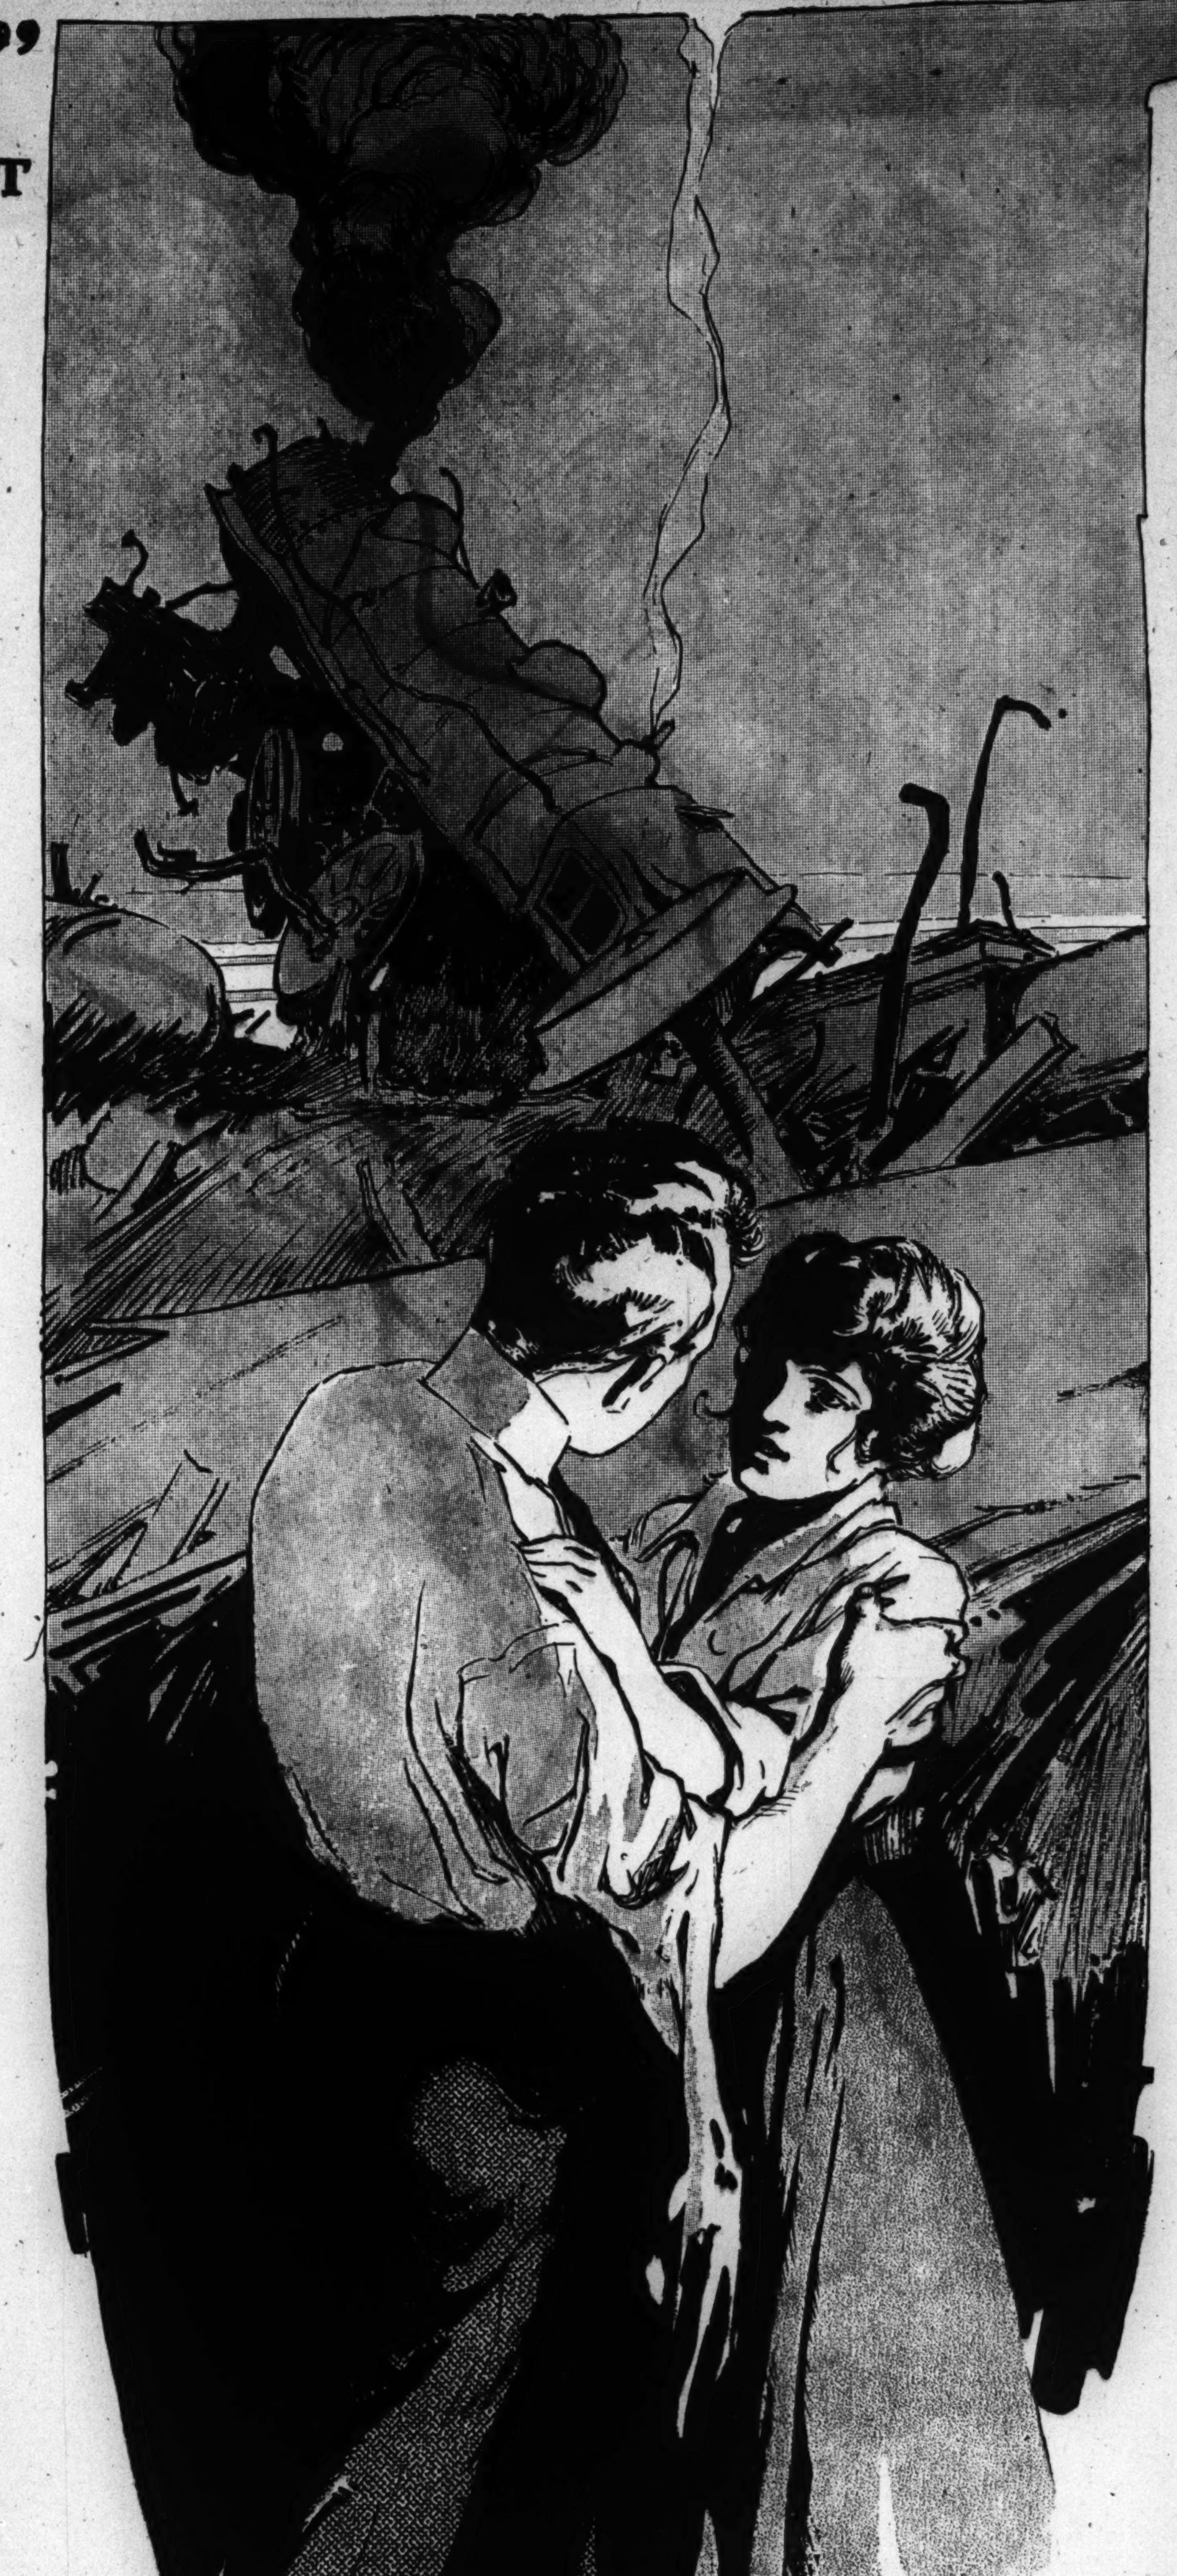
She smiled again, and this time it was a flash of joy which came from her eyes, lightening her whole face.

There was a silence. Charlton smoked with apparent unconcern, glancing now and then surreptitiously at the lovely girl beside him. She sat very still, with her hands clasped loosely in front of her. All distress had vanished like an April shower from her face, and in her eyes there was a dreamy, irresponsible gladness.

"Marjorie!" A voice called out from the lounging room of the car, a fretful, feminine voice, imperious like Marjorie's, but less agreeable.

"I'm coming, mother," and Marjorie sprang to her feet quickly, excusing herself.

On rushed the train, leaving vast open spaces of country behind it. Small lakes were dimly visible between long rows of hills, thickly wooded, and in the sky overhead the stars had become infinite, numberless.



SHE LOOKED UP AT HIM SILENT.

"I wish that they wouldn't come out! I don't like stars. They make me want things so badly," the girl said, her eyes clouding swiftly.

"Nineteen should not want things," objected Charlton.

"I'm nearly 20," she corrected lightly. Then she leaned forward impulsively.

"Will you tell me something that I want very much to know?"

"I will tell you anything," promised Charlton recklessly. He was finding it difficult to keep his tone duly formal.

"Tell me about the city," she begged. "The people in it. Do they have greater joys, deeper loves than those who live always in the country? I know so little and I want—O, I want to know so much!" She caught her breath again and Charlton thought he had never heard a voice so desire tinged. "O, I love life so and yet I do not know it." She stretched out her hands. "Why, I haven't even touched it with the tips of my fingers!"

Charlton flecked the ashes from his cigar. Folly was urging him into dangerous paths, and his martyred conscience was throbbing painfully, protestingly.

Then he sat up abruptly, giving himself a vigorous mental jerk. He reminded himself that he was going to propose, some time between Winnipeg and New York, to Marjorie Van Nostrum, the daughter of a railroad president. Both families were stupendously rich, the owners of railroads. There was to be an amalgamation of their lines shortly and intermarriage between the controlling families would set them more firmly on the thrones of high finance. Marjorie was one of the prettiest debutantes and he was one of the most eligible men in New York's younger set. He liked her, too, and she liked him, with the head and not the heart.

"You will be happier if you leave life alone," he said finally. "Those who know it least enjoy it most."

"Perhaps that is true. But sometimes I get so lonesome, hideously lonesome. Do you think that in Winnipeg, where I am going, things will be different and I will find happiness?" she pleaded wistfully.

He put out his hand, involuntarily covering hers for an instant. But she drew it away almost at the same moment, shrinking back, trembling ever so little. She had the look on her face of a child who has seen a wonderful toy and touched it and then understood that she must leave it forever. In her eyes there was an expression of awe.

"You will find happiness some day. You will stumble on it like a person in the dark, and it will be the more wonderful because you have never known its imitations." Then, crushing down the frantic protest from his conscience, "You are a beautiful girl—beautiful beyond any one I have ever known."

Under the softly shaded lamp the glow in her cheeks deepened to a rich red.

"Do you mean that—that I am beautiful as girls you have known are beautiful?" There was real wonder in her eyes and a longing to believe.

But her question was never answered. There was a frightful crash, a shock as though whole tons of dynamite had been exploded under their feet. Then chaos followed and utter darkness. When Charlton recovered he was lying face downwards on the right of way. Already leaping flames from the engine far ahead were licking at the splintered cars. He sprang to his feet, wondering as he did so if he would find that he was terribly hurt. Only a bruised sense of small injuries, however, was evident. Then his brain cleared.

"Where was the girl?"

Somewhere in the mad debacle she must be. He could see her huge eyes, terror filled, hear her red lips murmuring piteous cries for help. In quick anguish he called out:

"Girl! Girl!"

Minutes passed. He stumbled blindly about. Cries began to fill the air. Low moans chorused them. The whole world seemed suddenly transformed into a dreadful, hideous place. Again he called out the only words he knew:

"Girl! Girl!"

He stumbled over a limp figure. There was a cry and he recognized the sound. Out of a thousand cries he would have known it for hers.

"Girl!" The next moment he had her in his arms, was holding her close.

"I'm not hurt. Are you?" The voice was wee and small. "Is it all very dreadful? I have been lying here so long and I was afraid to get up."

"It's awful." He took an appreciable instant for deliberation. "It is a terrible accident. Can you help me? There is much to be done. I must find Marjorie and her parents. If you are not hurt we can work together."

He lifted her to her feet, where she stood still, catching her breath. In the red sinister glow from the burning trains they looked hard at each other.

"You will help me?" he repeated. "You are not afraid?"

"No, I am not afraid." She seemed transformed, her mind and body blazing with strength.

All that long night they worked side by side. They found the other members of Charlton's party. None of them was seriously hurt, although Mrs. Van Nostrum was suffering terribly from the shock and horror of it all.

As Charlton was returning from a near by cabin, where he had been helping one of the relief doctors dress the wounds, he saw the girl holding the head of a young fellow who was dying. The man was delirious and imagined that she was his sweetheart. He was begging for a kiss.

The girl looked up at Charlton without conscious intent and yet with the suggestion of a question mirrored in her face. Then, without a word, she leaned over and kissed the man lightly.

Something blazed in Charlton at that, a definite, vital something that he could not ignore. He had not admitted this thing before, even through all that interminable night that they had labored valiantly together. He knew now that he loved her, that he loved no one else, that she meant happiness for him, and that no other girl would ever matter to him.

"He is the first man I have ever kissed," she murmured softly.

They moved towards the door of the little cottage and stood watching the glowing sun. Instead of being weary, the girl seemed invigorated by the growing light and the sharp delicious air of early morning.

Charlton caught hold of her hand with a tender roughness, twined his fingers between hers, pressed his palm against hers.

"We have had a strange night," he said quietly, but she felt the intensity in his voice and eyes. "All my life seems crowded into these last few hours. We are away from every one, everything." There was deep breathing under his words.

She looked up at him silent. His words had sent a quivering joy through her whole body. This was what she had always wanted and never known. This was love and life and happiness. She understood the feeling behind his words, and as though she were doing the only thing that she could do, she bent down her face and put her forehead against his heart.

She felt his breath stirring in the thick tresses of her dark hair. She felt him tremble as she had trembled back there in the car the first hour they had met. Then she heard him whisper so softly that she could hardly have caught his words had not the fresh breeze brought them close:

"Love comes quickly sometimes, in a flash, like a great line of lightning. Can you understand that? That is the way you have come to me, in a single moment, girl! Tonight has made me know what I want—above all else—above the whole world! That is you—you!"

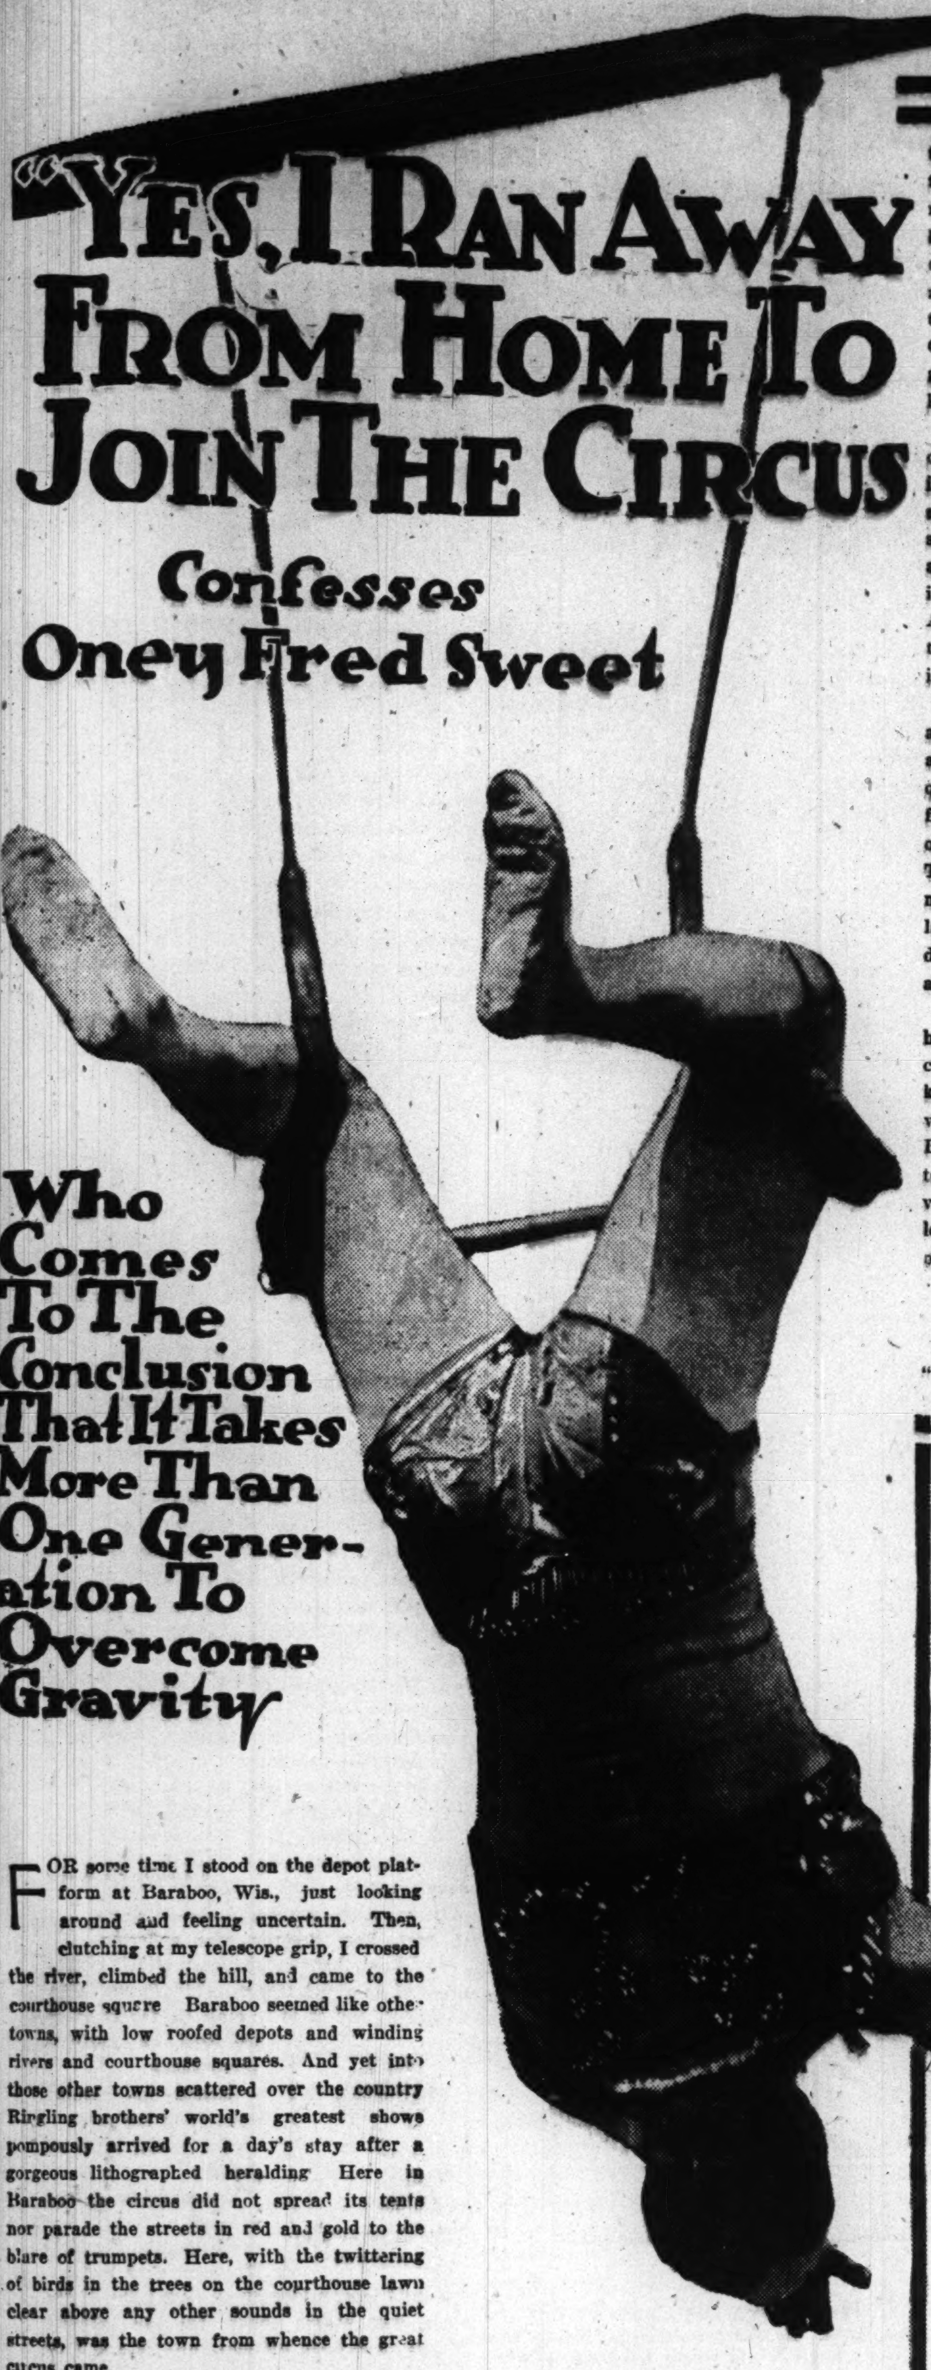
Still she did not move. She was like a person under a spell. She could sense nothing except the marvelous new force of this human love which was embracing her like iron and yet was so wondrous soft about her.

"I love you! I want you—I want you!" he breathed. His voice shook with the spirit that was moving him. "You are a wonder girl and you are mine—my wonder girl for all time!"

Then he lifted her face and their lips met. They were living their supreme moment.

"YES, I RAN AWAY FROM HOME TO JOIN THE CIRCUS"

Confesses Oney Fred Sweet



Photos by Burke and Atwell

Who Comes To The Conclusion That It Takes More Than One Generation To Overcome Gravity

FOR some time I stood on the depot platform at Baraboo, Wis., just looking around and feeling uncertain. Then, clutching at my telescope grip, I crossed the river, climbed the hill, and came to the courthouse square Baraboo seemed like other towns, with low roofed depots and winding rivers and courthouse squares. And yet into those other towns scattered over the country Ringling brothers' world's greatest shows pompously arrived for a day's stay after a gorgeous lithographed heralding Here in Baraboo the circus did not spread its tents nor parade the streets in red and gold to the blare of trumpets. Here, with the twittering of birds in the trees on the courthouse lawn clear above any other sounds in the quiet streets, was the town from whence the great circus came.

Like other towns of 6,000 or 7,000? Yes, except that many a fellow you met was able to carry on a conversation about something that had happened down at Galveston, or out in Yuma, or over in New Haven the summer before. Like other towns of its size? Yes, except that the "opery house," instead of being a source of complaint among "hall show" troupes, was a $100,000 structure of classic Grecian architecture surpassing in simple grandeur most of the theaters in Chicago's loop.

"'Course you know," explained an old man on the bank corner, "Uncle Al Ringling built it just before he died. You know Uncle Al always used to like to come back here and spend his winters. You see, we all knew him and the other boys when they was just starting out. He worked hard all his life, Uncle Al did. Never go to a movie there but when the first chord on that big pipe organ starts it makes me think of Uncle Al."

There was nothing the least bit "circusy" about the Al Ringling theater. Nor was there anything "circusy" about the office headquarters of the world's greatest shows. Save for one framed lithograph in the office—an old style lithograph that showed Al and Alf T. and Otto and Charles and John wearing mustaches and collars that were classy in the late '80s—there was little about the place to distinguish it from the offices of the lumber and coal concern across the street.

You could see plainly enough that Baraboo had long ago become accustomed to the great circus in the state of hibernation. Baraboo kids were playing intently at marbles in the vicinity of the freshly gilded band wagon. Baraboo kids roller skated, with entire interest in their roller skating, straight past canvas covered tableau floats and the ordinary looking barn that housed a huge herd of elephants.

They Were Born to the Business.

It was after some difficulty that I found "Ernie" Clark of the Clarkonians. It was hard for me to believe that I was actually in the presence of the only man in the world who has ever done "the double full twister." Mr. Clark was in one of the ring barns watching his brother train a riding horse. He was not garbed in white silk and spangles. He, who has brought "ohs" and "ahs" season after season from audiences in practically every fair sized town between the coasts, was wearing a hat and overcoat of no more unusual design or cut than my own. I didn't tell him how I had run away from home to join the circus, but started in to pull a lot of four-flush stuff, although I gulped a good deal while I was talking.

Mr. Clark interrupted to inquire not only as to what I had done along the line of aerial work, but what my father and grandfather had done.

"Don't tell me your act is full up, Mr. Clark," I entreated.

"If you had come to me, say when you were 15," answered the great aerialist, "maybe I could have done something with you. You will pardon me, you may be able to do all you insist you can, but you seem to me a little absurd. Why, my brothers and I—we were born in the business. Our great-grandfather was a circus manager in England, and my father was a juggler and rider. My two brothers and my three sisters have all been equestrians and gymnasts. You see, father taught us as children. We were not only born in the business, but during the winter here I train every day with only a chance once in awhile to go rabbit hunting and maybe the diversion of seeing Mary Pickford at night. Why, we have to diet and we don't dare drink or smoke, and we have to constantly watch ourselves to keep in shape."

"I could get on to all that," I choked, "and it would give me a chance to see the country. You could give me an easy part—one of you throw me and the other one catch me and all I would have to do is sail through the air. I know I could do it. Don't you like seeing the different towns, Mr. Clark?"

"I don't know as I remember them much," answered the aerialist, "except that I had the typhoid in Lancaster, Pa., that my sister got a fall in Kansas City, and that there is quite a bunch of gymnasts who have homes in Bloomington, Ill. Of course, I like the small towns the best. The audiences in them aren't as appreciative, but we have more time to ourselves there. The 'lot' is not so far out, the parade is shorter, and between shows we get green surroundings and a chance to play ball."

"But you do like those 'ohs' and 'ahs' from the audiences while you're doing that double twister?" I persisted.

"I suppose so," he answered in his English accent. "But my only thought as I'm sailing through the air is: 'Have I left the bar straight so that I can get back to it?' You see, I've never had a bad fall yet (knock on wood). A bad fall early in the game and I would never have been any good. If there's anything that takes confidence it certainly is an aerial act. You must have confidence and you must understand gravity."

"I know," I agreed. "Where's your brother? Let's go out and work up something that the three of us can do together."

It took considerable persuasion and a lot of bragging on my part, but finally the Clarkonians, with myself as an added attraction, were clad in white tights and spangles and waiting beneath the apparatus, which Joe Miller, boss property man, took occasion to see was carefully adjusted. Immediately I observed that the trapezes hung particularly high in the air and that no net beneath was in evidence. My muscles started to give out by the time I had climbed the rope ladder to one of the trapezes, and Ernie noticed me shiver just a little as I cautiously seated myself on the bar and glanced down.

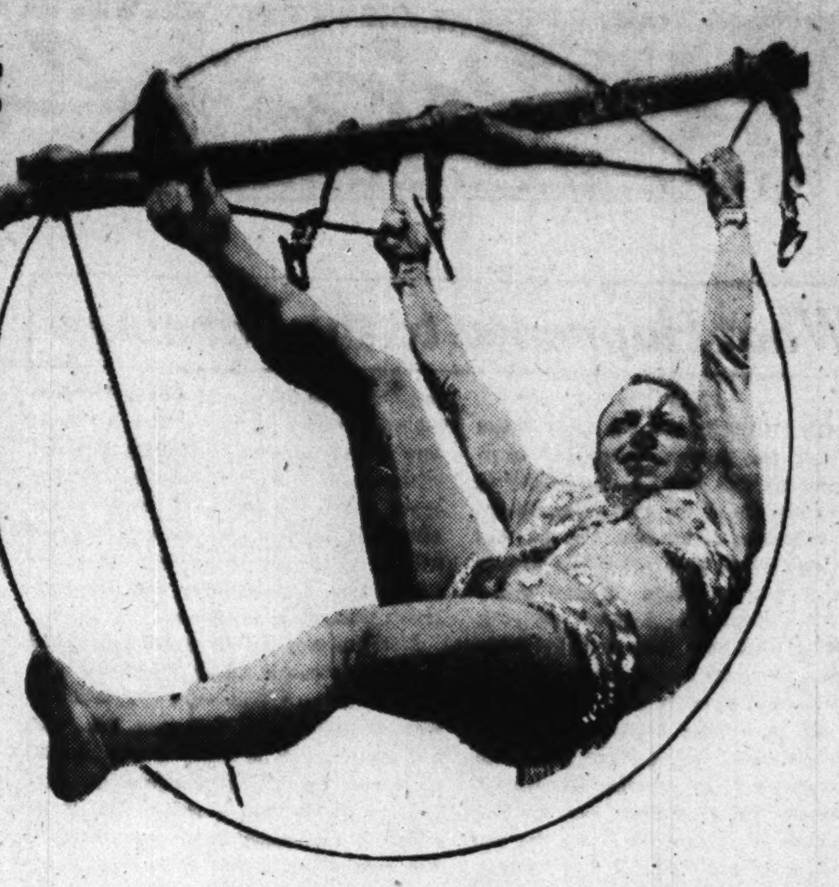
No Net Below.

"Sorry we haven't a net," said Ernie, "but really a net doesn't help as much as you may think. You know, getting into the net properly is a big thing. There's always a jar to it, no matter how you land. And from the height we go, unless you fall right, it's mighty dangerous. When you fall in a net you want to light flat on your back or flat on your stomach. I remember in Paris I saw a Japanese fall feet first and rebound on his face and chest with his legs over him. I knew when I saw him lie still that it was all over for him, although some of the other performers laughed, thinking he was just fooling. I urged them to let the net down easily. The fellow's back was broken. Well, I suppose we might as well get busy. Let me see you hang by your knees."



Now, I could hang by my knees fine a long time ago. But the trapeze of the long ago had been hung from the limb of a low apple tree and it wouldn't have made any difference if I had fallen. I started to let loose of my hands and then I looked at the hard ground far beneath and I hesitated.

"I'll tell you, Ernie," I says. "We might as well postpone a lot of this stuff until we get to the Coliseum or under the 'big top.' You know it'll be a lot different then when we come out of the dressing room just as the elephants are finishing their lying down act and we slip quietly over to the apparatus without the big crowd noticing us and take off our rubbers, to be all ready when the equestrian director blows his whistle and the band starts 'some dreamy waltz.' It'll be all different then, you know, when we get through and jump into the ring, the three of us, giving that gesture toward the reserved seats with the band furnishing a long drawn out 'ta dah' chord."

"I don't have to have them stop the show or have them give me a crash of cymbals in order to get artificial aid," Ernie half way flared back. "My act goes purely on its merits. Why, it's taken me as long to learn one trick as it does many men to go through college. Come on, let's see you hang by your knees—always the simpler tricks first, you know."

I saw Ernie was getting rather impatient, so I leaned back and reluctantly I let loose, first with one hand and then with the other. Instantly my head swung down so that I looked straight to that hard ground that appeared at least half a mile below. I wasn't sure at all that my knees were going to stay in just the right creek. I began to have doubts as to whether I had any knee hanging muscles or not. I know I grunted unprofessionally, and the fact that I didn't actually fall failed to buoy me up, for I was plenty busy struggling back to a sitting posture on the bar again.

A Test of Calculation.

The great aerialist, whose act had been a feature in England and France and with the Ringling brothers for several years, standing beside me on the little platform that was suspended by ropes high at one end of the apparatus, told me to get a full breath as he was about to try me on a test of calculation.

"You see," explained Mr. Clark, "gravity has a good deal to do with this business. For instance, if there is a little slope in the ground where our apparatus is set up, we must take that slope into consideration. This thing must be figured out absolutely scientifically. I suppose from what you've been telling me you are able to calculate just how much this slope here would affect your arrival to Charlie over there in the other trapeze. That's the thing you've got to take into consideration all the time—gravity."

"I'll tell you, Mr. Clark," I says, "that hanging by my knees stunt seemed to put me just a little out of condition. Suppose we don't do any leaps through the air this afternoon, not having any net or any 'ta dah' band music, you know."

"Well, we'll have the net fixed," finally agreed the performer, and he called to Joe Miller to have the net arranged beneath us. When Joe's crew had finished their task with a speed and completeness peculiar to circus crews, Ernie turned to me to add:

"You've had your way now. I suppose a net will help your self-confidence but that's about all a net does do. A man in this business can tell by the way he hits the net when he's getting beyond the age of these things. It is just as difficult to know how to fall into a net after you've missed a trick as it is to perform the trick. I'll know well enough when I've done my last 'double twister' and then it'll be no use to try it again. Still, I may be able to go on for years and years. I know a team where the catcher is 53 and the flyer is 47. There's always an element of danger, but I feel just the same going through the air as at any other time. I anticipate the moment of my act. I was just giving those ropes the 'once over.' You've no idea how the weather affects them. On a damp night they tighten up and put the whole apparatus out of gear, and dry weather loosens 'em. Here, get around here so I can catch your ankles. No, no. Around this way. There!"

"O-oo-ooh!"

I would have been a goner sure if it hadn't been for Mr. Clark's grip on my ankles. Mr. Clark began to swing me back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, with the blood rushing to my head and the April breeze penetrating my thin wearing apparel.

I couldn't climb back and I didn't want to drop. Pretty soon I was swinging up so high that I could see Charlie Clark over in the other trapeze, and he was hanging by his knees and holding out his arms expectantly each time that we swung toward each other.

I started to holler several times, but the swinging process jerked the holler out of me. Suddenly Ernie gave some sort of a signal to Charles, loosened his clutch at my ankles, and I felt myself shooting through the air.

* * * * *

Joe Miller, the boss property man, was standing directly over me when I opened my eyes. I could tell it was Joe by his sort of narrow brimmed cowboy hat and his husky voice. Ernie Clark was making a pillow for my head out of his dressing robe, and I guess Charlie was feeling for broken bones.

"It'll be his stomach that'll hurt the most tomorrow and the next few days," Ernie was saying. "Hello, he's got his eyes open."

"Dang it, Ernie," I grunted as I tried to raise myself on an elbow only to fall back because of the pain that darted through my right side. "It's my own fault. I miscalculated on that gravity dope."

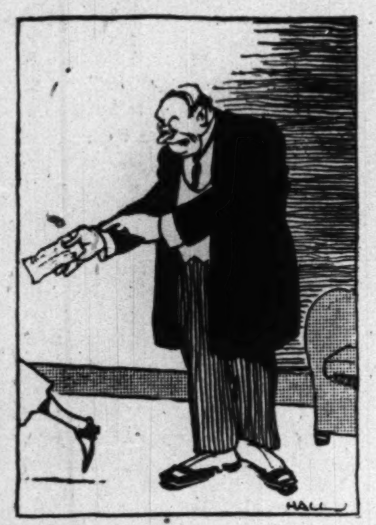
What Happened to the Lansings

PART I.

JOHN MORSE, arriving home rather early that Saturday afternoon, discovered his wife seated by the window in an attitude of the most abject misery. There were tears in her clear blue eyes and a hopeless droop to the gracious head with its crown of soft gray hair. Morse's shaggy eyebrows contracted in troubled perplexity. Something must have gone decidedly to the bowwows, for it was not like mother to grieve over trifles and certainly most unlike her to greet his homecoming in this manner—for mother was one of those few and far between women who insist on deferring discussion of unpleasantnesses of all kinds until the lord and master has been warmed and fed and fortified to meet a troublous situation with assurance.

"Well, mother!" Mr. Morse exclaimed, "what has happened? Are you sick?"

Mrs. Morse turned hastily, whisking at her eyes with a small, lavender scented handkerchief. She forced a tremulous smile.



"Her father in a fine rage had called on Margaret, proffered her a check for $1,000."

"Father! You home already! Why, I wasn't expecting you for an hour. No, I'm not sick. There's nothing really the matter—excepting——"

John Morse put his big arm comfortingly about her shoulders. Twenty years these two had lived together and each year had only strengthened the bond that held them. Now, as Mrs. Morse rested her head against the bulwark that had never failed her, comfort seeped into her soul like sunshine. Nothing could really matter while John——

"Tell me, dear."

The plump little hand with its old fashioned wedding ring fumbled for a moment in the capacious pocket of the trim house dress. It came out holding a letter, much tear stained and crumpled. She thrust the letter into his hand.

"It's from Margaret!" she said, and then and there fell into whole souled weeping against his shoulder.

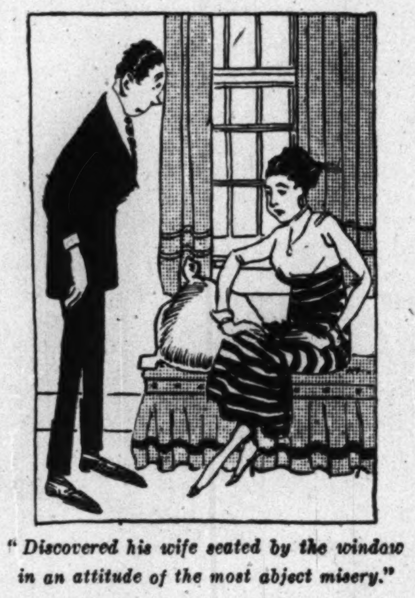
Despite the easy air of assurance with which John Morse seated himself in his own particular armchair and drew his wife to his knee, his face paled. What now had happened to Margaret? It seemed ordained that the life of this beloved and only child was to be filled with a series of cataclysms which should revisit themselves with twice their force on the parents who adored her but who had never been permitted to be more than the merest factors in her eventful life. Pretty, willful, impulsive, affectionate, she had stormed her way through childhood and girlhood, marrying at the age of 19, totally against the wishes and judgment of her parents, a good looking young fellow, who, while there was nothing particularly against him, still had escaped with nothing especially for him.

His profession was salesmanship. He sold everything. Not all at once, but in turn. He approached you for an automobile on one day. Had you approached him on the same subject a couple of weeks later he would have favored you with his brilliant smile and informed you, no doubt, that it was mighty fine of you to look him up, but he was not in the automobile business any longer, but would sell you a filter—worth its weight in gold—etc. Which, I think, aptly describes Margaret's husband, Evan Lansing.

After the wedding the young couple had gone to Boston—Mr. Lansing Sr. having written a terse, uncomplimentary but elementarily paternal letter stating that since Evan had had sense enough to marry a nice girl he might have sense enough to settle down. Anyhow, he should have a chance and, if he wished, a comfortably remunerative position was open with the firm of Lansing Bros., wholesale grocers. Said Lansing Jr. whimsically: "I'll take the chance, Marg—if you'll come?" And the undaunted Margaret had responded "I'm with you—always—anywhere!" which, though her mother might not have known it, was exactly what she herself would have said, in other words perhaps, to no matter what John Morse had suggested. Family traits do run through families. No doubt at all about that.

Then things had gone hard for Margaret. Her husband simply could not endure, it seemed, the grocery business. His father in a fine rage had called on Margaret, proffered her a check for $1,000, which Margaret had indignantly refused, stated that from that day on he was through, and departed, leaving the young wife hot cheeked but defiant, the young husband jobless, and the matter of room rent—they had not as yet started housekeeping—one of those unknown quantities you hear of in algebra.

All this Margaret had not told her mother. Mrs. Morse, however, had friends of her own in Boston, friends equipped with singularly keen inspectionary senses, and the news had traveled home. Margaret was unhappy. Margaret was brave. Margaret's husband was N. G. Margaret's mother and father wrote lovely, tactful letters, suggesting that she come home for a visit—the old place was dreary without her. Margaret, cannily suspecting something, though just what she didn't exactly know, had replied that she didn't feel like leaving Evan just then, but that when he felt he could get away they both would come. Though she didn't say so, within her heart Margaret's mother knew, understood, and respected. If Margaret loved her husband—well—she looked at John Morse and understood—though she rebelled, mother fashion, nevertheless.



"Discovered his wife seated by the window in an attitude of the most abject misery."

Then—this day had come the letter.

His wife comfortably settled with her face buried in his neck, John Morse read the letter. This was it:

Darling Mother and Father: When you get this Evan and I will be on our way to California. We'd love to stop and see you, but Evan has to get to Los Angeles in a hurry, as he is to be leading man in a picture the X. Y. Z. company is to take instanter. He's a moving picture man now, darlings, and is so handsome I'm sure he'll make good. The man who gave him a tryout said he was more the hero type than anybody he had had in a month of Sundays. Darlings, watch the moving picture theaters. When you see "The Only Woman" advertised be sure and go. Evan will be in it. I'll write you more later, but I must hurry now. You see, I have to have his suits sent to the cleaners and a couple of my dresses sort of freshened up. I'll write you the next minute I have a minute. Your baby, MARGARET.

"Your baby, Margaret."

The letter dropped to the floor. Seeking his own consolation, John Morse sought and found his wife's lips. For a moment he clung to them. Then:

"Why, sweetheart, what's worrying you about that letter? Margaret seems cheerful. Perhaps, Evan has, has——"

Mrs. Morse straightened up tragically. "Margaret cheerful? Of course! Wasn't she always cheerful? But now—she's—he's—O, the end—the beginning of the end——? John, John! If he'd gone on the stage I wouldn't have cared. But—but—O, I want to see my baby——!"

John Morse picked up the letter.

"She's given her address here," he said.

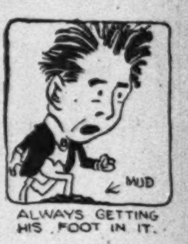
Hobart Henley

HOBART HENLEY is a member of the Universal company, residing in Universal City, Cal. He has been in pictures for two and one-half years. Previously he was an actor on the "legitimate" stage, working under the Belasco management. He also has during his lifetime been affiliated with various stock companies. As to appearance, he has dark brown hair, dark brown eyes, is six feet tall, and weighs 175 pounds. He is unmarried and his habits consist of autos, horses and dogs. He comes of a southern family, having been born in Louisville, Ky. He dances, but is not interested in suffrage.

Told by the Stars on the Stars

OWEN MOORE.

The planet under which Owen Moore, the much envied husband of Mary Pickford, was born goes under the pretentious name of Sagittarius. Prophesies the planet of Mr. Moore: He—



ALWAYS GETTING HIS FOOT IN IT.

Is frank almost to a fault and his form of speech is constantly getting him into trouble with both friends and enemies.

Is a congenial companion, but possessed of a streak of caution that amounts almost to a bump.

Is well meaning, but often does the wrong thing because he acts on an impulse.

Goes to extremes in all things and also goes to pieces nervously on this account.

I DON'T LIKE THE WAY YOU TALK'

FRANK ALMOST TO A FAULT

Has a strong body and deep set, forceful eyes.

Has the turquoise for his birthstone and should choose his sympathetic friends among those born between March 22 and April 21 and between July 23 and Aug. 23. (Little Mary is sure some sympathetic friend to Mr. Moore.)

MARGUERITE CLARK.

Pisces winked a knowing eye on the 22d day of February when pretty Marguerite Clark came into the world. He realized that quite some personage had been born and was no doubt elated to think that the gods had brought her under his control. Here is what the stars say of Marguite: She—

I ASK YOU WHY?

INSISTS ON KNOWING THE REASON

Is inquisitive.

Is naturally thoughtful, industrious, sensible, and persevering.

Is kind hearted, but determined—vurr, vurr determined.

Rarely makes a promise, but when she does insists on keeping it, no matter if the skies fall.

Insists on knowing a reason and is always prepared to give a reason. (This is most commendable, but it is a trait rarely found in members of feminine persuasion.)

KIND HEARTED BUT DETERMINED

Insists on earning everything she gets.

Has strong ideas on justice.

Has an inventive turn of mind.

Hates a thunderstorm like a cat does water.

Should wear a bloodstone, as it is her birthstone, and should choose for her intimate friends those born between June 22 and July 22 and between Oct. 21 and Nov. 22.

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

ONLY A WOMAN: Why be foolish? The idea of spending sleepless nights for fear that your hero will fall in love with the secretary to whom he dictates his letters. Chirrup chee-ild, he probably uses a dictaphone.

A. P. B.: It is certainly some honor to be ranked next to the sporting page in your estimation. I imagine that both Mary Pickford and Bryant Washburn would send you photographs were you to write for them inclosing 25 cents in stamps. O, yes, I get lots of ridiculous letters. "Angry"? Never! "Tired"? Never! Indeed, you have not troubled me, and I do thank you for your good wishes.

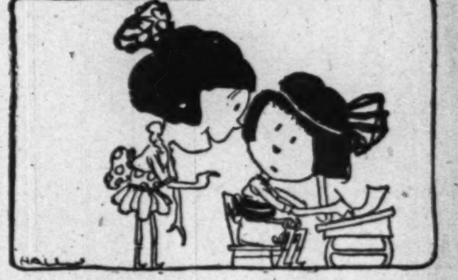
LAURA WILLIAMS: Much obliged, lady, for those kind words. Blanche Bates has been on the legitimate stage for a number of years. Your friend is mistaken. It was not Miss Bates who took the leading part in "The Clew." It was Miss Blanche Sweet. I can give you the cast. Blanche Sweet was Christie Lesley, Gertrude Keller was Eve Bertram, Edward Mackey was Guy Bertram, Sessue Hayakawa was Nogi, Page Peters took the part of Elexis Rabourdin, a Russian adventurer; Ernest Joy was Boris, his brother; Billy Elmer was Detective Williams. I hope this information is what you wish.

SOPHS: If you will write to Wallace Reid, care of the Triangle company, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, asking for his picture and inclosing a quarter or stamps for that amount, I think he will send it to you. Marguerite Clark is not married at the present time. Pearl White has reddish blonde hair. She says she is not married. Beverly Bayne has never been married. Y'wekkum.

EGO: I am just as glad as you are that your letter reached me. How could I be otherwise than glad when you said so many nice things in it. I am now going to "please" you. Mr. Bushman is 5 feet 11 inches tall, House Peters is 6 feet and 1½ inches tall, and Charles Chaplin registers 5 feet 5½ inches in height. Marguerite Clarke is 33 years old. When a book is to be prepared for picturization the film companies usually hire an expert to do the work. The average price paid for scenario is $25 a reel. Of course, well known writers can demand more than this. Y'wekkum.

L. O. U.: Something must have happened to the letter, L. O. U. Every letter with a stamped and self-addressed envelope inclosed is answered promptly. Harold Lockwood is not married. At least he is generally supposed to be not married. As I have said time and again, I do not guarantee that my information on the marital relations of the actors is always authentic. Some have an idea that their popularity is decreased by it being known that their name adorns a marriage certificate and deny in the face of all proof that they are single and unwed. Marguerite Clarke is not married so far as I know. If it really makes a great deal of difference to you you might write to Miss Clarke herself. If Mary Pickford hires a woman to curl her hair I'd like to know the name of the woman if the curl stays in no matter how wet her hair gets. It did not seem to me that she wore a wig in "Heart's Adrift." However, she may have done so. Regarding which of the two actors is the better, I am afraid I shall have to ask you to decide for yourself. Carlyle Blackwell is an American. He was born in Syracuse, N. Y. I believe Anita Stewart usually plays with Earle Williams because the directors of the Vitagraph company think they work opposite each other very well, which is also my opinion. Don't believe all the rumors you hear, my child. Probably people have said many things about you which are not true. They have about most of us. Address Theda Bara in care of the Fox Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. House Peters is with the Lubin company, Twentieth and Indiana streets, Philadelphia, Pa. Clara Kimball Young is with the World Film corporation, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. You are vurr welcome.

A LITTLE GIRL: I think it is perfectly wonderful to think that you have started a class in your home to teach the other children in the neighborhood how to write picture plays. Sometime when you have lots of time you must write and tell me just how you found out how to do it. Send me your name and address too, I would like to write to you personally.



ROXY: Weren't you a fortunate girl to have the chance of visiting Universal City! It is an interesting place, isn't it? I spent some time there last summer when I went on the Selig trip. Maybe you and I were there the same day. I am delighted to know that you think you can like nothing better than the Right Off the Reel page. It is flattering to be told such nice things. I am afraid you will have to send me a stamped, self addressed envelope for information on how to become a motion picture actress. It is a printed article and would take up entirely too much space if put in this column. You have my best wishes.

by EDWIN BALMER

Herewith is presented the seventh installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant, and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archetype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of the imminence of danger to America, and his deafness in this respect is shared by his son. They are impatient with Bob's refusal to resign from service and take a more lucrative job with a business concern. In the Ashby works there are two foreign chemists, Ingouf and Enloe, experts in their line. Their night work and the discovery of an incendiary bomb in the brass works arouse Bob's suspicions. While driving down a lonely road with Jim they discover the two chemists on motorcycles ahead of them. Thinking they are being trailed, the chemists hurl bombs back at the car and a revolver battle ensues. Ingouf is killed by one of his own bombs, but Enloe escapes.

Lieut. Barrett of the U. S. Scout Cruiser Salem has, in defiance of orders to proceed to Haiti with two of the government's representatives aboard, steamed east in the north Atlantic and encountered the fleet of the former European enemies. The foreign fleet fires on the Salem—a deliberate act of war—and a one-sided battle results in the sinking of one of the enemy's largest ships and then of the Salem, but not before the number and class of ships comprising the fleet and the fact that they had fired the first shot have been wirelessed back to Washington.

Bob Wendell is notified to report at Newport News, and after bidding farewell to Nellie he is driven to Chicago by Jim. After Bob is gone Jim takes out the torn scrap of paper found on the body of Ingouf, which revealed the fact that Ingouf and Enloe were spies who had received orders for their duty at the outbreak of war.

With the address "S. D. Marlatt, Insurance building" on the torn envelope in mind, Jim seeks the building. It is a rendezvous of the Prince Regent's spies and Jim, after an encounter, is knocked senseless. When he awakes he finds himself in a residence. Simulating unconsciousness he overcomes his guard and finds in another part of the house a group of men and women spies engaged in sending out insurance solicitations with instructions to the thousands of the enemy's spies written on them in invisible ink. He notifies Sibert over the telephone, and by tracing the call through the phone company's office Sibert is able to send a squad of detectives to Jim's rescue. A girl, who was one of the season's debutantes and who is one of the spies, discovers Jim and nearly prevents his escape. The spies, when the house is surrounded by Sibert's men, attempt to burn up the building and the papers therein. The girl is wounded by crashing glass and one of the spies is killed. The rest are taken prisoners. Sibert's men gather what remnants of the spies' instructions they can from the ruins of the house.

As Jim drives back to Elgin the news is abroad that war has been declared. Remembering his pledge to Agnes not to join the army, but realizing the critical situation of his country, he goes to Agnes and announces his intention to enlist. His father refuses to believe that war has been declared and that if it has that the navy is not large enough to prevent an invasion; so saying he tells Jim to get the notion about enlisting out of his head and to go back to work.

CHAPTER IX.

ONE OF THE MILLION.

"HOSTILE fleet, approaching our shores, sinks American scout cruiser Salem! Commander Barrett, violating instructions to take president's advisers to Haiti, discovers powerful fleet in North Atlantic. Salem immediately fired on, but before sinking succeeds in flashing warning to Washington!

"Hostile fleet contains twenty-six ships of the first line—four dreadnaughts of the Zeus class, six of the Trajan, four of the Pharaoh, six of the Sargon, and two of the Thor, with four battle cruisers of the Carthage class. Fleet more powerful than our strongest combination! Our ships scattered!

"Army of the prince regent, at least half million strong, now on transports or ready to take ship to attack our coasts; 800,000 men will be landed on our shores within month, is enemy's plan! To oppose these president calls for 1,000,000 men for immediate service. In all night council with cabinet and war chiefs' apportionment has been made between states and size of levy required telegraphed to all governors. New York leads list with apportionment of 140,000 soldiers at once; Pennsylvania asked to supply 100,000; Illinois required to muster 80,000 immediately."

The blood beating in Jim's brain made him dizzy for a moment. A million men called! It could mean only one thing—that those in Washington knew that the armies from over the seas could land on American shores! That meant that the administration admitted that the navy could not stop the enemy's fleet, for a million men—on the first call—were to be raised at once! New York state alone was asked to furnish, for instant service, more men than the total of the available field army and effective militia of the nation; Pennsylvania was to supply almost as many.

The newspaper printed the telegram in full which was sent to the governor of Illinois; the paper commented that its form followed the precedent of the Spanish war, only now the number of men called was multiplied by ten!

"The number of troops from your state under call of the president will be 80,000. It is the wish of the president that the regiments of the national guard and state militia shall be used as far as their number will permit, for the reason that they are armed, equipped, and drilled. Together with these, it is particularly desired that you muster in all men who have had military instruction at special schools or who have been in attendance at drills at the state university. Please wire as early as possible what equipment, ammunition, arms, blankets, tents, etc., you have and what additional you will require. Please also state when troops will be ready for muster into the United States service."

It was signed by the secretary of war.

Jim put his hand in his pocket over the "Infantry Drill Regulations"; the blood tingled through him. "It is particularly desired that you muster in . . . those who have been in attendance at drills. . . ." At the crisis before his country he was needed now as well as Bob; the call had come, almost personally, to him!

He looked through the other pages of the paper—it was a Chicago morning paper—for the notice of the discovery and capture of the spies, but either the news had reached the paper too late or Sibert had prevented it from being printed. He found an article, under an Elgin date line, that the body of a mechanic named Ingouf—identified by the number on his motorcycle—had been found in a field outside of Elgin. He appeared to have been killed as the result of some violent explosion after a fight with two men who disappeared in an automobile.

Jim went back to the kitchen, where the cook—voluble and excited—gave him breakfast. Then he went away from the house on the road to town.

Flags were being raised above houses, as if it were Memorial day or the Fourth of July; they were flying above school buildings and draped in front of stores. The stars and stripes were everywhere; upon the homes of some families which were now of enemy nationalities; only here and there Jim saw a house which belonged to a family of the regent's subjects where no colors appeared, and he passed as many homes of Americans—people who had been American for many generations—which yet were undecked with the flag. The factory whistles were blowing the hour for starting work, but the sidewalks of the little city were gay with crowds of men and women, boys and girls; motor cars and motor trucks, loaded with passengers, wagons and old buggies blocked the streets; besides the Elgin people who were crowding downtown, the farmers were coming in with their families. In the crowds Jim noticed few of the countrymen of the enemy; when they appeared they wore a flag in buttonhole and loudly proclaimed their loyalty to America and were cheered, or, calm, quiet, and unobtrusive, they passed about the crowds hurriedly on their way to work. When some youths recognized their nationality and insulted them, their neighbors in the crowd came to their defense and escorted them away.

"War!" The word was on every one's lips. "War!" But with the bright sunlight and warmth of the morning and the crowds collecting it had lost the dismay of its warning at dawn and had become almost a festal hail.

"Hello, Jim; heard about the war? Yatta boy! Going to be one of the million, old scout? A million men, some army. We'll shove 'em into the sea, if they ever get here!"

A line of boys, doing a snake dance up and down the sidewalks, were shouting hilariously the chorus of "Uncle Sammy":

O, uncle, uncle, Sammy, they must all hand
  it to you,
Since Monroe made his doctrine plain, the new world's been taboo;
If any one seeks conquest here, he takes a look at you
And no one scraps with Sam.

The talk of the older men caught the same spirit.

"A million men! That's nothing for this country! We'll have 'em by night."

"By noon, if there's many more like my boys."

A few men and more women were serious and anxious. "For immediate service!" one unsteady voice was crying shrilly, "one million men!" Jim shrank at the cry as though some one had struck him. He turned and recognized a civil war veteran who had fought from Bull Run to Cold Harbor. Proudly he wore in his buttonhole the red, white, and blue rosette of the Grand Army of the Republic.

"Good morning, Mr. Carson," Jim said.

"Immediate service, young man!" the veteran shrilled, looking over Jim from top to toe. "A million like you for immediate service! O God! O God! And you won't have just rebs against you, but the best troops of Europe. Young man, have you ever been shot at? I don't mean shot at by a burglar or some one like that. Hm; and we had no high explosives in our day; no, nor machine guns! But we ran. I ran; you bet I did! A million for service at once!"

A cheer drowned his cry. The crowd was denser down the block before the office of one of the local newspapers. Carpenters had finished putting up a great bulletin board with a platform in front of it upon which a man from the newspaper office was standing and pasting up a bulletin printed in huge letters. Jim read the reply of the governor of the state to the secretary of war:

"The state of Illinois, which half a century ago supplied 200,000 soldiers to the army of the union, pledges its full quota for the defense of the nation in this emergency and invites further calls as the needs of the nation require."

"Regulars ordered to New York!" the next sheet proclaimed. "Twenty-five thousand troops on Mexican border entrain for the north. Other regular troops, numbering 6,000, ordered from army posts to eastern seaboard."

The cheering brought a flush to Jim's face, but he added the totals. "Thirty-one thousand men!" That was the American army of regulars to meet the 800,000 veterans from over the sea! He edged from the crowd. The recruiting station, he recalled, was down among some old buildings just off the main business section; he searched the fronts of those buildings for the flag with the words "Men wanted for the army." But the flag was not there; nor could he find the brightly colored lithographs of soldiers which had been displayed beside the walk. He went about the block looking for them before a boy named Rainey, whom Jim knew as a companion of Mart Ware, came up and spoke to him.

"Looking for the recruiting office, Mr. Ashby?"

"So'm I!" The boy's face was pale, but his eyes were bright with excitement. "I thought it was down here, but it ain't any more."

"How's that?"

"The man in that tobacco store," the boy informed not only Jim but several others who had gathered, "says it was here, all right, but it was a couple of months ago. They don't have to get so many men for the regular army that it's worth while keeping an office open in a place like this."

"How do you enlist then?"

Nobody knew; Jim and Rainey returned toward the newspaper office.

"All eastern cities in panic!" the huge bulletin blared at them. "New York, Boston, and Philadelphia demand soldiers and ships! Washington panic stricken! Information received that enemy's transports are at sea and army may land anywhere within few days!"

The clatter of the telegraph instruments came loud through the open windows of the newspaper office in the hush and suspense while the next bulletin was being prepared.

"News!" the crowd clamored. "News! Bulletin! Tell it to us! The news!"

A man stepped out on the platform, a megaphone in his hand. "I'll give it to you!" he cried. "We're getting it from all over.

"From New York!" He read the top sheet of the sheaf he held. "The city and state demand protection from the federal forces! As New York is by far the most important point in the country and most probable object of enemy's initial attack, Manhattan demands that entire regular army and militia from the other states be ordered to its defense and that navy move to its protection. Massmeetings throughout the city pass resolutions calling upon governor of state to refuse to allow state guard to be withdrawn for defense of other threatened points until it is certain that New York is safe.

"From Boston! The arrest of a private in coast defense artillery, suspected of being a spy, has discovered evidence that purpose of enemy's fleet is to overwhelm Boston and that all plans have been made for landing immense army on Massachusetts coast. Massachusetts calls upon the federal government to send entire regular army to its protection and mobilize navy before Boston. Summer residents fleeing Nantucket and Cape Cod. Newporters in flight.

"And you've joined them. Don't—don't ever speak to me, don't look at me again."

"From Baltimore! Chesapeake bay and Potomac river being hastily mined against naval campaign against Washington and Baltimore. Lucky discovery of enemy's plans proves that first move will be upon the capital. Defense hopeless unless regular army is strongly aided by militia. Governor of Maryland urges governors of other states to greatest haste in dispatching all available forces to defend his state, which must bear brunt of assault upon Washington!"

As he heard these telegrams read, Jim saw before him vividly again the pretty salon in the house of the spies; only now, instead of the house being in Chicago, it was in Boston, and a girl, who was writing orders in colorless fluid, was asking of the chief of spies, "Vettis of the U. S. coast defense, what's he to do—wreck his gun?"

"No; he's to be discovered with proof that the attack is to be made on Boston."

Was something like that the truth, or was the attack really to be made on Boston and the enemy's true plans discovered? Or was the "lucky discovery" in Baltimore a trick of the spies, or was the real attack coming there, or was it to be against New York? Whatever the truth, the enemy's plans already were beginning to bear fruit; the states were quarreling among themselves before the first ship of the regent's appeared.

Jim moved again through the crowd. He could not enlist that morning in the national army, but he could join the state guard; there was a company of one of the regiments—the Third, Jim thought it was—which had headquarters in Elgin. He knew a couple of men who drilled somewhere one night a week, and he had employed in the Ashby shops a boy named Connor who had asked for two weeks' vacation in the summer to attend the encampment of the regiment. Jim recollected that his father had discharged Connor for taking the vacation. The headquarters were easy enough to find. A crowd blocked the street before the office, a smaller crowd than before the newspaper office, but this was all made up of men and boys, now all cheering and reckless and noisy, now suddenly silent and orderly. Some of these men and boys were there to give themselves for service—the immediate service which was demanded—but the most were merely there to cheer others on. A man in khaki and wearing a campaign hat sentineled the door and looked keenly at each man or boy who came forward to enter the building. Most of those who wished to pass seemed to be known to the sentinel and most of them were hailed by name by the crowd and cheered as they slipped by the soldier and into the building.

"Billy Randall! Hey, fellows! That's Billy Randall! Hurray, Bill! Karl Harris! Hurray! Karlie Harris! Vin White! Vin, old boy, you going, too? Here's to Vin! Hurray!"

But there were others, unknown to Jim, strangers to the soldier at the door and to the crowd—which cheered them without shouting names—who also went in to volunteer. Jim followed two of these strangers who went in together and passed into the recruiting hall.

Sixty or seventy men were in the hall; twenty were in uniform; a number of others seemed to belong to the company, but were still in ordinary clothes; most of the rest were recruits. The last of these to enter were lined up, waiting turns at a side room where two doctors, with stethoscopes, were making physical examinations. Jim and the two who came in with him joined this group. At the other end of the hall an officer—whom Jim knew as Charlie Linton—sat at a table with forms before him which he was filling out and offering to a boy who had just come from the doctors. The boy, scarcely glancing at the paper, leaned over the desk and signed. A man who entered by a side door walked swiftly to the desk and, standing stiffly, addressed the officer. Linton made some reluctant reply, offered his hand, which the other man grasped for an instant, and then turned and went quickly out, gazing straight in front of him, without replying to the other men who spoke to him. Jim recognized several of those in uniform and one of them—Connor—came over to speak with him.

"Good morning, Mr. Ashby," the boy offered his hand.

Jim shook hands; he noticed the corporal's chevrons on Connor's sleeve. "What was the matter with that man?" Jim inquired.

"Nothing!" Connor said promptly. "He's one of our sergeants—one of the best men we've had; but, till ten years ago, when he came over, he was a subject of the prince. He's naturalized of course; he's a good American, and I know he wants to fight with us, but he believes he wouldn't be trusted by his men, and he says maybe the men would be right. If the regent's army's coming he's got brothers and cousins in it, so he's leaving his uniform and equipment for some one else. It certainly is hell! He's a damn good man—the best we've had to drill recruits. And he's not the only one we've lost that way or are going to lose! I tell you, it's hell! Here we've got peace strength of about seventy men—if all the boys are in good shape; we're to recruit to war strength—as we did in the Spanish war: that's about double; then we're to split into three companies and recruit them up to war strength and go east."

"You mean you take on over 400 men?"

"Yes; and we're losing, like that fellow, the men who'd have to be lieutenants or maybe captains. But we're classed as first line troops to go to the front with the regular army. Rock Island arsenal's ordered to send rifles and ammunition for us to Chicago, and some of the new men will get uniforms there. All the other companies of the Third regiment are recruiting the same way so as to make three regiments. And some of the companies must be losing—on account of nationality—like the very devil, worse than we are. But they're following the same scheme all through the state; Illinois starts with 6,000 militia and is going to try to send 36,000 east within a couple of weeks."

"And the rest of our 80,000?" Jim asked.

Connor looked down at his boots. "God knows! They'll have to be entirely new units, I suppose, if they scattered our company out any thinner we might as well be new units, too."

"Next!" called a doctor from the examining room.

Jim stepped in and stripped. The surgeon looked him over, tapped him, and listened perfunctorily at his heart, and passed him on. "All right! Next!"

Jim advanced to the table at the end of the room and signed the paper presented to him. Linton arose after Jim had signed and drew him aside.

"One of the secret service men phoned me a while ago, Ashby," Linton said. "He told me something about what you were doing last night! Good work it was, damned good work! He told me I could trust you; of course I knew that anyway. We're losing some of our best men this morning, you see, but I guess we've got it pretty straight that the prince is seeing that we get some of his most reliable people in their place. I've detailed some of our regular boys to watch for spies among the recruits—and among ourselves. I want you to watch, too. You're to get evidence so you can give the firing squad a chance if there's time; if there isn't time—or it's inconvenient to bring charges—shoot the man you catch, no matter who he is; and shoot quick and straight, if you don't want him to get you first."

Jim nodded. "Then I'm to stay about here?"

"No one's to stay about here. We're wanted in the east as quick as we can get there; they're yelling for us from Savannah to Portland, Me. Leave a telephone number where we can get you within an hour and if you haven't made arrangements for an indefinite absence, make 'em."

Jim shook hands with others of the men about and then went down to the noise and exuberance of the street. The crowd cheered him by name as he came out, and amid the crush about him he felt some one tugging at his coat to attract personal attention. He turned about and faced Agnes. Her face was chalk white and her lips were trembling, and the hand which tugged at his coat was shaking violently; and as Jim faced her he was white also. She knew he had broken his pledge to her and she had not yet come to understand why.

War had come, she knew, but to her it existed yet only in words; it was tall, black type of unpleasant print upon great sheets of white paper pasted to a board before a newspaper office; it was wild, reckless boasts and taunts on the tongues of boys and men about it. War was horrible madness made of bestial passion; women—if men failed—must forbid it, the slaughter and suffering of a nation. War! An American cruiser had been fired on! Well, had not American ships been sunk before and Americans killed at sea? Had not American soldiers been shot on the Mexican border and nothing done?

Hysterically Agnes cried this to Jim, heedless of the crowd about them. "And you've joined them! Don't—don't ever speak to me, don't look at me again! Only—only," she pleaded with him now, beside herself with horror, "has Mart been up there, too? Where's Mart, Jim? Have you seen him?"

"No, Agnes. I looked for his name and I asked about him. He hasn't enlisted here."

"Then he's gone somewhere else to join the army. He went out of the house before the rest of us got up this morning, and from the things he took with him I know he's gone to enlist!"

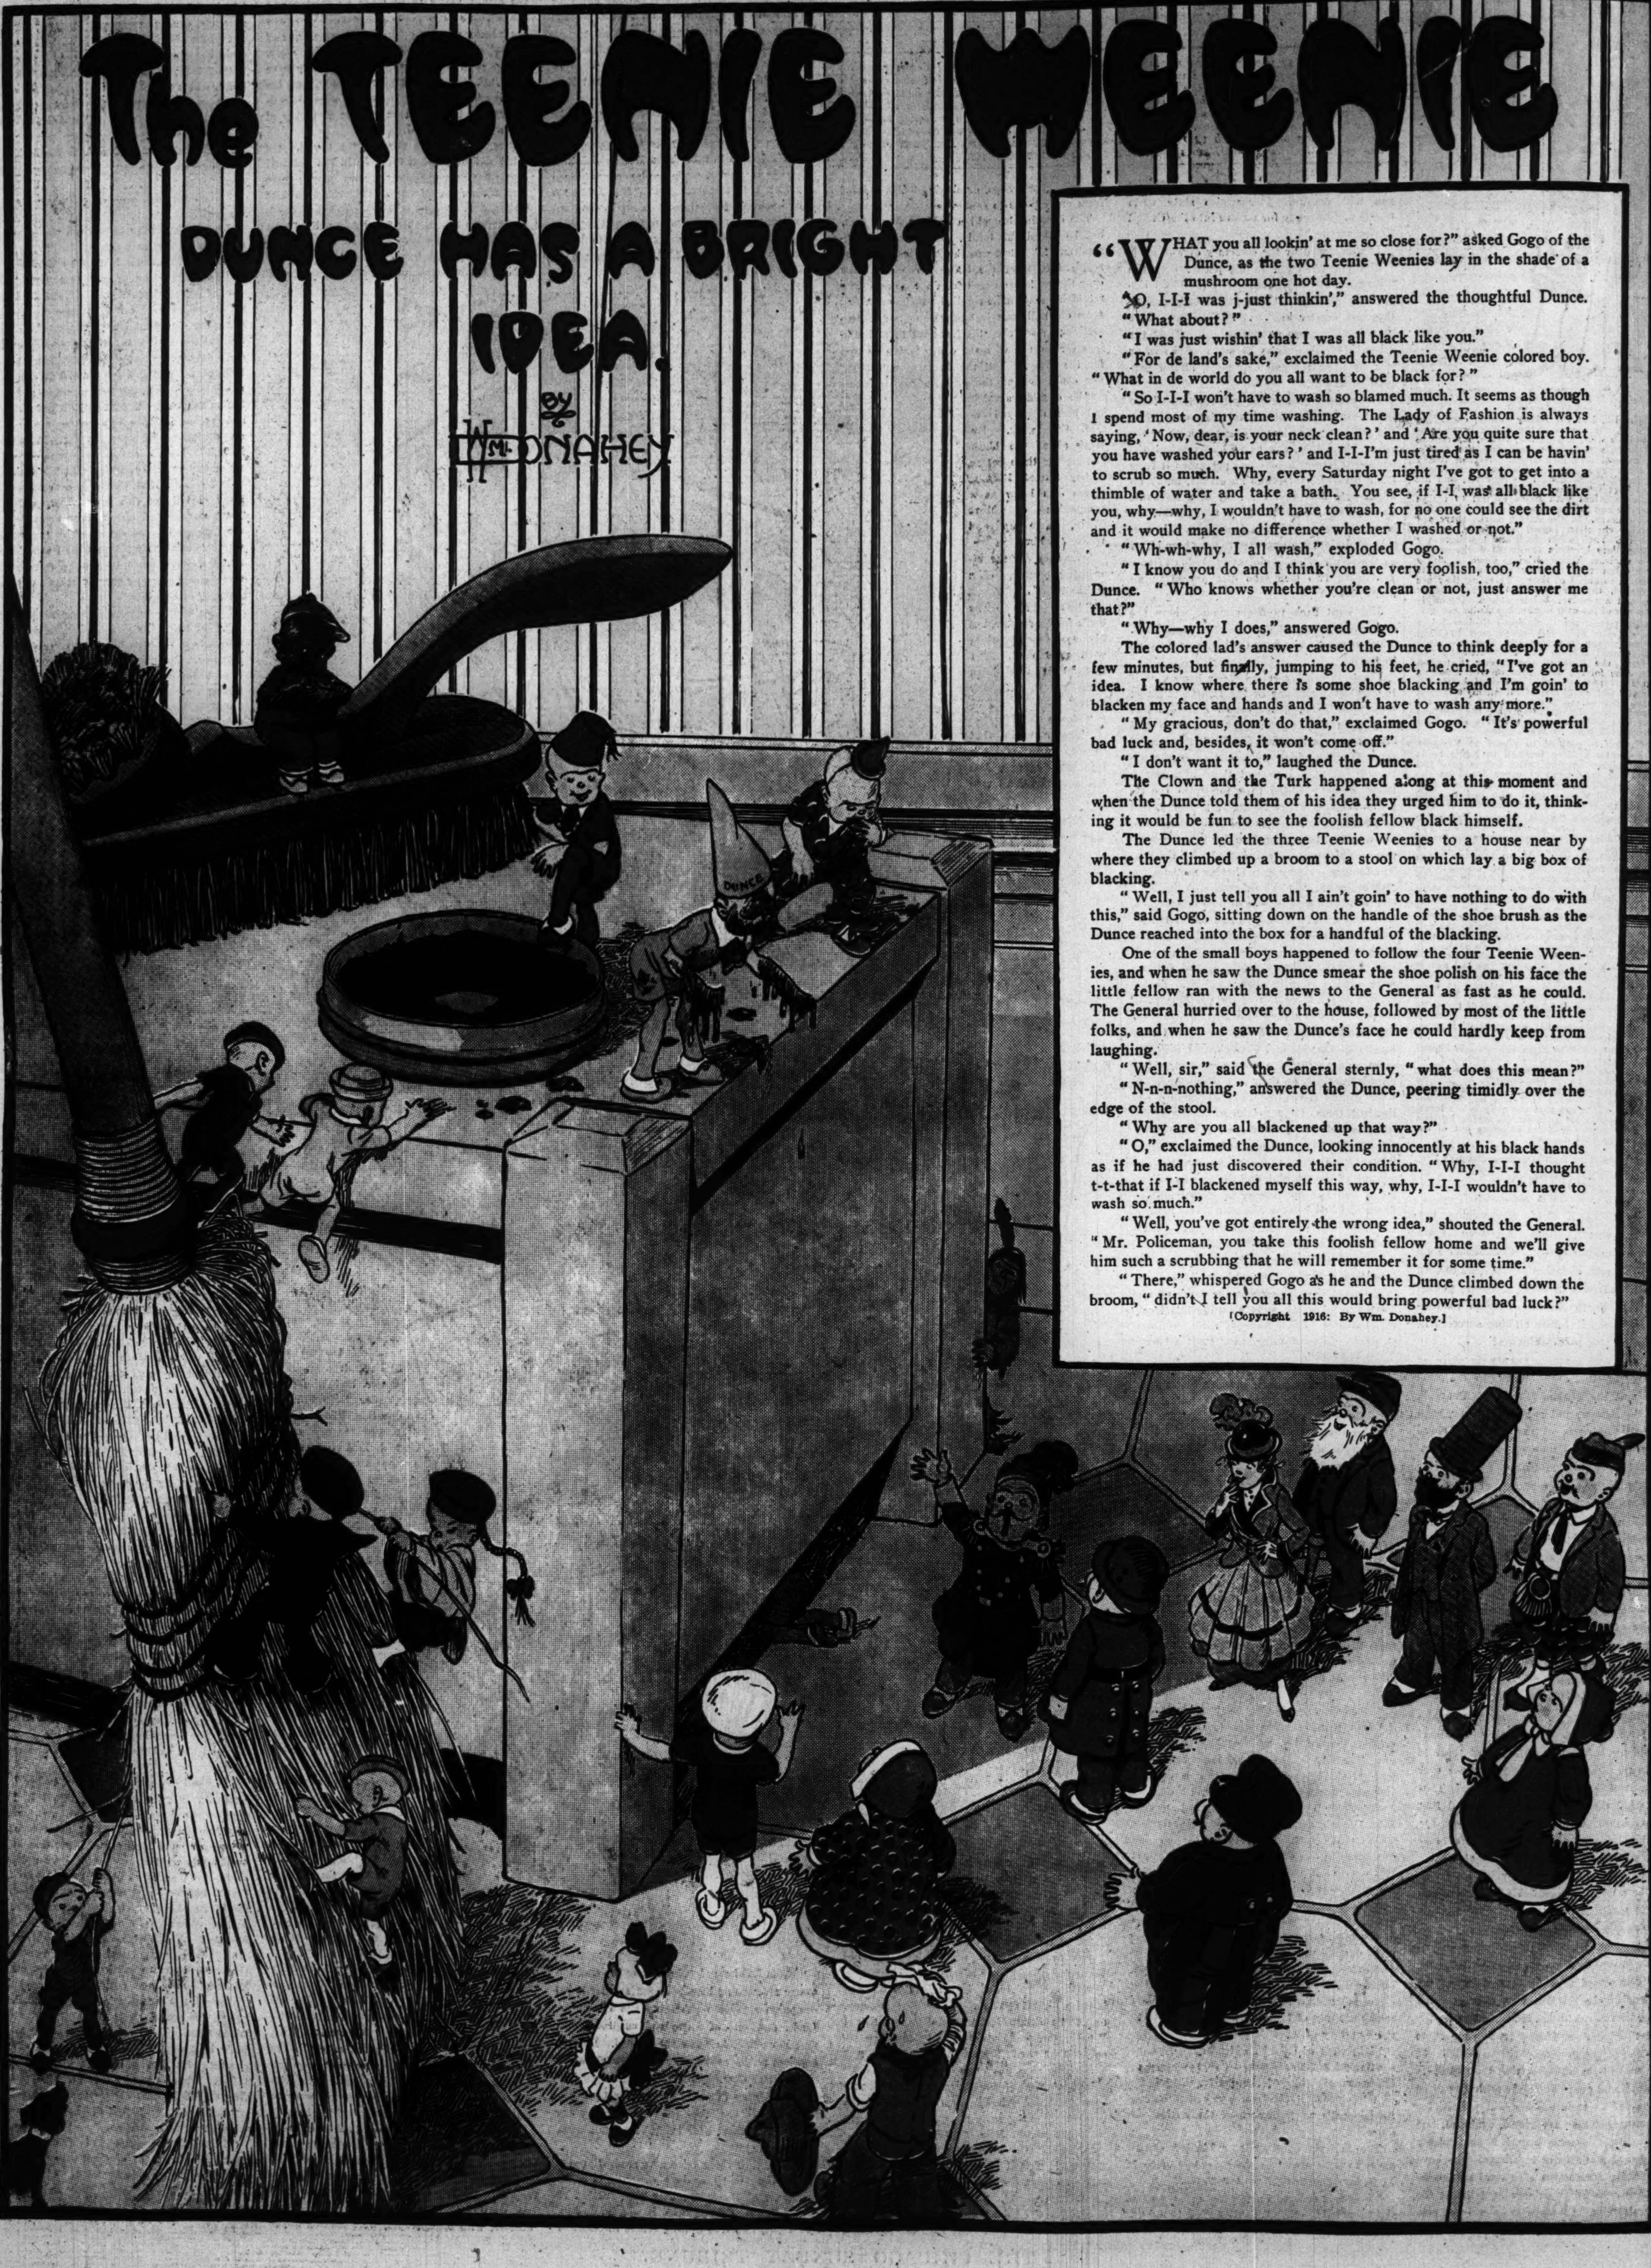
The TEENIE WEENIE

DUNCE HAS A BRIGHT IDEA.

BY WM. DONAHEY



"WHAT you all lookin' at me so close for?" asked Gogo of the Dunce, as the two Teenie Weenies lay in the shade of a mushroom one hot day.

"SO, I-I-I was j-just thinkin'," answered the thoughtful Dunce.

"What about?"

"I was just wishin' that I was all black like you."

"For de land's sake," exclaimed the Teenie Weenie colored boy. "What in de world do you all want to be black for?"

"So I-I-I won't have to wash so blamed much. It seems as though I spend most of my time washing. The Lady of Fashion is always saying, 'Now, dear, is your neck clean?' and 'Are you quite sure that you have washed your ears?' and I-I-I'm just tired as I can be havin' to scrub so much. Why, every Saturday night I've got to get into a thimble of water and take a bath. You see, if I-I, was all black like you, why—why, I wouldn't have to wash, for no one could see the dirt and it would make no difference whether I washed or not."

"Wh-wh-why, I all wash," exploded Gogo.

"I know you do and I think you are very foolish, too," cried the Dunce. "Who knows whether you're clean or not, just answer me that?"

"Why—why I does," answered Gogo.

The colored lad's answer caused the Dunce to think deeply for a few minutes, but finally, jumping to his feet, he cried, "I've got an idea. I know where there is some shoe blacking and I'm goin' to blacken my face and hands and I won't have to wash any more."

"My gracious, don't do that," exclaimed Gogo. "It's powerful bad luck and, besides, it won't come off."

"I don't want it to," laughed the Dunce.

The Clown and the Turk happened along at this moment and when the Dunce told them of his idea they urged him to do it, thinking it would be fun to see the foolish fellow black himself.

The Dunce led the three Teenie Weenies to a house near by where they climbed up a broom to a stool on which lay a big box of blacking.

"Well, I just tell you all I ain't goin' to have nothing to do with this," said Gogo, sitting down on the handle of the shoe brush as the Dunce reached into the box for a handful of the blacking.

One of the small boys happened to follow the four Teenie Weenies, and when he saw the Dunce smear the shoe polish on his face the little fellow ran with the news to the General as fast as he could. The General hurried over to the house, followed by most of the little folks, and when he saw the Dunce's face he could hardly keep from laughing.

"Well, sir," said the General sternly, "what does this mean?"

"N-n-n-nothing," answered the Dunce, peering timidly over the edge of the stool.

"Why are you all blackened up that way?"

"O," exclaimed the Dunce, looking innocently at his black hands as if he had just discovered their condition. "Why, I-I-I thought t-t-that if I-I blackened myself this way, why, I-I-I wouldn't have to wash so much."

"Well, you've got entirely the wrong idea," shouted the General. "Mr. Policeman, you take this foolish fellow home and we'll give him such a scrubbing that he will remember it for some time."

"There," whispered Gogo as he and the Dunce climbed down the broom, "didn't I tell you all this would bring powerful bad luck?"

METAL SILKS AND LACES TRIM THE EVENING FROCKS AND WRAPS

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

"Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

By JEAN SEIVWRIGHT.

(Drawings by Helen E. Shepard.)

[Copyright: 1916: By The Chicago Tribune and the New York Globe.]

THE summer garden aflame with the colors of myriad blossoms has surely inspired the creators of evening dress, for any of the fascinating gowns for the coming season reveal most wonderful color combinations that rival nature's in their daring and beauty. And while the success of such gowns depends largely on the color, yet the new modes also possess decidedly picturesque features that greatly charm. The fabrics favored are surpassingly beautiful, for the most sumptuous silks, satins, lustrous brocades, and rare laces, enriched with metallic threads, are lavishly used, while exquisite flowers ofttimes afford a daring touch of color.

While the Spanish influence is emphasized in many of the most charming originations, other countries and other centuries have also contributed to the fashions of 1916, which are exceptionally picturesque.

Several most attractive gowns and wraps for evening are depicted in the accompanying illustration. At the extreme right is the picture of a charming frock that will surely bring joy to its wearer. Originated in pale yellow tulle, like the fitful rays of the setting sun, this gown is designed with a rather snug fitting corsage of amber grosgrain silk. A soft fold of tulle marks the limit of the decolletage, and on this narrow ledge appears a tiny garland of mauve and peacock blue flowers. Ribbons of amber silk accentuate the bouffancy of the skirt and become picturesque baskets that hold clusters of the mauve and blue flowers.

This delightful dash of color is also repeated in the gayly plaited underskirt, whose every fold is enriched with a lovely flower.

Loops of black velvet strap the shoulders and form quaint foundations for the filmy tulle sleeves that are finished with a wristlet of the velvet. The slippers are made of cloth of gold, and black satin alternates with this radiant material in the simple little fan.

Created especially for the young debutante is the pretty frilly frock at the left side of the illustration. This lovely gown is fashioned upon a turquoise blue metal broche taffeta combined with silver lace. This, by the way, is gracefully placed upon the shoulders and is developed in a lovely pelerine that extends just beyond the waistline. Blue velvet in matching shade is chosen for the bodice, while below the puffings of brocade and the silver lace are fairylike frills of turquoise tulle. Silver ribbons make effective trimmings on the corsage, and a narrow band of this glittering material encircles the arm and is finished with a tiny bow and primly cut ends.

Eminently suited for the occasions that demand an inconspicuous wrap is the mouse gray taffeta model. This is bordered and collared with bands of marabout, a trimming that is held in high esteem at this time. The shoulder line is marked by a soft fold of ribbon in a darker shade. This is so arranged that the long ends form a panel down the center of the back. Rows of shirring add interest to the sleeves at the wrists and below the shoulder, while a charming splash of color is found in the silk yoke with its Japanese design in vermilion and black. This is accentuated in the lining, which is of vermilion satin.

The wrap that completes this illustration is made of lustrous white satin. Designed with a cowl-like collar, this coat is cut on decidedly generous lines. The sleeves are finished with deep cuffs from which depend gracefully hung folds of satin outlined with black ostrich. This fashionable trimming is also used around the hem, the collar, and the cuffs. As if to relieve the rather cold effect of the black and white, embroidered motifs, done in emerald green beads, add a lively note to this exquisite wrap. The lining of emerald green satin also adds much to the beauty of this creation, and when the wrap is loosely draped about the figure this dazzling color banishes all suggestions of somberness.

2. White satin wrap. Black ostrich. Emerald green bead embroidery, lining of emerald satin.
3. Mouse gray taffeta wrap. Marabout and velvet ribbon in darker shade. Yoke of silk. Japanese design in black and vermilion. Lining of vermilion satin.
4. Pale yellow tulle, amber grosgrain silk bodice, ribbon on skirt to match. Black velvet ribbon. Mauve and peacock blue flowers.

MEN AND WOMEN

WILLIAM MORRIS said: "Have nothing in your house which you do not believe to be beautiful or know to be useful."

In the midst of her annual orgy of housecleaning there arises repeatedly in the mind of the housewife the question: "Shall I keep it, or shall I get rid of it?"—the "it" being anything from a left over roll of a beloved wall paper which covered the living room to an oil painting perpetrated by some relative with a degree from a correspondence school of art.

Household White Elephants.

Like a tug of war are her emotions in the face of the persistent problem. Sometimes the treasured, cracked and delicate dish is consigned to the ash barrel, and sometimes the struggle to consign it to the limbo of things forgotten is lost in the sentiment attached to it. Sentiment is an excellent quality in the housewife until it becomes a menace to the happiness of the rest of the household, as it not infrequently does when it clings to a moth eaten, broken down piece of furniture or a piece of bric-à-brac that hurts the eyes and offends the esthetic sense outrageously.

The parting is the only sorrow with the white elephants about your home. Once rid of, they are unmourned.

I once knew a woman who changed the entire furnishings of her home regularly for the brightening effect it had on her family. And the influence was noticeable in all.

Clinging to old, useless things that clutter up a home pulls you backward.

Be up to date and "rummage sale" the things that have become an eyesore and a heartache or just useless and ugly. If necessary, be a militant and smash them!

Love or Money?

"Grandma gets orphan." This decision, handed down last week by a Chicago judge in the case of little Dorothy Clifford, to whom two millionaire homes were opened, on the suicide a few months ago of her mother and father, is but another evidence of how like "the destiny which shapes our ends" is the power of the court.

Dorothy's grandmother, nearly penniless, living in a small suburban Ohio town, was given the child. She was Dorothy's own blood relation, and therefore had first claim.

Suppose you had a like problem to decide; how would you do it?

The millionaire says: "I can give her wealth, position, clothes, education, and every comfort and luxury she could wish."

The grandmother says: "I can give Dorothy the love of a mother and the love of a grandmother. No one else can give her that."

From the standpoint of the child, which home would mean the better life for her?

On the one hand there is obscurity for Dorothy, unless she develops genius of some kind; in every probability, she will become a wage earner before she is out of her teens, her contentment and happiness in life dependent upon the simple life and pleasures of plain, common folk and the whole souled, generous love of her own kin.

On the other hand there is the public interest that fastens on a girl of wealth; there is opportunity for great unhappiness, bred of the discontent of satiety and ennui and of the acquiring of things without personal effort; there are the jealousies and the strife for social prominence. Also, there are opportunities for great good, great charity; there are educational opportunities which wealth contributes.

Reduced, the problem stands: Are wealth or luxury necessary to happiness?

Dorothy's grandmother says not!

Spring and Summer Suicide Seasons.

Statistics prove that the tendency to suicide is greatest not in the gloomy months of November and December but in the pleasantest months of the year, the spring and early summer months—June and April especially. Statistics show not only that the tendency to suicide is greatest in the spring and summer months but that it is most marked on the clearest, sunniest, and pleasantest days of those months. The wet, partly cloudy days show so much smaller a percentage of suicide than the clear, sunny days that the difference cannot be attributed to accident or chance.

What is the explanation of this tendency to self-destruction in the seasons and days when life would seem best worth living?

The first heat of early spring and summer, which seizes upon the organism when it is at its lowest vitality, may offer an explanation. Again, the blue skies, sunshine, leafy trees, and singing birds which make up the environment of spring and early summer and add to the happiness of the man who is happy already, by contrast intensifies the misery of the man who is already miserable.

In November and December, when all is dark, bare, and cheerless, nature seems to be in sympathy with the unhappy man's mood, from which he derives a certain sustaining comfort and consolation. In spring his mood is the same, but the mood of nature has changed. The great mother, Nature, no longer sympathizes with his grief, but laughs him to scorn with her sunshine and her flowers. He looks about him and thinks: "Everybody is happy, everything is rejoicing. I am the solitary exception. I am out of place." And then there comes upon him a heartbreaking sense of loneliness, a feeling of complete isolation, as if the great, happy world had cast him off and gone on its way singing.

We are becoming too emotional and sentimental and too much inclined to regard weakness with sympathy instead of the contempt which it rightly deserves. In the language of the prize ring, the pugilist who lies down while he can yet stand and see is called a "quitter." It would be harsh and unjust to apply this opprobrious name to all suicides. But the majority of them are weaklings who give up and lie down while they still have a "fighting chance."

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

HOW I REDUCED MRS. EVA LANE 36 POUNDS IN 6 WEEKS

By Antoinette Donnelly

If you missed the first of the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Lane, send stamped, addressed envelope and Miss Donnelly will furnish you exercise and diet instructions for the first week's work.

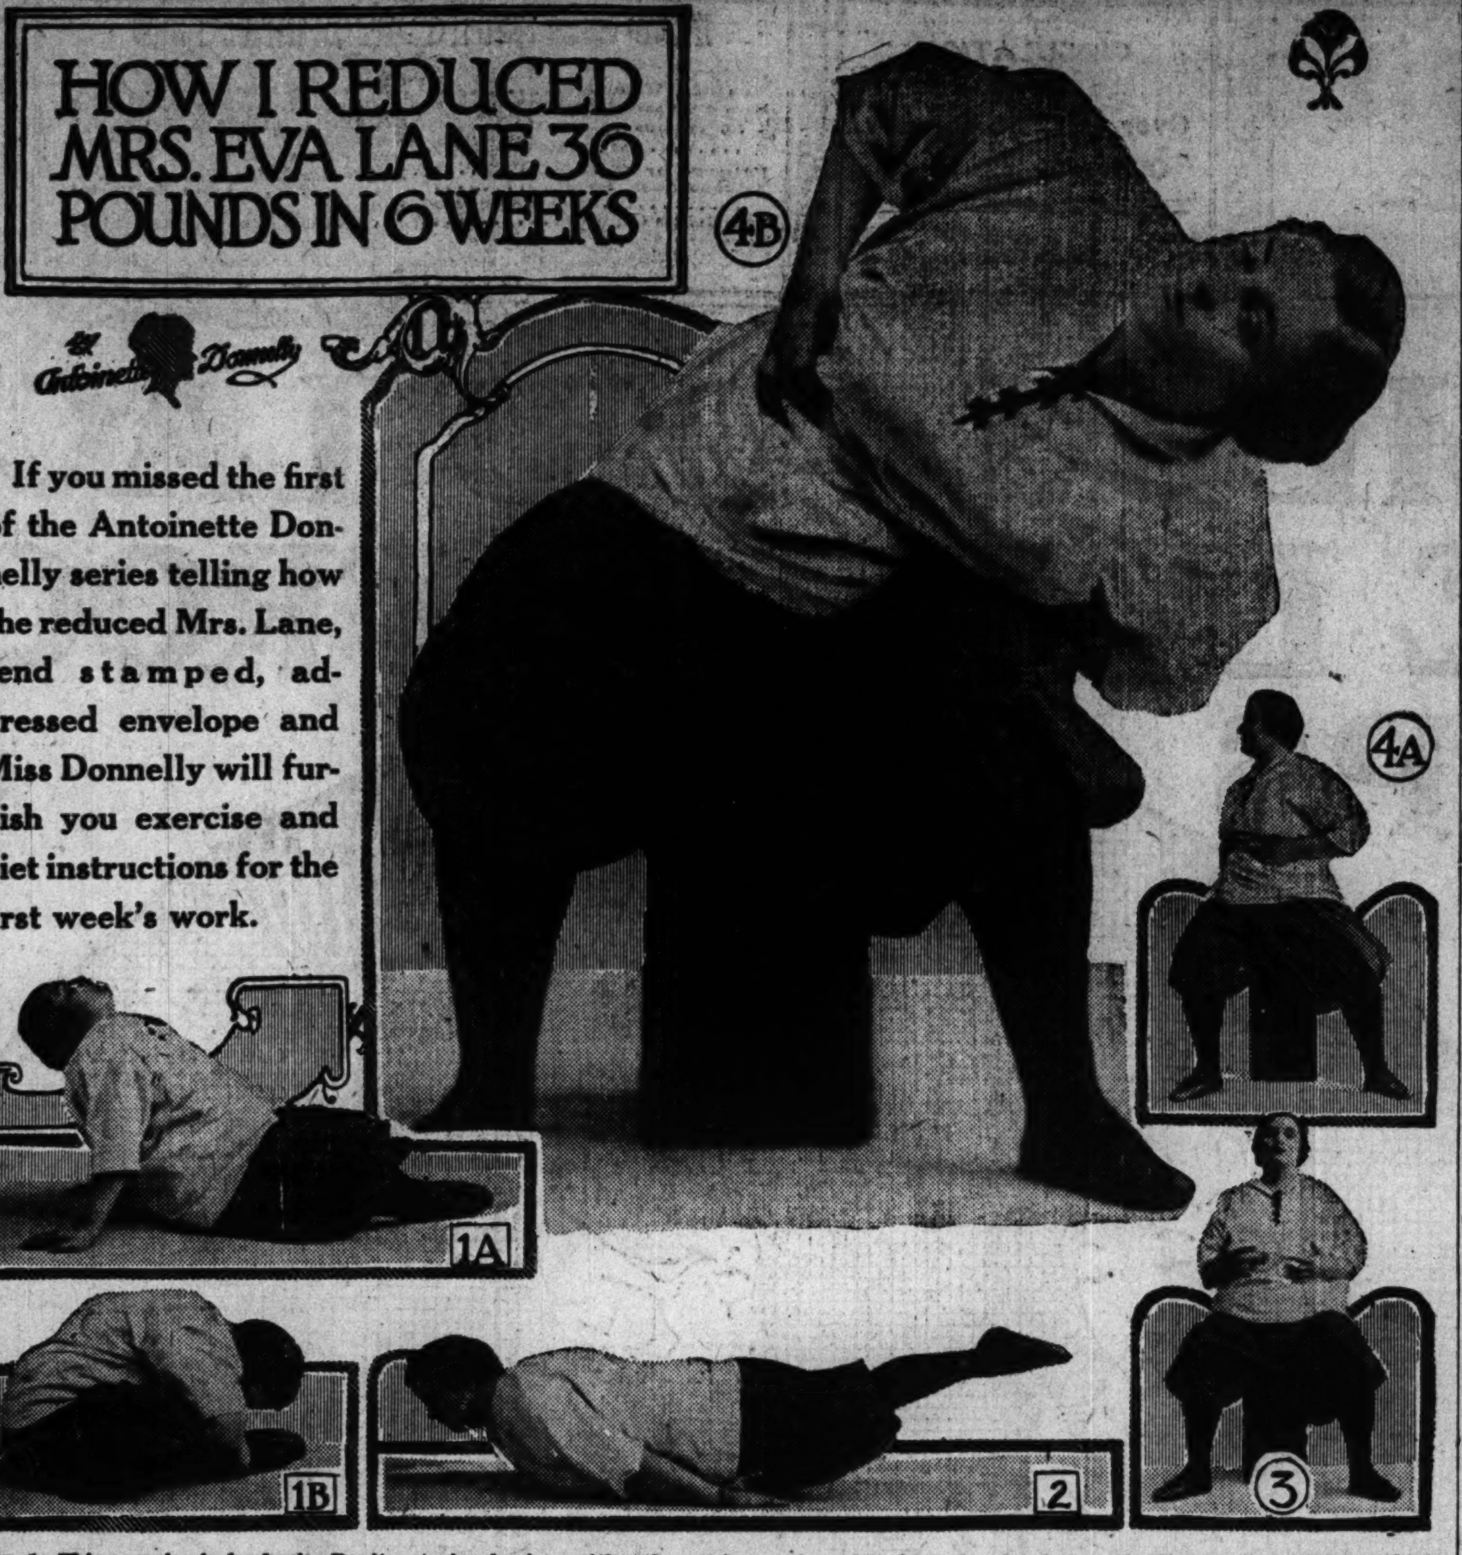

Fig. 1. This exercise is for back, abdomen, and chest and neck reduction. First assume sitting position with soles of feet together. Stretch head back as far as you can, as illustrated in Fig. 1-A. Then go forward as far as you can, bringing hands around to clasp ankles as you start forward. Then see how nearly you can touch your toes with your head, as in Fig. 1-B. This is difficult. Don't strain—begin with three times and gradually increase.

Fig. 2. Bowing exercise reduces abdomen, legs, neck, back, and chest. Lay flat on the floor, face and toes down, slowly raise head and legs, as illustrated, keeping legs stretched to tips of toes. Go back to original position. Do this three times and increase gradually. Don't strain.

Fig. 3. Percussion movement. Begin this slapping exercise first by slapping the sides of the waist vigorously with both hands, inhaling a deep, full breath as you slap; stop slapping and blow out forcibly, as illustrated in Fig. 3; then with clenched fists instead of open hands pound upper chest while you inhale another deep breath; then stop pounding and blow out forcefully; again with clenched fists pound shoulder hollows at base of collar bone, inhaling and then forcibly exhaling. This tones up your muscles. Repeat set three times, increasing gradually to twenty-five or thirty.

Fig 4. Seated on a stool without a back, eyes straight ahead, hands grasping sides, keep feet firmly planted on floor, and swing the body first to right five times, as illustrated in Fig. 4-A. Then assume straight ahead position again and swing body to left five times. Rest a minute, then bend the upper body as far as possible from one side to the other, as in Fig. 4-B. This is a wonderful waist reducer.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

TODAY I shall tell you of my second week's work with Mrs. Eva Lane, whom, under the medical supervision and instructions of Dr. Lena K. Sadler of the Chicago Institute of Physiologic Therapeutics, I reduced thirty-six pounds in six weeks.

On Feb. 1 Mrs. Lane weighed 204½ pounds. On March 14, after six weeks' dieting and exercising, she was reduced to 168½ pounds; in addition her waist was reduced from 37½ to 30 inches and her hips from 49 to 41 inches.

During the first week's work Mrs. Lane lost eight pounds, during the second week six, making a total loss for the first two weeks of fourteen pounds.

So you see, my heavy sisters, reducing can be done.

Where there's the will there's a way to get rid of your superfluous flesh. Mrs. Lane had the will, and if you could see how much better looking she is minus her thirty-six unnecessary pounds, how much younger, more active, and how much better she feels, you would get to work immediatetly following her example.

As I said in my previous article, many women are under the impression that to reduce they need only diet. And they can reduce by dieting only. But the sad part of the "diet only" way of reducing is that you don't stay reduced. And if you have overlooked the importance of exercise along with the dieting you will in every probability look worse after the loss of pounds than before for the reason that the skin, which had been stretched taut over the fat, will with the loss of flesh be flabby, wrinkled, and "wattly."

Reducing isn't all fun. I'll admit that. You have to work and work hard to make muscle take the place of discarded fat. But the improvement in your looks and health will be worth ten times the work you will be called upon to do.

Now for our second week's lesson with my model, Mrs. Lane. First, there is an important point in this business of reducing which many women overlook and which may be responsible for serious complications where strenuous dieting and exercising are used. It is a condition of increased acidity which must be warded off by an alkaline.

During the latter part of the first week's work this condition was discovered in Mrs. Lane. Dr. Sadler prescribed for her a teaspoonful of calcined magnesia morning and night for three days, with instructions to discontinue it for three days and then to renew again for another three days—and so on during the whole course of my model's reduction.

Another thing—you must not lose sight of the need of daily massage of face and neck. A double chin is the invariable complement of an overheavy body. Included in each week's exercises are those in which neck and chin muscles are given work to do. After each set of exercises is done with go over both face and chin with a good cold cream and massage for a couple of minutes at least. Then at night before retiring give neck and face a special massage, ending with a rubbing over of either camphorated ice or plain ice, both of which are excellent astringents. If you neglect this massage and astringent application after you have lost a number of pounds there will be "wattles" under your chin and maybe lines in your face. But don't be frightened about this happening to you if you massage both face and neck. It won't.

In addition to the exercises I gave Mrs. Lane in her first week's course she practiced during her second week those illustrated and described on this page.

Up at 7 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Lane's reducing day began with five minutes' deep breathing, which is almost as important as dieting, for deep breathing burns up fat as nothing else does. Remember this as many times as you can during the day, and remembering it, deep breathe.

Mrs. Lane's household duties absorbed her until nearly 10 o'clock. These included getting breakfast, washing the dishes, cleaning and sweeping and bed making and other ordinary household duties familiar to every homekeeper, and all of which should be considered as healthy, flesh reducing work.

During her second week's work Mrs. Lane increased her daily walk from two to three miles a day, deep breathing as she walked.

Once in the morning, once in the early afternoon, once in the late afternoon, and once before going to bed Mrs. Lane practiced her exercises. The first week's exercises she practiced this second week as high as 100 times each. The V exercise and the bowing exercise, both illustrated herewith, she started doing five times each, not increasing more than to twenty or thirty times by the end of the week, as these she found a bit hard, although wonderfully beneficial for reducing waist and abdomen.

The second week I changed Mrs. Lane's diet, keeping the food supply down to 800 calories for the full day's requirement, which is the right number of calories for a woman to confine herself to if she wishes to reduce. In case you don't understand exactly what a calory is I shall repeat that it is a unit of heat and energy measurement used to represent the actual value of food in the process of nutrition. To give you a clearer idea, perhaps, one large baked potato contains 100 calories, as does noe large, thick slice of bread, a glass of good rich milk, or a square of butter. After each article of food in this, Mrs Lane's second week diet, I shall insert the number of calories it represents:

On rising—One glass of lemonade without sugar [50 calories].

8 a. m.—One and one-half ounces of lean ham or bacon or dried beef [fifty calories]; one dry roll [100 calories]; one cup coffee or tea without cream and sugar [no calories].

10 a. m.—One glass of water and lemon without sugar [50 calories].

12 m.—One orange [75 calories].

3 p. m.—Four ounces of clear broth with no fat [100 calories]; abundant portion of cooked cabbage or tomatoes or asparagus or celery, prepared without butter, oil, or cream [100 calories]; one glass of lemonade without sugar [50 calories].

7 p. m.—Three ounces of lean beef, mutton, or lamb [100 calories]; one slice of bran bread [100 calories]; celery [25 calories]; coffee without cream or sugar.

If you are so situated that it is inconvenient to follow the hours of the diet given above you may combine the 12 and the 3 o'clock meals. Mrs. Lane found it easier to follow this time diet for the first two weeks until she had got used to dieting.

Ignorance of foods that are fat producing is responsible for a powerful lot of extra weight folks are carrying around unnecessarily. When you realize that a woman in good working condition requires not more than 1,800 calories a day to keep her strong and healthy, and when you realize further that the ordinary dinner of meat and vegetables and dessert nets you between 1,000 and 1,200 calories, leaving only about 600 calories for breakfast and luncheon, you can see how easy it is to step over the boundary.

An ordinary piece of pie is 300 calories; a piece of cake, 200 calories; two slices of bread, 200 calories; cereal with cream, 200 calories; one large fig, 100 calories; a small serving of mashed potatoes, 100 calories. So you can readily see the need to keep a coldly calculating eye on the foods you eat so that you keep within the required food limits that spell antifat.

Next week I shall tell you of Mrs. Lane's progress and her exercises and her diet during her third week of reducing work.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers.

BLANCHIE: When practicing deep breathing always inhale through the nostrils. It is not only bad for health to breathe through the mouth, but it makes the lips thick. It is always best to wear stockings a half size larger than your feet. Short stockings invariably cramp the feet. I have a formula for removing corns which I shall be glad to mail to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

FLORENCE R.: A mixture of oatmeal and bran can be used instead of soap. It is an excellent cleanser and will make the skin soft and white. Take equal parts of oatmeal and bran and put about three or four tablespoons in little cheesecloth bags about five or six inches square. Place a bag in the water and when it becomes milky use the bag as you would a wash cloth.

* *

BERNICE: Walking, running, and dancing are all excellent exercises for strengthening the ankles. This is also an excellent exercise: Stand erect, rise on the tips of your toes with all muscles of the lower leg held rigid. Holding the muscles rigid, lower the heels until they touch the floor. Bend the front of the foot upward as far as possible with the calf muscles held rigid. Go through this exercise for fifteen minutes twice a day. First remove the shoes before beginning the exercise. My formula for corns will, I am sure, relieve your suffering. Would you like me to send it to you? Just send me a stamped, addressed envelope and it shall be mailed to you.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

When Appearances Count.

"I HAVE an appointment with a man tomorrow morning, to whom I have applied for my first job, and I haven't anything decent to wear for the interview. My new tan silk suit was rained upon and I had to send it to the cleaner's, and it hasn't come back yet."

"Why don't you wear what you've got on?"

"This old blue suit? Well, I suppose I'll have to, but I did want to look well tomorrow."

This scrap of conversation, overheard in the street car, called my attention to the two girls sitting opposite. They were both young and well dressed. The girl who bemoaned the lack of a suitable outfit for the prospective interview had on a dark blue cloth suit with a white linen collar, and a dark hat of the sailor variety—an altogether good looking outfit, and just the thing for her initial business venture of the morrow. She wanted to make a favorable impression, and therefore, she must be accoutered in her finest and brightest. What a mistaken idea!

If this girl were a few years older, or if it were the second or third position she was about to secure, her tan silk suit would never have been a consideration. The light colored suit may be smartly made, and she probably looks stunning in it, but it is hardly practicable for business wear, and probably would produce an unfavorable impression on the employer.

First impressions are usually lasting, and the first thing to impress itself on a business man about to hire a young woman undoubtedly would be her dress. Her personal appearance carries great weight in making his decision, naturally, as he has to judge of her character and ability by such externals.

In looking for a position a woman's first consideration should be her personal appearance. It is the quietly dressed woman, showing signs of careful grooming in spite of her subdued colors and conservative effects, who is apt to make the most favorable impression on a prospective employer. However, to be well dressed is an important matter to the business woman at all times.

By being well dressed I mean suitably dressed. Working women in general have the reputation for being well dressed, but many of us count among our acquaintances an exception to the rule. There is the girl in the office across the way who looks as though she were going to a fashionable reception or a bridge party when she sails in in the morning.

Flimsy and extremely light colored materials in clothes are out of place on a working woman during business hours. The beginner would do well to give up a little time to planning and selecting her working clothes. Just a little common sense is needed, and she will not only keep herself looking better but will find that the right sort of an outfit wears longer.

REAL LOVE STORIES.

He Was Too Skinny.

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

IN 1907 I was playing in a vaudeville theater. There were four girl ushers in the theater and I was courting one of them. I was deeply in love with this young woman and kept steady company with her for ten months. Finally I thought the time was ripe for me to ask the important question.

It was the week before Christmas. Saturday after the matinée I took my friend to a candy store and asked her whether she would be mine. Like any of Eve's daughters, she asked me for time to think it over.

That night after the last show I bought some collars and discovered next day that through a clerk's mistake they were a half size too large, but I had to wear one. I am rather thin and looked thinner in the new collar.

Matinée started at 1:30 o'clock. Musicians must be in their dressing room at 1 sharp; ushers had to report at 1:15, when the doors opened; same in the evening.

About 12:30 my girl came into the lobby where I had been waiting since 12, and she again said she would give me her answer later. During our talk she kept staring at me as if I were a stranger.

Matinée over I walked out of the theater with a smile on my face. When I reached the lobby she was not there. I stepped out in the street, but she was nowhere to be seen. Six o'clock found me still walking up and down in front of the theater. I took a bite in a hurry in a little restaurant, where I could watch for her. At 7 o'clock I had to be in the musicians' room. About ten minutes before 7 I saw her coming towards the theater, but as soon as she saw I was still waiting for her she turned back and walked away. She had fifteen minutes more time than I had.

Three days went by and she always waited till I went on duty before she showed up. I wrote her a letter, but it came back unopened and on the back of the envelope she wrote: "Please don't try to communicate with me."

The same day I resigned and left town.

Eight long years went by. During all these years I had tried and tried to find the answer to this riddle, but in vain.

It was the week of Christmas, 1915, I went to spend the holidays with a brother of mine who is married. One afternoon I was loafing around looking into windows to find something for my brother's children, when I saw a familiar face coming toward me. It took me but a second to recognize my Rose of old. She was leading a youngster of 5 by the hand.

As soon as I recognized her I started for the other side of the street, but she also recognized me and called me, and I stopped and waited for her. She gave me a searching look and then she asked: "Is it you?" I told her I thought so, and then she said: "And alive?" I said that I felt that way, and then she burst out: "O, Louis, I am so sorry I wronged you," and then she told me the story which cleared up the mystery and left me thunderstruck.

When she saw me so skinny looking in that large collar, she got alarmed, and during the performance she kept watching me. She saw me cough several times (a cigaret cough, which I have had ever since I started smoking the blamed things when I was only 13). So, putting 2 and 2 together, she thought I had consumption and she did not want to tell me and hurt my feelings, and she did not dare talk to me at all for fear she might catch the disease.

She told me she had married an electrician and had two more children besides the one with her. She was happy, she said, but would never forgive herself for wronging me and would I have dinner at her home on Christmas and meet her husband? No, I had to catch the next train out of town, and so I did. My brother's children are still waiting for something from their uncle, and I don't know what my brother thinks of me; but I could not explain, and I could not stay in town. I did not want to run across her again.

Now, who is to blame, the clerk, the collar, the cigaret that presented me with the cough, or what?

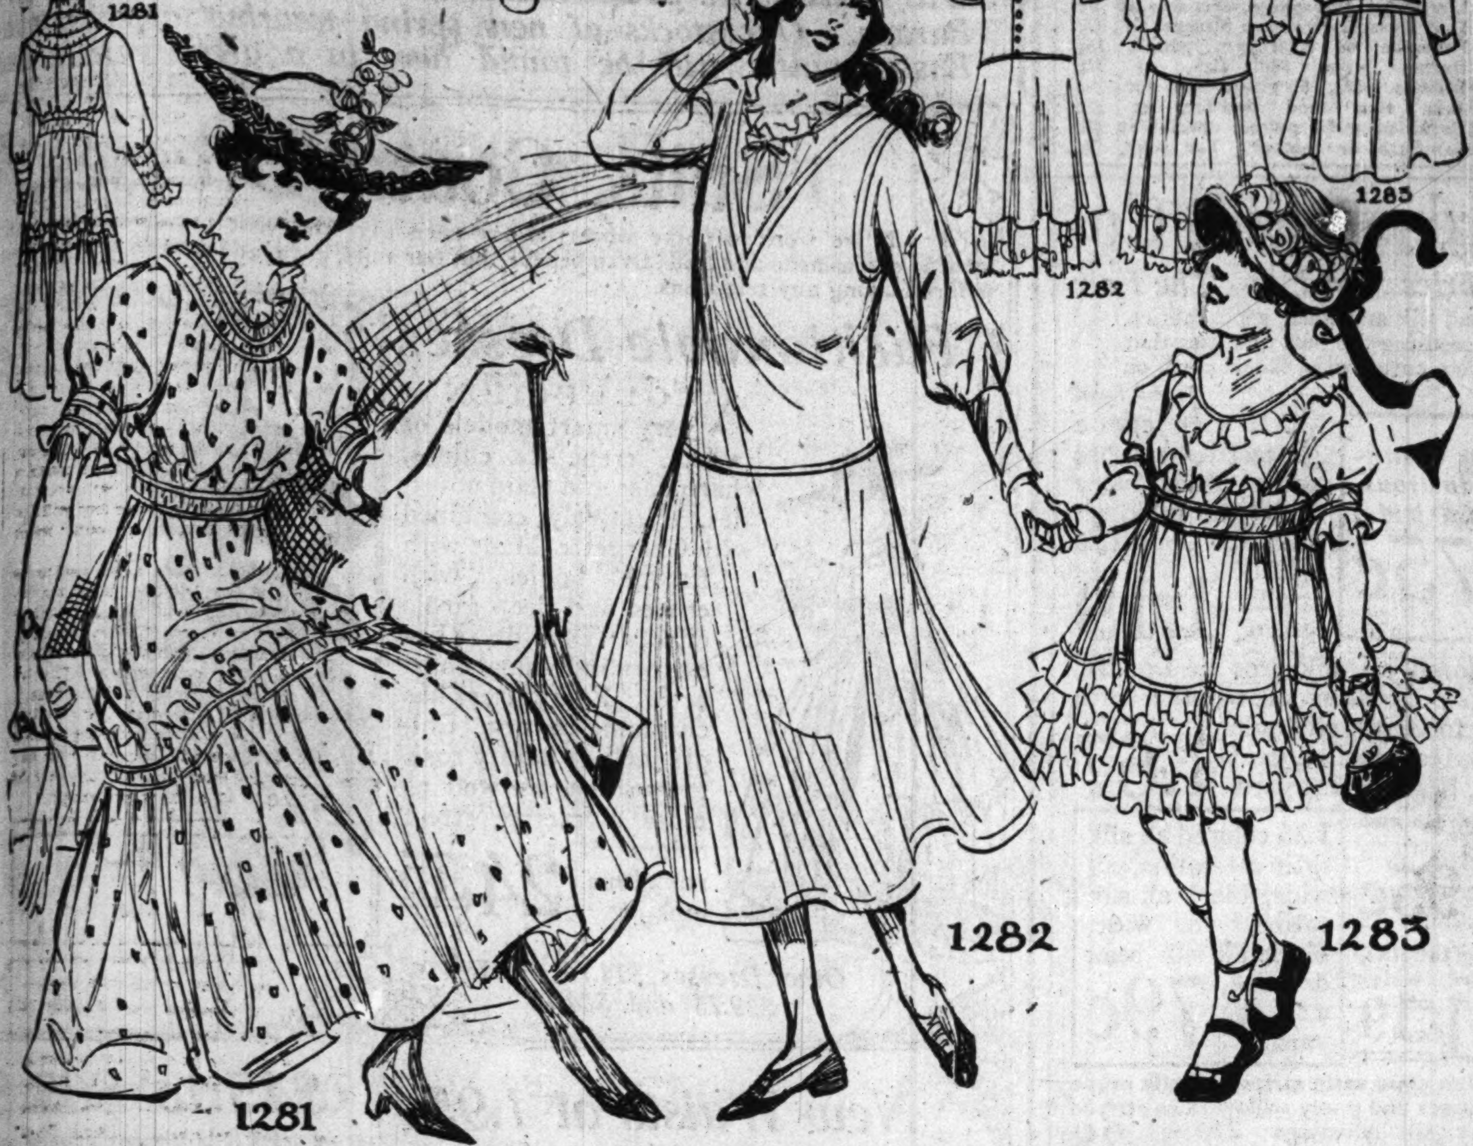
PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

STYLES TO SUIT THE WISE AND FASTIDIOUS PARENT

Drawn from Exclusive Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evers



No. 1281—Dress or misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 9¾ yards of material 27 inches wide, 7⅛ yards 36 inches wide, or 4¾ yards 44 inches wide.

No. 1282—Dress for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 1⅝ yards of material 36 or 44 inches wide for the blouse, 6 yards 36 inches wide, or 5⅛ yards 44 inches wide for the overbodice and circular skirt. For the gathered skirt will be needed 4 yards of flouncing 27 inches wide, and for the overbodice alone 1⅝ yards 36 or 44 inches wide. The circular skirt is a complete circle and can be adjusted over the straight skirt to give the tunic effect.

No. 1283—Child's dress, 4 to 8 years. For the 6 year size will be needed 2⅛ yards of material 36 inches wide, or 2¼ yards 44 inches wide, with 1 yard 36 inches wide for the ruffles.

FLARE and the world flares with you certainly holds good in describing the garments of the day. Otherwise you may indulge your own preference—with a delightful variety to choose from.

The patterns today are for the small woman, for the girl in her later teens, and for the small child. A glance at them will reveal their essential practicality as well as their extreme prettiness. And now that spring is really here, and to stay, too, according to all predictions of sage weather men, there is no time to lose in deciding on just what one wants and what one needs and then steering somehow to a central course between these two opposing factions.

In nearly all of the new dresses hip fullness exists to a greater or less degree. There are many high collars, and it is a foregone conclusion that there will be many low ones. Then, too, there will be many long gloves needed, because short sleeves are to be worn as well as long ones.

White shoes are to be extremely popular this spring and summer. There are white shoes which are extra high in order to go with the short skirts and there is the all white oxford and colonial to go with the skirt which is gradually lengthening and which may before summer be quite respectably long.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Roy, a neighbor's child, was watching me straightening things in a bureau drawer and became greatly interested in an unused watch. Just as I asked him if he would like to have it his mother called him and he hurried away. Roy's people constantly remind him that he must not ask for things in the homes he visits. He evidently had these teachings in mind when he returned half an hour later, for he cleverly brought up the subject of the watch and secured it for his own by the question: "What was it we were talking about when my mamma called me?" G. M.

Billy was learning to tell time. He watched the clock and knew just about the time of day when certain things happened. One was the postman's arrival, usually at a quarter of 11. One day he came at a quarter of 10. Billy ran to the clock, and, after looking carefully, said: "Why, look, the letterman's a whole hour ahead of hisself." R. F. P.

Our neighbor's little girl had been sick for some time and on a diet. She had been asking when she would get what she wanted to eat when she wanted it. The 17th of March was her birthday, and as soon as she as told of it she said, "Mamma, you just said this was my birthday, and I finks you might let me eat somethin' 'at's bad for me." G. H.

Some friends of mine have a cross baby. When awake he cries most of the time. One day his 4 year old sister went into the room where the baby was in bed and found him awake and not crying. She tiptoed out of the room, ran to her mother and said, "O, mother, baby is awake and don't know it." W. C.

My little nephew played outdoors all the time, and one cold day his mother wanted him to stay in, but he begged to go out. Then his mother asked him: "Why do you always want to play outdoors, and why can't you play in the house when it is so cold?" He answered, "Well, God made the outside for little boys to play in, didn't he?" A. B. R.

Blackheads are a confession of the use of the wrong method of cleansing for that type of skin that is subject to this disfiguring trouble.

The following Woodbury treatment will keep such a skin free from blackheads.

Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a lump of ice. Dry the skin carefully.

Do not expect to get the desired result by using this treatment for a time and then neglecting it. But make it a daily habit and it will give you the clear, attractive skin that the steady use of Woodbury's always brings.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in the treatment above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads. Thereafter, use the above Woodbury treatment in your daily toilet.

Do this today! A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Go to your druggist or toilet counter today and get a cake. Begin at once to get the benefits of this treatment for your skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in Chicago and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by the Andrew Jergens Co., New York and Cincinnati.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Affectionate.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE symbol of this sign, which continues until April 20, being the "Ram," it is to be expected that you will have your stubborn spells, and that likewise you will be exceedingly lively and energetic, all of which is true. You enter a fight to win, and nothing can induce you to back out. It is a well known fact that a drove of sheep is easily driven if there is a leader, and you surely do like this leading job.

You're moody and it's not advisable to approach you with any outside matter during business hours. You're just as likely as not to tell the intruder that there is a proper time and place for all things. But people don't mind these outbursts, for nine times out of ten, if they call after dinner, they'll find you the soul of good humor. And you are more than anxious to make up for the first impression, for it causes you much unhappiness to lose your temper.

You crave affection and you give a great deal. Sometimes acquaintances under the guise of flattery can "work you" on this affection basis for many favors. As your love nature is more intense than that of any other sign, it behooves you to be careful whom you select as a mate. Even if you are "turned down," it will be better than for you to marry some one not your social and mental equal, for your sympathies are so quick and kindly that your tendency is to sink to the level of those you love.

Your nature, on the whole, is a happy one, and you manage to get some joy out of every experience. "Progressive," your friends say of you, for it is true you are never entirely satisfied with yourself; in fact, you are simply insatiable in your desire for knowledge. Another of your admirable qualities is your ability to lead the conversation into new and interesting paths, and so you are never at a loss to provide entertainment.

Beauty, order, harmony, and pleasant surroundings are quite necessary to your happiness. And you must not be restricted if your genius is to have a fair chance; you must be allowed to do things in your own way, unusual as it may be. Luckily for you, if your wishes are not too extensive you get what you want.

Given a last year's garment or hat, the average Aries woman can work some well nigh marvelous transformation, and usually keeps the secret to herself, unless some over-inquisitive friend asks too many questions. Then you like to tell, for, womanlike, you enjoy being considered a genius. Man or woman, you prefer public to private life, so if you turn these dressmaking-millinery abilities to the use of the public you'll undoubtedly prove a success.

Besides these talents, you will also succeed as a teacher or musician, possibly as a salesman or lawyer.

Your union with a sagittarius person, provided your nationality and social position are about the same, will likely prove a happy one. Marriage with those in your own sign will be a fortunate union if the two heads do not try to lead at once. Libra, your opposite, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, will prove a congenial mate.

Your two most fortunate weeks for beginning new enterprises are those beginning April 13 and Nov. 29. Your colors are blue, pink, and white; birthstones, diamond and amethyst.

With April 20 begins a new sign, that of Taurus, the symbol of which is the bull, which some people are unkind enough to say exactly fits the disposition of those born at this time. Whether or not this is true, it seems to be a fact that a good fight is the spice of life to the average Taurus born, though you are remarkably even tempered unless you are crossed. When you get into a rage, absolute quiet is necessary until you can regain your self-control. Yours is a tenacious nature, and once your mind is made up that's the end of it!

You are generous with your friends and like to entertain them lavishly; and those in whom you take an interest will never want. Money comes to you easily, but you aren't looking out for the rainy day; with you wealth is only a means to an end.

You will make congenial friendships with your negative sign, Capricorn, Dec. 23-Jan. 20. Should you marry a Libra person, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, there will be congeniality on a more intellectual basis. In any union the chances of a Taurus person's happiness depends upon himself.

Your colors are red, azure, and yellow; birthstones, emerald and moss agate; most fortunate weeks in the year, those beginning Sept. 5 and Jan. 11.

She's 14.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 14 years old. There is a boy a few years my senior of whom I am very fond. Am I too young to go to dances and shows with him? We have known each other and been friends ever since we were children. Is it right that I should care so much for a boy older than myself? You have helped me before and I hope you may this time. B."

What does mother say, Barbara, dear? The difference in years isn't anything to worry about; it's this starting to do grown-up stunts when you are so young. Dances and shows and "out late nights" don't go with 14, honestly.

Is She All Right, Doris?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 16 years old, have brown eyes, dark brown hair, and between light and dark complexion. Do you consider me pretty looking? I am 5 feet 7 inches tall and weigh 125 pounds. Am I too tall for my age, and do I weigh too much? A."

Why be anxious? I'm sure you are a right good looking girl. One criticism I might make is that you are too self-conscious. You think about yourself too much, in other words. For your age your weight is sufficient. Now quit your worrying.

Kisses and Engagements.

"Dear Miss Blake: I would appreciate your advising me whether or not it is proper to kiss a girl before being engaged, and do you think a year and a half too long to wait to be married after presenting the young lady with a ring? "J. C. L."

Some people have great faith in "understandings" [I don't], and under this guise enjoy the privileges of the engaged. I judge from your letter that you are nearing the engaged state, so I won't say it isn't proper to kiss the girl, but you see how I really feel about this matter. The length of the engagement depends entirely upon circumstances; there is no set rule. Good luck to you.

How I Won My Mate.

Doing the Wash.

In a crowd of young people one day I said I hated to wash dishes and would rather do a whole washing. Ben said: "I have to help my mother wash. If you will do our washing I'll wash dishes every evening for this week." Everybody laughed, so I had to take it up. Monday morning he brought their laundry and I did it at my home, and every evening he came over and washed our dishes. It worked so well he suggested we make it permanent. So this is how I won my mate. E. J.

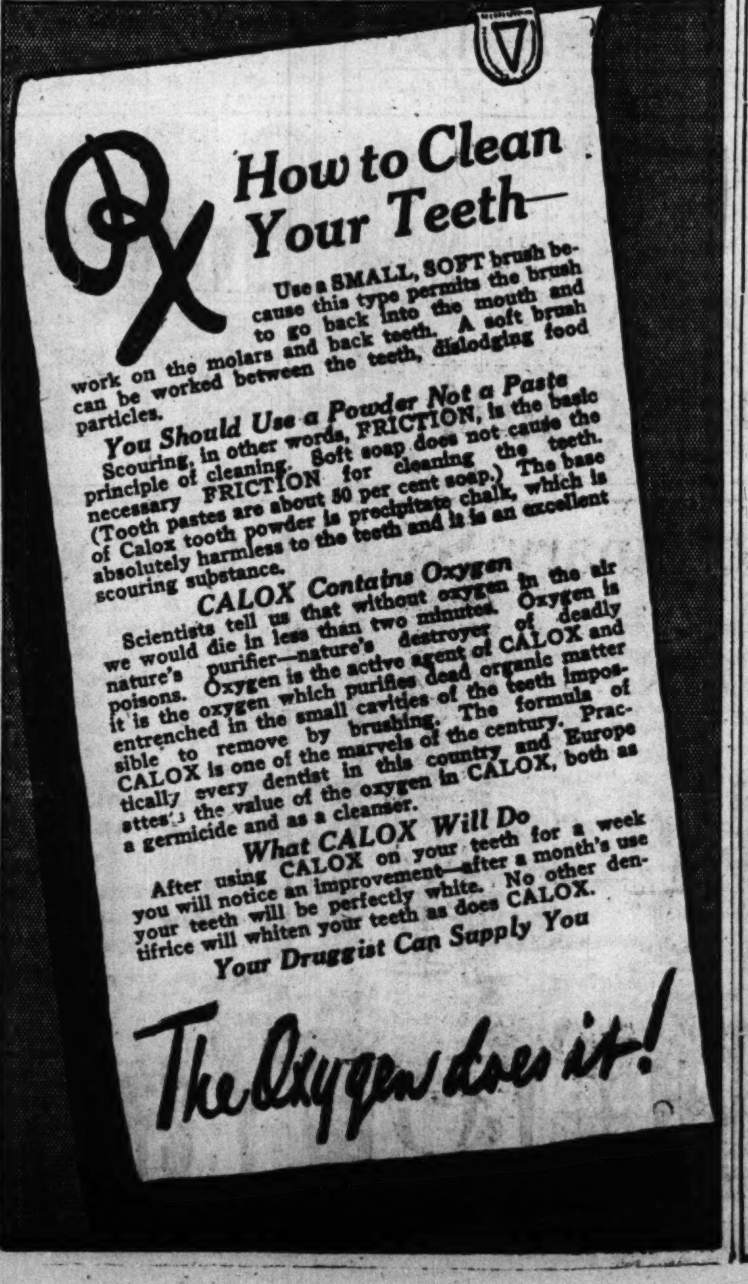
Wore a Big Apron.

My husband tells me that his first impression on meeting me was "What a Little Mother." And just because I wore a big white apron tied at the back with wide strings and my hair parted in the center and loosely coiled low down in the neck. Nor was the illusion shattered when we went out, for I wore a small hat trimmed with a simple tailored bow.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Most girls look their best in a small hat, except those who are very tall or stout. I wonder how many know what a charm small hats hold for the opposite sex. H. N.



How to Clean Your Teeth—

Use a SMALL, SOFT brush because this type permits the brush to go back into the mouth and work on the molars and back teeth. A soft brush can be worked between the teeth, dislodging food particles.

You Should Use a Powder Not a Paste

Scouring, in other words, FRICTION, is the basic principle of cleaning. Soft soap does not cause the necessary FRICTION for cleaning the teeth. (Tooth pastes are about 50 per cent soap.) The base of Calox tooth powder is precipitate chalk, which is absolutely harmless to the teeth and is is an excellent scouring substance.

CALOX Contains Oxygen

Scientists tell us that without oxygen in the air we would die in less than two minutes. Oxygen is nature's purifier—nature's destroyer of deadly poisons. Oxygen is the active agent of CALOX and it is the oxygen which purifies dead organic matter entrenched in the small cavities of the teeth impossible to remove by brushing. The formula of CALOX is one of the marvels of the century. Practically every dentist in this country and Europe attests the value of the oxygen in CALOX, both as a germicide and as a cleanser.

What CALOX Will Do

After using CALOX on your teeth for a week you will notice an improvement—after a month's use your teeth will be perfectly white. No other dentifrice will whiten your teeth as does CALOX.

Your Druggist Can Supply You

The Oxygen does it!

LIMBS BECAME ONE SORE ERUPTION

Broke Out in Small Pimples. Itching So Severe Could Not Sleep. Burned Badly. In 10 Days

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I had a sort of an itching on my limbs and at first they broke out in small pimples. The skin was inflamed and sore, and also red, and towards the last the pimples became one sore eruption. The itching was so severe that I could not sleep and I could not scratch my limbs because they burned so badly. The trouble lasted six weeks and I could not do my work as it should have been done.

"I saw a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and I sent for a free sample and applied it according to directions, and it gave me relief so I bought more, and in ten days I was healed." (Signed) Mike Gager, Westphalia, Kansas, July 7, 1915.

BOHN SYPHON and SANITOR REFRIGERATORS at 35% to 50% Off

Our Great Removal Sale Gives Every Housewife a Genuine Money-Saving Opportunity

WE move soon to our new location at 68 East Washington Street. Instead of paying out big money to move our stocks, we're clearing them out at 35% to 50% from list prices—giving the public the benefit of the saving. Remember, these Bohn refrigerators are standard values—the famous porcelain-lined refrigerator adopted by the leading railroads of the country. You will find a complete range of sizes for home and apartment use.

It Saves Removal Cost for Us —You Get the Benefit

It seems like every enterprising householder in Chicago is taking advantage of this opportunity. And it certainly is an opportunity worth while. Think of it—these are the same, identical, high-grade BOHN Refrigerators you've heard so much about that we are selling at these unheard-of price reductions. We couldn't possibly sell them so low except that we are moving.

Our stock is selling rapidly—we move very soon. If you can't take the refrigerator you want right now, a small deposit will hold it for you for delivery when you want it. But don't put off buying—come tomorrow.

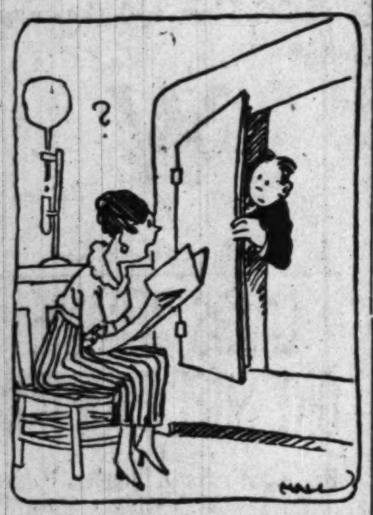
The Research Magnifique!

My clothes were slick and threadbare, but I had an invitation out to dinner with a young lady. I took my three old suits, all that I possessed except one blue coat, down to a three ball shop and traded them for a pair of blue trousers.

The next morning I wore them up to a chemical research laboratory, where I was doing some private work, so was alone. The thought struck me that they needed sterilizing, so I grabbed them off and put my only pair of trousers in the sterilizing oven. Calmly sitting there awaiting the proper temperature, I heard pitty-pat sounds approaching my door. There was absolutely no haven of escape but the big refrigerator. As I backed into that a fair damsel came into the laboratory. She came in and sat down!



Imagine poor me in the refrigerator in B. V. Ds, and my only pair of trousers in an oven that was rapidly reaching the burning point. When my nervous nostrils began to perceive the scorching of my last pair of trousers I could bear it no longer and peeped my head around the refrigerator door, assuring the fair one that if she would but leave me a few minutes I might rescue the remains of my necessary apparel and immediately put them on, and that I would be glad to have her return. She scurried out, but never reappeared, thank goodness. M. T. B.

An Ice Cream Treat.

Table waiting as a means to pay one's way through college is not usually very exciting. My services were required at the formal dinner of one of the well known sororities.

The quarters were frightfully crowded and there was scarcely room enough to pass between the tables with a fairly good sized armful of dishes. There were two rooms to be served and it fell to my lot to serve the far one. To gain access to this room it was necessary to pass through a narrow space between the wall and the chair of one of the co-eds; consequently I thought it the better policy not to attempt to carry too many dishes at one trip.

Everything was going wonderfully well until time for the ice cream course. I attempted to carry one more dish than usual in order to finish up the table, knowing that I could manage them with perfect ease if I could but get through the gap.

With my back to the wall I was gently sliding through the narrow passageway fairly loaded down with ice cream. When directly behind the young lady some one cracked a poke. Throwing her head back with a quick jerk, she caught me directly amidships which resulted in the sudden precipitation of one of the six plates into her crêpe de chine lap.

She did not remove her head from my breast and I wondered why. You can imagine the consummation of embarrassment when looking down, I saw her hair held fast by a button of my waiter's jacket. There I stood tied to a beautiful co-ed by a lock of her own hair, helpless to move in either direction, my arms full of dishes, the synosure of all eyes. My embarrassment was complete. At last a few of the less excited members summoned up enough pity to separate us. Needless to say I was too much fussed to finish the job. M. G. M.

They All Laughed.

Several years ago, while running a newspaper in a small Kansas town, I was asked by a minister to attend a banquet for men of the church and to make a talk, expressing my views.

Previously I had been reporter on a daily paper in another city, and while there an incident had made a lasting impression on my mind. One night a sick beggar had stood outside a church, asking alms of those who emerged from prayer meeting. None offered a helping hand. Next morning he was found dead in the open hallway or entrance to that church. I arrived on the scene before the body was removed and knelt over the man's face to see if I could detect the odor of liquor, but none was apparent.

I resolved to hurl this bomb into the ranks of my listeners at the banquet. In winding up my talk at the banquet I said: "I smelled no liquor on the dead man's breath."

Glancing down the table, I espied a local grocer laughing heartily. It proved "catching," for in an instant others "saw the point," and the hall resounded with boisterous guffaws.

Seconds seemed eternities. Then I knew—dead men have no breath. J. L. F.

"Come On, Wifie," He Said.

An embarrassing moment was when I was walking along Sixth street and a drunken man came up to me, put his arm around me, and said: "Come on, wife, just one more drink." An officer I called soon settled him, but that didn't drive away my blushes. E. F.

Slapped Wrong One.

It was on a train and my friend, whom I had unexpectedly met, asked me to wake him in the morning at 7 and gave me as the number of his berth, "lower 8." We said, "Good night" and parted.

When he reached his berth he discovered that a woman, unaccustomed to traveling, had the upper berth, so he offered to exchange with her and she gladly accepted. Of course, I knew nothing of this and in the morning when I came to wake him I reached my hand into the berth and gave the occupant a hard slap, which resulted in a woman's hysterical scream. Was I embarrassed? I was! L.

One Day Last Week

The Tribune printed 140.52 columns of advertising as compared with 74.61 columns in the other morning papers combined.

This sort of thing is not an accident. It is the natural result of fundamental conditions.

The Tribune is carrying more advertising than the other morning papers combined, and carrying it at a higher rate, because Tribune advertising pays.

And Tribune advertising pays because:

1. Over 600,000 circulation Sunday.
2. Over 350,000 circulation daily.
3. All advertising STRICTLY CENSORED.
4. Tribune readers EDUCATED to respond to Tribune ads.
5. Tribune readers ABLE to respond to advertising.

The Tribune is growing faster than ever before in circulation and in advertising.

The Tribune is offering more to its readers and more to its advertisers.

If you want to keep up with the times; if you want to obtain valuable merchandising advice; if you want to make your business grow—you must read and advertise in The Tribune both daily & Sunday.

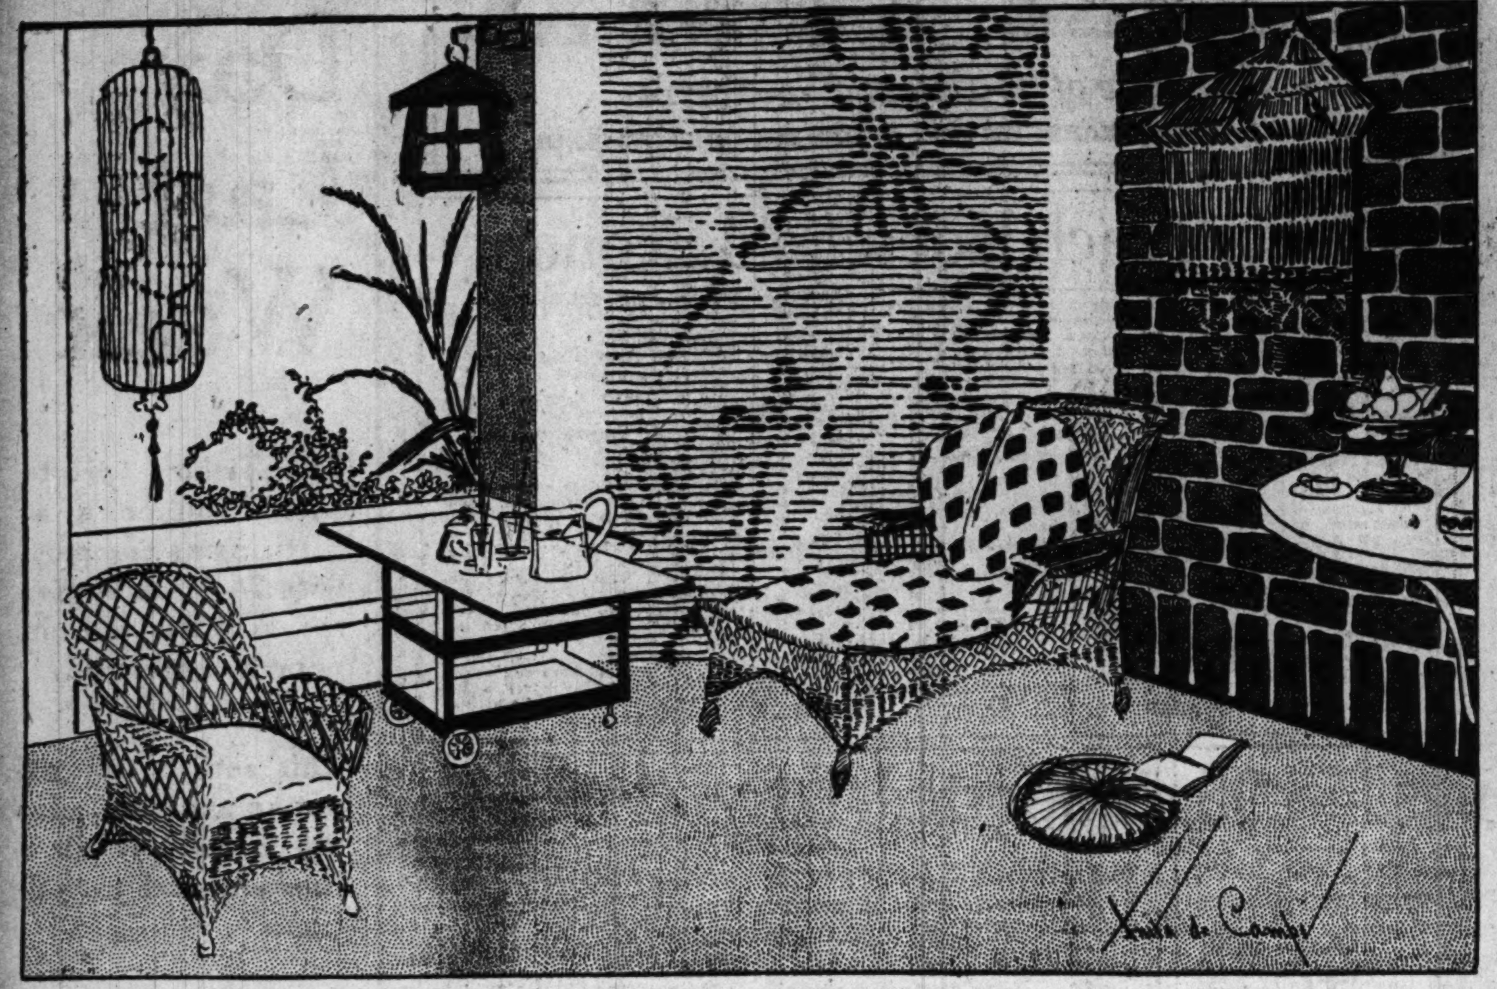
The Home Harmonious

On the Porch

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

THE most essential difference between the furnishing of an outdoor porch and an indoor one, or sun room, should be a difference in the textural quality of all the articles selected. In planning the porch furnishing the first thing to be remembered is that it must stand exposed to the elements—the wind, the rain, and the sun—and so the chintz cushions, soft rugs, delicate china, pretty, daintily painted furniture, so lovely for the glass sheltered porch, however attractive and appropriate in shape they may be, are not suitable in texture for the open air.

For the porch we want rougher things—hemp rugs, good looking earthen crockery, furniture light in weight but strong and serviceable, and rainproof cushions. Chairs glued at the spindles will not do, nor those with solid seats that will hold puddles of rain and will subsequently split if accidentally left out in a summer storm.

Regular deck paint is the best paint to use for the floor.

Some built-in porch furniture is excellent. A good shelf adjusted to the wall by a hinged strip and an under bracket, is a simple, joyful thing to have. The under bracket or arm is made to push aside, by which means the tablelike shelf is dropped flat against the wall when not in use. This, if it is painted, should be done in dark color.

Where space allows, a chest might also be built in, though a benchlike chest is a pretty good thing if detached, placed on ball bearing rollers, and supplied with stout trunk handles. It should have a padlock and may be used as a stowaway for croquet set, rackets, golf sticks, etc. Let it be painted dark and have a thin mattresslike cushion strapped to its top.

Wicker furniture is probably the best for porch use, being easily lifted, cool, comfortable, and strong. Light and graceful and at the same time strong and serviceable also are the French cane and reed pieces. These are enameled in colors that are bright, but not too light, in cherry, green, clear blue, etc. It has an air of wonderful vivacity and is, of course, waterproof.

Wide seated porch swings have almost entirely taken the place of woven hammocks, and not without reason.

A pretty adjunct for the porch is the long chair. This, well filled with cushions, is an ideal resting place, downright conducive to subconsciousness. Here one may lie idly, with book in hand, and but half mindful of the printed words, drift gently into dreams between the lines.

Japanese hanging porch screens are not only a useful protection against the sun and a means of privacy but they have a distinctly decorative value. Nothing could be more bewitching than the green and gray silhouettes cast by the wind stirred leaves on the outside of the curtain, and broken to the sight in fine horizontal lines by the straight weave of the split bamboo. Moreover, they are cool—as they do not interfere with the circulation of air, and they can be rolled up out of the way to suit your convenience.

So many attractive porch novelties are being shown this year that the warning not to overdo is timely. One or two fancy pieces are, of course, permissible, but a crowding of furniture entirely robs the place of its greatest charm, a sense of freedom and space.

Among the extra accessories is a small tea table with a folding top, at which, when its two flaps are opened out, four or six persons may be seated and served comfortably. The push handle is so close that it is hardly noticeable. It is rolled on two small wheels and two casters, and its lower part is fitted with two railed-in shelves for the accommodation of serving dishes for an extra course. Closed and set against the wall, it looks more like a buffet table than an ordinary tea wagon.

Simply enchanting are the thrush cages of reed for porch decoration. They are made in a variety of new forms, two of which I have sketched here. One is of orange color. It is flat at one side and rests directly against the wall. The other is round and unusually long, several times the depth of the ordinary bird cage, with a succession of perches calculated to be gratifying to birdly aspirations.

All cushions, pads, etc., used on porches should be made of a waterproof fabric or have a stitched on cover made of such stuff. Over this may be slipped covers that are made adjustable for frequent washing. These should be neatly fitted with snap clasps, buttons, or ties, preferably the former.

In selecting the material for the outside covers it is well to keep the dominant idea of strength and solidity, and so to select cloth that is characterized by coarseness of weave and roughness of texture. Colors should be deep and mellow and warranted washable. This is no place for pale French grays and pinks and pastel shades that are sure to become soiled and faded in a week's time.

Hand blocked English prints are good but expensive. Coarse tan linen is splendid, embroidered with worsted. Plan checked or striped linen is cool and attractive looking. Crossbar and latticework effects are consistent. Agra cloth, a fifty inch linen, is coarse in weave as burlap, and yet soft to the touch, and to no end durable. It sometimes comes bordered with coarse, bright colored embroidery.

The list of desirable porch furniture may be sweepingly summed up as follows: Steamer chairs, built-in or portable table, or both, mandarin chairs in rattan, otherwise known as hourglass chairs, one wicker long chair, a box bench, wall shelf, Gloucester swing settee, cages, and flower boxes.

A certain rough strength must dominate everything in this bit of out of doors that is brought right into the home. There must be nothing mincing and artificial about it. Altogether there should be a splendidly wholesome atmosphere about the porch that is missed entirely in its pretty counterfeit substitute, the solarium.

Answers to Inquiries.

A. V. A.: In curtaining your windows and doors leading into the sun parlor, let the material be all alike. Use a fine net and shir it to the curtain rods at the top and bottom of the glass. Let your lamp shade be a rose color. Gray would be nice for the room to be repapered.

* *

Mrs. R. E. G.: I should suggest green for your rugs, for your living rooms, and green and tan for the window draperies. Yes, I think blue would be suitable in your room furnished with Circassian walnut. Select old blue for your side walls, and a deeper blue for the rup. Use touches of old gold in the accessories.

* *

W. R. A.: I congratulate you on your attractive work. The photographs of interiors you sent me are pleasing. Among the trifling suggestions that occur to me is this, that your picture over the sofa should be hung on wires with two hooks, so that the lines of the hanging will be perpendicular, not converging. It would be well to put a window seat over the low radiator at the window. It is considered better form not to have the curtain rings show on your portieres. Lower the rod a little and finish the portieres at the top with a French hem, have brass rings inside of the second hem, which must be made loose, so that the portieres will slip back and forth. I should leave the glides of Sheraton brass as they are, also the caps of the buffet. Doubtless your andirons are of brass, which repeats this note on the room. Your color scheme is charming.

* *

MRS. A. K.: Sun fast materials are highly popular for curtains and bedspreads. These come in a variety of weaves and colors at various prices. Cover your shirtwaist box with sun fast like the bedspread and inside curtains, and trim it with striped cretonne cut up in ribbonlike strips. Put a strip around the top and another around the bottom. If you are going to use your room for a sick room, be advised to have as little in it, in the way of draperies, rugs, etc., as you possibly can. Let these things be in readiness to put up after your illness.

The AMATEUR GARDENER

by Eben E. Rexford

All questions relating to the cultivation of gardens will be answered if addressed to the Amateur Gardener, "The Tribune," Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper only.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

The Dahlia.

TIME was, and that not so very long ago, when the dahlia was considered so difficult a plant to grow that it wasn't worth while to experiment with it. It came into bloom so late in the season that few flowers were developed before frosty weather came, and after a little the average gardener gave up trying to grow it.

The treatment that was given it consisted in starting its roots into growth in pots or boxes in the house early in the season under the impression that because it came from a locality where the summer is long our northern summers were too short for it, therefore we must give it several extra weeks to grow in.

The ordinary result of such treatment was that the plants, started into growth in the house under conditions unfavorable to healthy development, became so weak before the weather would warrant one in putting them into the ground out of doors that when they were put out they were so checked by the change from in to out door conditions that it took them a long time to get a second start, and by the time they had got fairly under headway cold weather put an end to them.

Nowadays we do things differently. We do not attempt to lengthen the season by starting them in the house. We wait until the ground has become warm and the weather settled, and then we set the tubers out in the garden in a rich soil that has been made mellow to the depth of a foot or a foot and a half.

Here they get a strong start at once because conditions are favorable to satisfactory growth, and by the middle of August they begin to bloom, and from that time to the coming of frost we have a continuous supply of flowers from them. Under this method of culture the dahlia is speedily coming into general cultivation, and those who grow it successfully one season will not willingly be without it thereafter.

The secret of success is—rich soil, plenty of water at the root if the season happens to be a dry one, and warm weather from start to finish.

Those who have grown it for a season generally set out the entire bunch of roots next spring. This is a mistake. Break the bunch apart, and set out each tuber separately. You will get a more satisfactory plant in this way than you will from planting the whole bunch. Each tuber that has an "eye," or growing point on it, will make a strong, independent plant provided all conditions are favorable.

The stalks of the dahlia are extremely brittle, therefore are easily broken down by strong winds or heavy rains. To guard against this it is necessary to give the plants good support. Set a stout stake by each one, and see that the main stalk is kept securely tied to it. Use strips of cloth instead of twine in doing this, as the latter often cuts into the soft wood and injures it.

There are several distinct types of this plant, and each new season adds to them. The old, double variety is catalogued as the "show" dahlia. Showy this type really is, but because of its formality it is not as much admired as some of the other members of the family.

The "decorative" type has semi-double flowers, borne on long stalks, and is really a much finer flower than the "show." For cutting it is one of our best plants. The "cactus" variety has oddly twisted and curved petals, which will please those who admire the ragged Japanese chrysanthemum.

The "pompones" are "show" dahlias in miniature. They are fine for bedding. The single flowered kinds are quite as showy as the doubles, and many persons prefer them to any of the others. These can be grown from seed and give flowers the first season.

In color this plant ranges from pure white to darkest scarlet, crimson, and maroon, and there are innumerable shades of pink, carmine, rose, purple, and yellow, and many varieties in which two or more of these colors are so blended in stripes, flakes, and petal tips that the list of desirable kinds is long enough to make it difficult to select from it.

I would advise choosing the colors preferred, leaving the selection of varieties to the dealer from whom you order your plants.

After frost comes and the tops of the plant are killed, dig the roots on a pleasant day and expose them to the sun until the soil cleaves away from them at a touch. Then store in a cool room and leave them there until cold weather comes, after which they should go into the cellar for winter.

Do not put them near the floor where it will be damp. It is a good plan to keep them on shelves about half way between floor and ceiling. If any tubers show signs of decay, throw them out at once, or they will communicate the disease to the others.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I WANT to ask this big Corner of friends for a little lift towards helping an orphan boy of 14. I call him an orphan, although his father is still living and depends upon this little fellow for support. In fact, he collects his salary and allows his son little. The child hasn't clothing decent enough to visit a neighbor, much less attend Sunday school, and he says he would go if he could. Friends, will you help? He actually has not clothes enough. Will some one kindly send me directions for making roses out of bits of ribbon and silk pieces. C. S."

This appeal touches me as it will other mothers, and I hope that among us we can do something for this lad. I will send the address of the friend who writes for him to any one who applies for it, inclosing stamp for reply. I trust that some one can give the desired information as to making silk roses.

Wants Reading Matter.

"I am writing to ask a favor. I am a young country woman without the opportunity to get much reading matter. Will any one who has old issues of magazines that are not wanted please send them to me? I would especially like to get copies, no matter how old, of any good household magazines, and after I have read them I will pass them on to others. Also I will try to refund the postage. It would be a great comfort to me and a help, too, to get a chance to read such magazines. MISS G."

Certainly there must be Cornerites with back numbers of household magazines to send to this Cornerite, either without the expectation of receiving postage in return for that expended or otherwise. The hunger for reading gnaws painfully at times, and any of us should be glad to try to satisfy it.

Milk for Ink Stains.

"After reading the many helpful letters I would like to add a little letter myself. Praise to the many who from time to time try to make life worth while for others. They seem to realize that it is not all of life to live. That is the kind of religion I believe in holding, instead of getting it and keeping it for Sunday. I have seen that several asked for a recipe for removing ink stains. If the article stained is soaked in sweet milk for thirty minutes and then washed out the stain will be gone. We live in the country and in a lonesome spot at that and occasionally the time hangs heavy on my hands. If any of the Cornerites wish to have some quilts pieced on shares I would be glad to do the work. Some of my children like flowers, but we have no money to buy any seeds or roots and would be glad to get some of these if there are any to spare. Also if any one has books for children to exchange or give I would gladly pay postage on them. I would like books for boys 9 and 13 years old. "MRS. W. J."

This is a pleasant and suggestive letter, and I trust the appeals it contains may receive prompt answers. I will send the address of Mrs. W. J. to any one who writes for it and incloses stamp for reply. I can indorse the remedy for removing ink stains from wash goods.

Two Offer Bibles.

"I see in the Corner a request by M. M. R. for a Bible. If you will send me her address and also that of some shut-in I will be glad to correspond. H. M."

"In the Helping Hand I see that M. M. R. wishes a Bible. If this has not been supplied kindly let me know the address and I will gladly send one to her. "F. M. P."

The desire of M. M. R. for the Bible has been granted, but I print these two letters on the chance that some one else may wish a copy of the book of books and also that a shut-in who wishes a correspondent may care to avail herself of the offer of H. M.

Quilt Pieces to Give.

"I have pieces all cut for a buff and white gingham quilt of the 'dove in the window' pattern. I will be glad to send this to some one who would like it if you will give me the address. I wish much to have a large map of the United States or of the world—the kind you hang on the wall—or an old geography or atlas. It has occurred to me that some one with school children in the family may have such discarded books. I will gladly pay postage. M. G."

There is no question as to prompt applications for that quilt. May I impress it upon the minds of correspondents that applications for the address of M. G. must be accompanied by stamp for reply. As to the map, I am not positive, but there is little doubt that the geography or atlas desired will be supplied. As the correspondent suggests, such discarded books are likely to be found in the homes of school children.

Cleaning Cloth Topped Shoes.

"I have some cloth topped shoes which have become soiled. They are fawn color. I would like to know how to clean them. "K. C."

The best method I can suggest is to use gasoline. Several applications may be needed, and, of course, the work should be done out of doors or in a room where there is no fire. Has any one a better method of cleaning to recommend?

Request for Shoulder Brace.

"I see in the Corner that some one has a shoulder brace to give away. I would be glad to have it and will pay the charges on it. My size is 34. MRS. A. A."

The name of the friend offering the shoulder brace is not given by Mrs. A. A. and it is therefore impossible for me to trace it. Can some one else help this correspondent with the appliance she needs?

Making a Quilt.

"I noticed the letter from R. W., who has quilt pieces to give away to a woman who wishes to make a quilt. I would like very much to have them and will pay the postage if she will send them to me. I am a young married woman and have little opportunity for collecting such pieces. MRS. H. B."

I am sorry to say that the quilt pieces asked for had been given away elsewhere before the arrival of the letter of Mrs. H. B. I hope there may be some one else who has quilt pieces to bestow. I will hold the address of this correspondent and furnish it upon application, accompanied by a stamp.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Used in Time Will Save Your Hair

The seeds of baldness are usually planted in the spring time of life. Dr. Sabouraud, the eminent French authority, says that "Baldness, as a chronic malady, is a disease, not of old age, but of youth; in bald old men we simply see the result of a disease that has been slowly doing its work for many years."

Unless checked, this diseased condition, manifested by the accumulation known as dandruff, gets worse, kills the hair, the hair comes out.

Why delay? Why experiment? NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE has saved thousands from loss of hair and baldness. It will do it for you.

HERPICIDE eradicates dandruff, destroys the cause of the disease and prevents the hair from falling out.

A SINGLE TRIAL WILL CONVINCE YOU

You will be entirely satisfied with the merits of HERPICIDE after the first application. The scalp will be clean and healthy, the hair soft, light and fluffy. HERPICIDE is a most delightful hair dressing and its odor exquisite. It stops itching instantly.

What is the 7th Point?

From Maine to California, from Texas to Hudson Bay, millions of people have been asking "What is the 7th Point in Sterling Gum?"

In practically every town, city and village in the United States and Canada, the published six points of superiority have brought Sterling Gum fast-growing popularity.

But the seventh point still remains a riddle.

Point ⑦ What?

Now, we are offering liberal prizes to those who send us the best suggestions for the Sterling Gum Point 7.

The Following Story Unfolds the Secret of the Famous Point 7

To most people chewing gum is a mystery. They may know that different chewing gums are made from different ingredients. But that is about all. Here are facts which we believe you will be glad to know about Sterling Gum:

Your Sterling Gum is made from the following materials:

The basis is the pure sap of the tropical Sapota Tree—a natural gum.

This natural Sapota Tree sap is boiled, sweetened and flavored. The sweetening is simply pure cane sugar and pure corn syrup.

The flavoring is of two kinds—Peppermint (in red wrappers), Cinnamon (in blue wrappers).

There are some twenty varieties of the mint plant. The Sterling Peppermint is a product of the choicest, smoothest-flavored of these many mint varieties.

The spicy Cinnamon flavor is extracted from the Cassia bush which grows in the tropics.

The sap of the Sapota Tree, the cane sugar, the corn syrup, the Peppermint and Cinnamon flavors all come from the sap of some plant or tree. Nature herself supplies these delicious materials from which your Sterling Gum is made.

Requirements for Winning Phrase

When you read the above facts on the materials that Sterling Gum is made of, you will know all that it is necessary for you to know in entering this contest.

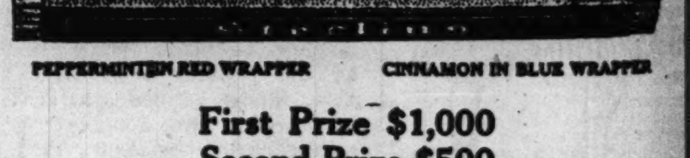
The first prize will go to the one whose suggestion, based on the above story, most impressively presents the natural purity of Sterling Gum—in the opinion of the judges.

Remember that your suggestion must be in six words or less.

The next best suggestion will win the second prize—and so on down.

It is understood that the Sterling Gum Company will have the right to use the 7 Point suggestions sent in by the prize winners.

The contest is easy to enter. Just think out your way of expressing the 7th Point. Then write it out in six words or less and send it in as directed in the conditions printed below. Even if you don't win the first prize of $1,000, you stand a chance to win one of the 7,777 smaller prizes.



PEPPERMINT IN RED WRAPPER CINNAMON IN BLUE WRAPPER

First Prize $1,000
Second Prize $500

Third Prize . . $250.00
7 Prizes—each . . $25.00
70 Prizes—each $2.50
700 Prizes—each . Box of 20 five-cent packages of Sterling Gum.
7000 Prizes—each . Box of 10 five-cent packages of Sterling Gum.

Conditions of the Contest

Sterling Gum Company employees cannot enter this contest.

If two answers are entitled to the same prize, the full amount of the prize will be paid to each.

All answers must come in on a postal card. On the back of the postal card write nothing but your 7 Point suggestion (six words or less) and your name and address. The postal may be mailed in an envelope if you choose.

Mail answers to Sterling Prize Judges
Room 319, 405 Lexington Ave.
New York City

You may send in as many suggestions for Point 7 as you choose. But each suggestion must be written on a postal card as directed above.

Contest Closes

All answers must be received in New York by midnight of May 15, 1916.

Answers will not be examined by the judges until after that date. The judges, therefore, cannot mail acknowledgments of the suggestions received.

Judges

The prizes will be awarded by the following committee of five well-known men:

John A. Sleicher, Editor of Leslie's Weekly.
Edgar Sisson, Editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.
Jno. M. Siddall, Editor of The American Magazine.
Frederick L. Collins, Editor of McClure's Magazine.
Robert H. Davis, Editor of Munsey's Magazine.

Announcement of Awards

The winners of the first 80 prizes will be announced in the July first issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Please do not write to the judges. They cannot correspond with individual contestants. Just make a note now of the date on which the prize winners will be announced in the Saturday Evening Post.

Now put on your thinking cap. Get your family to help you. Send in as many suggestions as you want to. All will be considered in awarding these many prizes. Do not write the Sterling Gum Company regarding the contest or its conditions as all suggestions will be judged by the Prize Committee named above.

Procedure at Weddings.

THROUGH an error last week this department was made to say that a woman making or returning a first call on a married woman should leave one of her husband's cards. This should have read "two" instead of "one."

The spring season is apt to be chosen by brides for the celebration of their marriages, and many are the questions directed to this department as to the various details of such a ceremony.

The bride's parents or nearest relatives should give the wedding, providing the carriages or motors to take the bride and her bridesmaids to and from the church (if it is a church wedding) and furnishing the reception, or breakfast, or supper after the ceremony. The bridegroom should send the bridal bouquets to the bride and her attendants. He should also send a conveyance to bring the minister to the church or house and he pays the clergyman for his services.

The bride should advance up the church aisle, or through the rooms (if it's a house wedding), on the right arm of her father, or brother, if she have no father. She stands, however, on the bridegroom's left until they turn after the ceremony to face the congregation or company, when the turning brings her on the bridegroom's right.

The bridal procession to the altar should be headed by the ushers, walking two and two, followed by the bridesmaids, walking in the same way. If there is a maid or matron of honor she walks alone immediately ahead of the bride.

The bridegroom and his best man accompany the officiating clergyman to the altar and there await the bride and her escort.

If it is a house wedding the bridal couple usually remain standing where they were married and receive the congratulations of the company. If it is a church ceremony they go down the aisle arm in arm, followed by the ushers and bridesmaids, usually walking together, the best man escorting the maid of honor and the other ushers walking each with a bridesmaid. The parents and family follow, the rest of the assemblage waiting until they get out of the church.

This, in brief, is the usual procedure at a wedding today.

I. F.: I think that in introducing a lad of 16 to a girl younger than that it is better to omit the formal Mr. and Miss and say simply, "Mary, I want to introduce to you John ——." Then turn to him and say, "This is my friend, Mary ——."

* *

MRS. J. A.: I do not believe your friend intended any slight in not introducing you to the acquaintance she met by chance in an elevator while with you. It is rather better form not to introduce two people who meet thus casually and for only a few seconds in a public place.

* *

JACK: It would be a mistake to send a piece of jewelry or any other gift of intrinsic value to a young woman. Books, flowers, candy, or even a photograph or a fine picture are permissible, but nothing else.

* *

T. H.: If a young man invites you to go to the theater with him let him make the arrangements. Don't suggest what the play shall be or anything about supper afterwards unless he asks you to do so.

* *

FRANK: It would have been a courteous thing had you offered to escort to the party the young woman whose accompaniments you played. But not to do so was not a serious omission.

* *

E. R. H.: Until you are legally separated from your husband I should in your place make no change in signing my name and my calling cards. Afterward keep your title "Mrs." and have you calling cards read "Mrs. Ellen R." or the full second name, with your married name unless you get from the court the right to drop that and resume your father's surname. But this is seldom done. There doesn't seem to be any reason why you shouldn't chaperon an informal dance nor why a partner should not be provided for you. But there is no time in life when a woman needs to be so circumspect and dignified as when she is in a situation like yours.

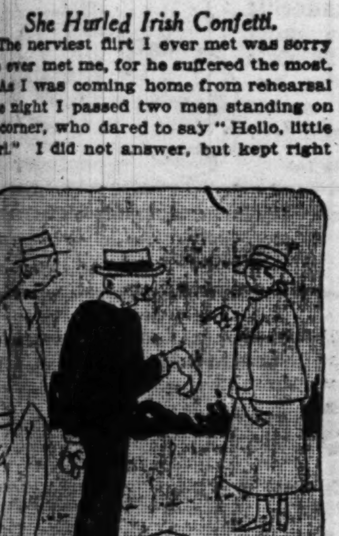
Have You Met a Nervy Flirt?

Who was the nerviest flirt you ever met? What did he say? And what did you say? Was the incident funny or otherwise? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of page only. No manuscripts returned. Address Nervy Flirt Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

She Hurled Irish Confetti.

The nerviest flirt I ever met was sorry he ever met me, for he suffered the most.

As I was coming home from rehearsal one night I passed two men standing on a corner, who dared to say "Hello, little girl." I did not answer, but kept right on going. When a few feet from them they started in my direction, making remarks such as "Ain't you afraid to go home in the dark?" and "Wait and we'll go with you."



I got terribly scared, for there wasn't a light in the block. As I passed a house that was being repaired I picked up a half brick and after they had gained all but about ten feet I threw the brick with all my might.

Then I heard one exclaim: "Great guns! My wrist is broken." I gained my nerve and said: "Yes, and if you want the other one broken just follow me again." The next day on my way to work I met the flirt with his arm in a sling and he didn't attempt to say "Hello, sweetheart."

What He Wanted He Took.

I was making a twenty-four hours' trip by myself and, becoming lonely, I accepted the kindly (as I thought) offer of a newspaper from a man across the aisle of the train. He seemed very nice, and before long we were deep in conversation, discovering some mutual acquaintances, sincere on my part, bogus on his, as I afterward found out.

Arrived at our destination, my new friend piloted me to the rear of the Pullman, and I never noticed everybody going out the other end. When we were in the vestibule he grabbed me in his arms, kissed me repeatedly, discovered to his dismay the locked door, turned me around, walked through the car, and delivered me into my waiting uncle's care, quite as if he had done me a great favor.

I was too scared to talk, and never told my relatives—but can you beat it for nerve?

MISS W. W. A.

Adele, His Sweet Adele.

One evening while conversing over the telephone a fresh young man got in line some way or other. He listened for a while to our conversation and learned that my first name was Adele. He then called me back about fifteen minutes later and I, supposing he was somebody else, made an engagement for that evening. I asked him if he was a certain party by the name of Walsh. He said yes.

He came up to the house at 8. I answered the door bell, but the man at the door seemed to be a perfect stranger. I then asked him who he wanted to see. He said "Adele," which of course happened to be me. I then told him I didn't know who he was, so he told me he was the young man (about 50 I should judge) that I was speaking to over the telephone.

I then told him I had an engagement and was going to my aunt's, so he wanted to escort me, and I refused. I told him that if I wanted an escort I would take my grandfather along, he was still alive.

Is Philadelphia Slow?

The nerviest flirt? Well, my experience was funny. Some years ago in an elevated train in Philadelphia I found my attention drawn to a man who sat opposite me because of his glance riveted on me in a sort of inspection. I took a look at myself in a tiny mirror above his head, thinking I had something on my face that was drawing attention.

Then my glance fell to him and he "grinned"—and such a grin I've only seen that one time. It caused me to smile by its ridiculousness. Then he grinned more, until finally to save myself from laughing aloud I crose and sat on the same side of the car as he was to avoid looking at him or him at me.

He kept watching me, and finally, as I rose to leave the car, he followed. I entered the subway of a store, he at my heels. Finally as I paused before an elevator he came up and said "Good afternoon, sweetheart." I wanted to laugh at his audacity, but, inclining my head, remarked: "Excuse me, but I've never met you." "But," he replied, "you looked and smiled at me."

Taking him in from head to foot with one glance, I fired back at him as my elevator appeared: "Can't a woman look at a fool—and laugh at him, too, if she chooses?" As the elevator ascended with me as a passenger he beat a hasty retreat to the subway.

And they call Philadelphia slow!

CHILD GETS SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, liver, bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

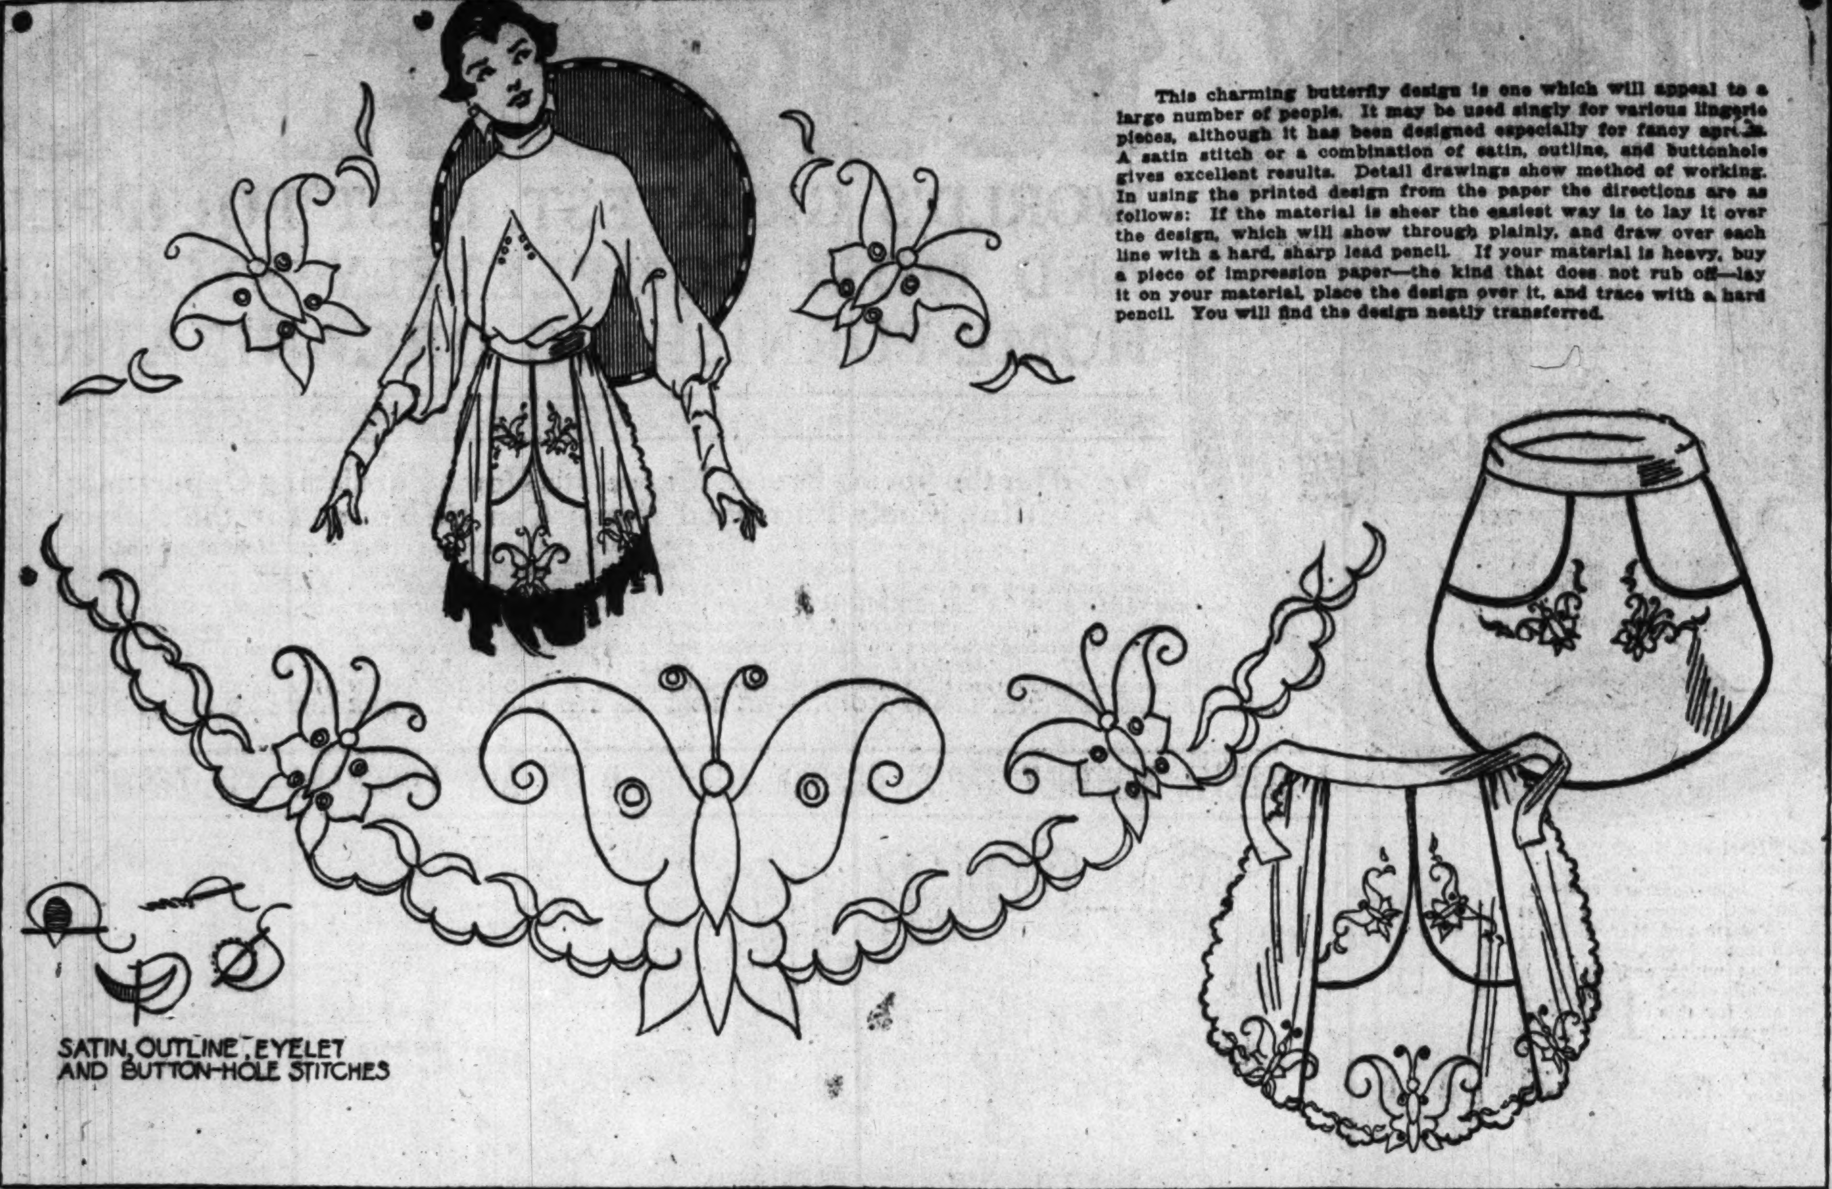
Butterfly Embroidery Design for Fancy Aprons and Lingerie.



This charming butterfly design is one which will appeal to a large number of people. It may be used singly for various lingerie pieces, although it has been designed especially for fancy aprons. A satin stitch or a combination of satin, outline, and buttonhole gives excellent results. Detail drawings show method of working. In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If the material is sheer the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your material is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it on your material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred.

Varied Activities of Women.

There are 9,000,000 unmarried women in the United States.

Mrs. Edith Hatfield of Portland, Ore., owns and operates a large ranch near Eden, Idaho.

Olive Fremstad, the opera singer, is said to have accumulated a fortune from investments made in Minnesota lumber and wheat fields.

Two women doctors from the Shanghai, China, hospital are now in this country studying hospital methods as practiced in the United States.

Miss Esperansa Quesada, a Cuban girl, is the first woman to brave her way across the threshold of the law school in Columbia university.

Selma Lagerlof, the Swedish authoress and only woman to ever receive the Nobel prize for literature, makes nearly as much from her herd of Jersey cows as she does from her books.

There are few women in the ministry, and of the few Mrs. Sarah L. Stoner, pastor of the Universalist church in Eaton, O., is the only one in that state who has built two churches while she acted as minister.

A "Womanly" Way to Remove Hair

Women nowadays remove the hair from their underarms not only to meet the dictates of fashion, but for the cleanliness and comfort of it. Those who shrink from the use of a razor will find the most agreeable way to remove hair from the face, lip, neck, or arms, is with El Rado.

El Rado is a sanitary liquid that practically washes the hair off in a few moments by dissolving it. Easily applied with a piece of absorbent cotton. Does not coarsen later hair growth, and is absolutely harmless. Money-back guarantee. At all toilet counters, 50c and $1.00.

If you prefer, we will gladly fill your order by mail direct, in plain wrapper, if you will write inclosing stamps or coin. Pilgrim Mfg. Co., 14 East 28th Street, New York.

Springtime and the Wonderlift

THE ancient heathen festival, from which our Easter is derived, symbolized renewed hope, revived health and happiness, and a re-awakening to all the joys and beauties of life.

Apart from its religious significance, this Spirit of the Springtime touches the heart of nearly every human being, in every land. Like Art, it conveys a message, spoken in a universal language, that appeals to every race, sect and creed. It gives promise of something better—of release from things that worry or oppress; of a revival of all that is beautiful, healthful and good.

Somewhat analagous—more practical, though not without sentiment—is the message of the "Self-Help" Nemo Wonderlift Corset.

This message shows how the figure Nature has given you can be beautified by the development of graceful and symmetrical lines.

It gives promise of better health, which means better looks and greater happiness.

It renews hope in the hearts of the host of women whose aches and pains this remarkable corset will relieve and often cure—and better yet, will surely prevent.

This message of the Wonderlift can be understood by all women. Its appeal is universal. It tells of the beautiful and the helpful. Its promise will be made good.

"Self-Help" Nemo Wonderlift Corsets are now sold in most good stores and shops. Models to suit every figure—even extremes of slender and stout. The prices are $5, $7.50, and $10.

Professional Jealousy.

My brother and I did a riding act with a circus. He was injured by a fall and was unable to ride for the remainder of the season. In order to carry out my part of the contract I joined my act with another equestrian. During the applause which always came at the end of our act he would say: "Little girl, that all belongs to you." We were married at the close of the season and while taking our applause at the end of our first performance the following season he said: "Good-niht! You act like you were doing a single and all this was meant for you alone." G. E. R.

Too Quiet Around the House.

One day before our marriage my fiancé and I were looking at apartments, when he exclaimed, "It doesn't make any difference about the flat, dear, I could live with you in a graveyard.

Upon returning from work some time later, after our marriage, he grumbled, "For heaven's sake, why don't you get a little pep? This is the deadest place I was ever in."

How changeable are men!

Wife Lucky; Husband Tells Why.

Must one be disillusioned after marriage? Surely not. As a girl of 16 I had for three years a most devoted sweetheart, married him at 19, and here at 35 am the happiest woman I know, with two dandy big sons to love me, too. And through it all I have my lover husband more devoted than ever as the years roll by.

In all these years there have been just two Saturdays my candy was not brought me, and good reasons those two times. Every birthday, betrothal, and wedding anniversary remembered, and also our boys' birthdays. I receive more than they with the love that will last through the ages.

I am the luckiest woman I know, but my husband reading over my shoulder says: Just add to that story that I never saw you anything but neat and dainty—that you never came to the table in a kimono, that I never saw your hair in curlers, but always combed properly; and, too, that as well as a glorious wife you are a dandy "pal."

So there you are, and we will not be disillusioned, for it isn't necessary.

His Company Manners.

Before marriage he had always been so courteous, but one evening at some crush affair he stepped backward a few steps and accidentally trod on my toes. He turned about quickly, with the most apologetic air, and began to beg pardon, but, seeing whose toes he had trod upon, simply said, "O, it's you, is it?" and stopped short off. R. B. M.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

25 cent bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and luster, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when, you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp. Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Advertisement.

Don't Use Dangerous Antiseptic Tablets

It is an unnecessary risk. Fried Fish and Sauces.

PROBABLY the most universal and successful method or principle in the cooking of fish involves the perfect retention of its juices. These juices are not so laden with extractives or waste as those of meats and, therefore, less definite in flavor and less of a stimulant, as well as more safe as food. The thing that makes fish unsafe is that it so quickly deteriorates.

We may state it as a general rule, to which there are few exceptions, that the more water a food contains the more care is required in cooking it so that this water shall not escape. In fish the watery part constitutes much of the thing called quality.

Notice what the proportion of water is in the edible portion of the following fish—this means in the boned and skinned fish. Flounder is over 84 per cent water; haddock, almost 82; halibut steak, 75; herring, 72; mackerel, 73; perch, 79; cod steaks are almost 80 per cent water, but salt cod is about 55 per cent, 25 per cent being dried out in the curing. Canned fish has as much or a little more water than the edible part of the same fish when fresh. Even so fat a fish as salmon has almost 65 per cent of water. Mackerel is fat, but it has over 73 per cent of water.

How shall we preserve this water? Whitefish baked in a paper bag is superior to the same fish baked in a pan, even though almost smothered in fat or cut vegetables, when cooked in this latter fashion. The best shad I ever tasted was baked in a mound of coarse salt which covered the fish completely, but did not make it salt. Care must be exercised in taking this from the oven not to inhale the fumes. I have been told that when coal stoves with deep fire boxes were used, a Jewish method was to wrap a fish to be baked in a heavy brown paper and put it in the ashes under hot coals to cook. The Jewish people know how to handle and cook fish to perfection.

All good frying methods are such as to preserve the juices of the fish, that is, the fish are dipped in a frying batter or in milk and flour or in cornmeal, or in egg and crumbs. These materials cook almost instantly enough to form a coating which not only prevents the escape of water but the absorption of fat. People of delicate digestions do not eat this crust, especially if it has been blackened in the cooking, when it becomes unsafe and the fish less digestible.

In countries where fish are eaten every day in the year, and sometimes three times a day, and practically all the fish that swim in the sea are used, whether with scales or without, whether with spines or shell, or tenticles instead of fins, they fry fish interminably and always well. Perhaps frying is also the best for fish that are not immediately from the water, which they need to be for the finest fish stews of the many national sorts.

Fried fish may be garnished in some hundreds of ways, and some small bit—a tablespoon or so—of piquant sauce is always a great addition, because it has so much flavor and the fish so little. Lacking materials for a fresh sauce, a chili sauce will do, since tomato enters agreeably into a large number of fish sauces. There is another sauce on the market like the chili which costs about 25 cents a small cup. A good way to make this go farther, have it hot and much milder as to acid content, is to fry gently a chopped shallot in butter, without browning it, then to add a few tablespoons of the sauce and cook and stir together for five minutes and serve, or it may be thinned with some hot meat or fish stock to make it go still farther. Other sauces may be freshened and made less acid in the same way with no loss, but real gain in flavor.

The sole is one of the elegant fish of European tables. Escoffier gives some fifty or sixty different recipes for preparing it. One great gourmet says that every cook in France has invented some particularly delicate variety of filet of sole. And we who have the same fish in our flounder have few recipes for cooking it outside of Filippini's book, which has many.

The best flounder to handle is, perhaps, one that weighs about three pounds. An old fish dealer says bone, but do not skin, yet the fillets are so dainty without the skin that almost any one will be tempted to remove it for fine cookery. However, it is not a pleasant task when one is not handling fish every day, as I know all too well from recent experiences. It takes patience and perseverance to remove the skin, but when it is done and the fish is fried you are rewarded, for what other fried fish is its equal?

Fried Flounder.

If you skin the fish first, cut around the head, and then raising the edge of the skin with a pointed knife, pulling up with the back to start it, hold skin with cloth and remove. If you want to take off the fillets and then skin afterwards, which is perhaps the easier way, cut down the median line on each side of the bone, lift off the flesh on both sides the cut, and if of three pound size cut each diagonally across into three pieces. If you are not going to skin these pieces, the skin should have been scraped before the fillets were removed. Dipped in milk and well seasoned flour and gently fried in butter to a delicate brown, about five minutes to a side, this is superior to most fried fish because of its flavor. It is good without any sauce, but strong sauces are often served with it. Egg and bread crumbs of finely grated crust are considered superior to milk and flour by some. This is the easiest way to prepare sole or flounder and it may be almost infinitely elaborated.

Shallots for Sauces.

The shallot, or most mild flavored of onions, is almost essential for fish sauces and for flavoring delicate things like mushrooms. At this time of year this costs 20 cents a pint at the seed store, but in the fall the grocers sometimes have shallots at 1 cent a pound. The bulb usually consists of parts like the garlic, although often not more than two pieces, each with a complete skin and flattened one against the other, but sometimes the inner part is much divided by nature.

One tablespoon of chopped shallot enters into no end of recipes for sauces, stews, and what are called little farcis, which are little minces to spread over fillets of fish before they are fried or baked. Shallot vinegar for flavoring cold sauces, such as mayonnaise, is made by bruising five or six ounces of peeled shallots and pouring over them a quart of vinegar. The bottle is tightly stopped, and after three weeks the vinegar is drained off, or it may stand longer. Garlic vinegar is made in the same way.

Tomato Mousse.

Pour one cup of water over one good tablespoon of vegetable gelatine and allow to stand for twenty minutes. Drain and cook the gelatine for eight minutes or so, or until the flakes completely dissolve, and add to one cup of stewed tomatoes and a tablespoon of butter and cook together for five minutes. Strain and cool. Whip one-half cup of cream and when the tomato is nearly cool and not yet stiff add the cream to it, mixing the two thoroughly. To emphasize the flavor add a little lemon juice and a bit of cayenne, with salt to taste. Pack like any mousse in one measure of salt to one of ice and let stand two or three hours. The cream must not be whipped till dry, and the amateur would best use a double amount of gelatine, perhaps, although this will stiffen the tomato to a good jelly consistency. Cold fish may be built around a mold of this mousse with a garnish of cress, etc.

Fried Tile Fish.

Fried tile fish to my mind is much superior to this fish broiled, although in my experiments I marinaded the fish thoroughly before broiling it, and simply dipped the slices in seasoned flour and fried them gently for about six minutes to a side. It is hard to broil this fish without drying it too much. The cold fried tile fish is good for salads.

Duxelle or Minced Mushrooms.

Two shallots chopped, or one tablespoon, two mushrooms chopped, or use four tablespoons of the stems and paring chopped fine, one tablespoon of butter, or half butter and half oil, and a large teaspoon of chopped parsley and salt and pepper. Chop the shallot and fry gently for three minutes in the butter, add the mushrooms, and cook until rather dry, then stir in the parsley. This may be spread over stuffed tomatoes, but is dusually added to a white sauce made of stock and thickened with flour and butter and called a Duxelle sauce, which is used with fish, added to tomatoes baked, etc.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

He's Buying the Groceries Now.

They were all gathered around the tea table one Sunday evening, Myrtle, her family, and some friends, and next to Myrtle sat Dick, who had been calling on her for some time. The question of the high cost of living had come up. Myrtle refused several dishes and seemed to be eating little, whereupon Dick, meaning to make the remark quietly, said to Myrtle: "Well, if that's all you eat you wouldn't be hard to support." Intense silence reigned as Myrtle's answer came back like a flash: "Why, you weren't thinking of it, were you?" Under cover of the laughter that followed Dick reached under the table and squeezed her hand. It is needless to say he is now supporting her and lets her eat all she wants to.

By Proxy.

Did a woman ever propose to me? Well, not exactly, but one just as good as did. She was a large, fat, tubby old woman, who, if she ever did enter into matrimony, would certainly have to enter through her own initiative. She ran a boarding house—that is how she made my acquaintance.

It did not take me long to discern that I was the object of her affections, for she gave me the seat at the head of the table, served me first and best, and secretly granted me permission to make irregular visits to the pantry. Every time she passed me she spoke pleasantly to me and made vain attempts to smile.

I lived there for about a year, never once giving her any encouragement toward more than amiable relations. But this apparently did not discourage her, for one night while I was reading in the parlor, quite alone, the maid wandered in and began speaking to me. She was visibly embarrassed and confused, and she glanced frequently toward the heavy curtains adorning one end of the room. After we had discussed the weather a bit, she abruptly changed the subject, saying:

"Don't you think Miss M— is a nice old lady?"

"Why, surely," I replied, puzzled.

"So do I; she's got quite a bit of money, too, I think."

"Has she?"

"Yeh; she seems to like you right well, don't she?"

"Really?" with simulated surprise.

"Sure; I bet she'd marry you if you asked her."

The next morning I left. She was a nice old lady and I felt a little sorry for her—but, no wedding bells for me!

"TIZ" FOR FEET

For Tired Feet, Sore Feet, Tender, Aching, Swollen Calloused Feet and Painful Corns

"Can't beat 'Tiz' for aching, swollen feet. Don't stay footsick!"

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel.—Advertisement.

An Ideal Remedy for Nursing Mothers

Compound of Simple Laxative Herbs Safe for Baby and Mother.

Constipation is a condition that affects the old, young and middle-aged, and most people at one time or another need help in regulating the action of the bowels. Harsh cathartics and purgatives should not be employed to relieve constipation, as their effect is only temporary while they shock the system unnecessarily.

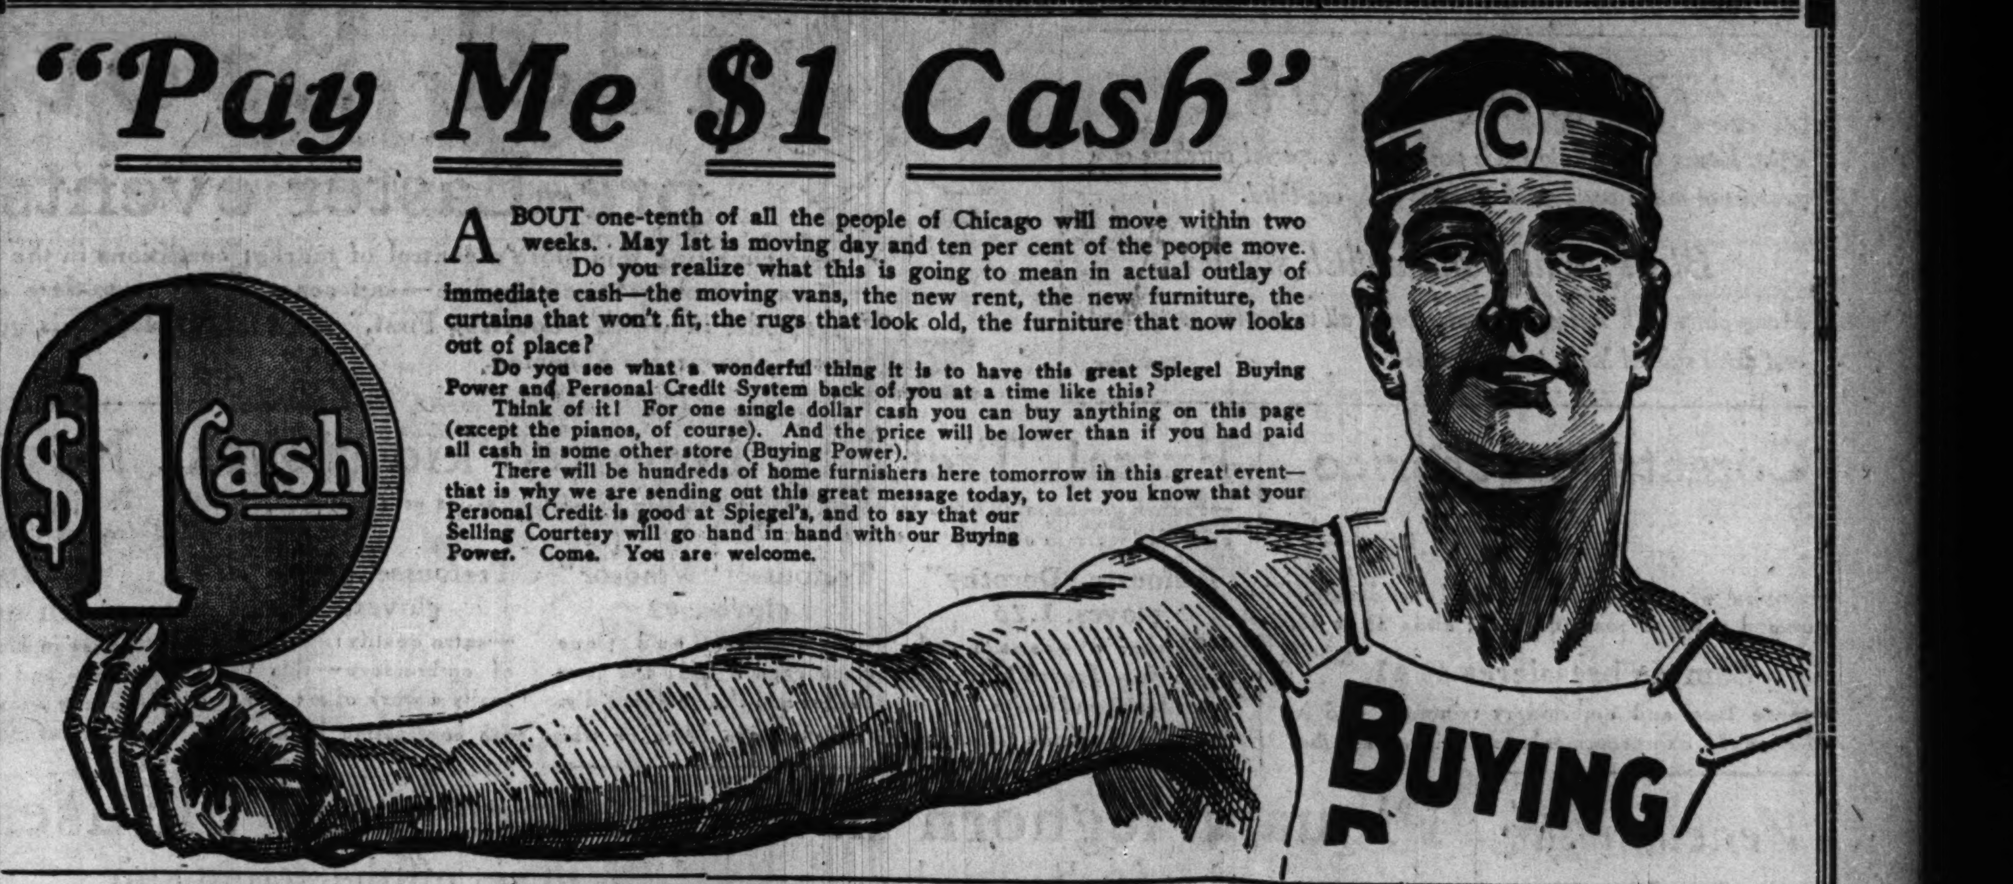
A remedy that can be used with perfect safety for the tiniest babe, and that is equally effective for the strongest constitution, is found in the combination of simple laxative herbs known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and sold in drug stores everywhere for fifty cents a bottle. This is an ideal household remedy and should be in every family medicine chest.

Mrs. F. L. Barsolow, 18 Leslie St., Holyoke, Mass., wrote to Dr. Caldwell, "Syrup Pepsin certainly is fine. I gave it to my baby, Evelyn, and also took it myself. It is the only medicine I have been able to take without affecting Baby in the nursing. I have used it for all four children, and it is fine; they like it and ask for it.

EVELYN BARSOLOW

A trial bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be obtained, free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for whom this advertisement is published.

"Pay Me $1 Cash"



ABOUT one-tenth of all the people of Chicago will move within two weeks. May 1st is moving day and ten per cent of the people move.

Do you realize what this is going to mean in actual outlay of immediate cash—the moving vans, the new rent, the new furniture, the curtains that won't fit, the rugs that look old, the furniture that now looks out of place?

Do you see what a wonderful thing it is to have this great Spiegel Buying Power and Personal Credit System back of you at a time like this?

Think of it! For one single dollar cash you can buy anything on this page (except the pianos, of course). And the price will be lower than if you had paid all cash in some other store (Buying Power).

There will be hundreds of home furnishers here tomorrow in this great event—that is why we are sending out this great message today, to let you know that your Personal Credit is good at Spiegel's, and to say that our Selling Courtesy will go hand in hand with our Buying Power. Come. You are welcome.

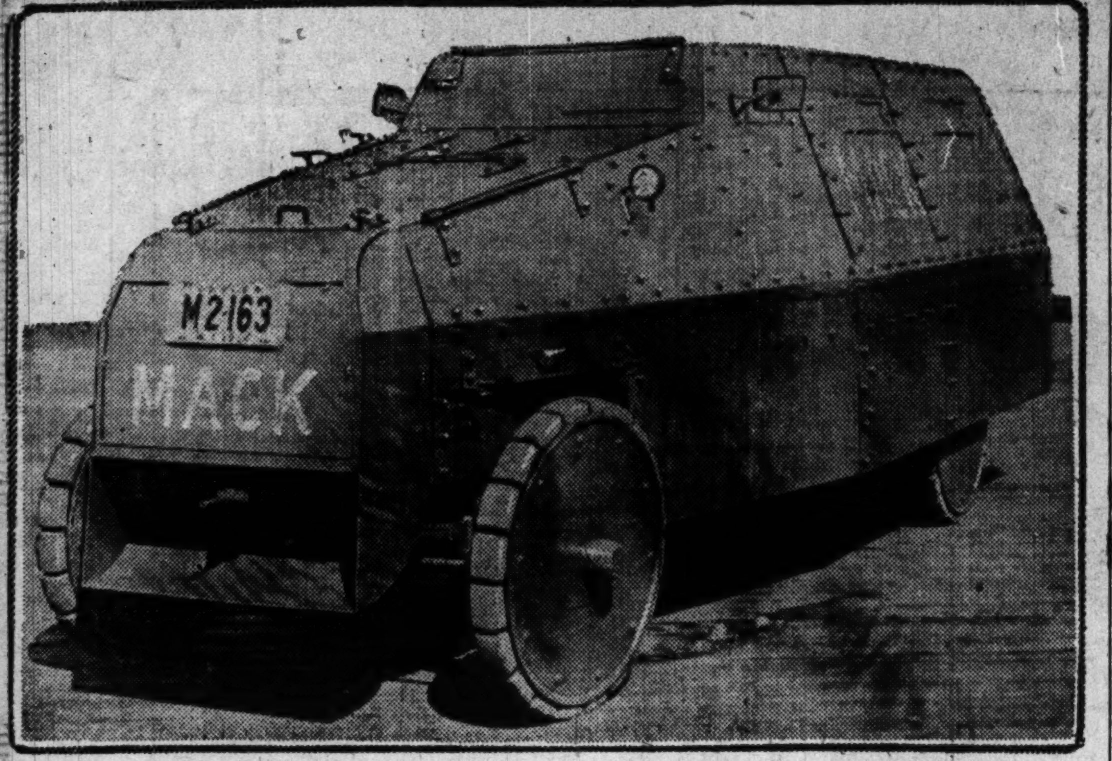
Forty Armored Cars for New York Militia.



THE first armored car battery in the United States was formed this month in New York City, as a special organization under the direction of the New York national guard, utilizing the experience gained in the European war.

The organization was rendered possible by the presentation of forty armored cars to the state by several men prominent in finance and industry, who have taken a leading part in the preparedness campaign.

The contributors are E. H. Gary, H. C. Frick, R. M. Thompson, D. Olcott, G. N. Wallace, and H. G. Montgomery.

The first unit to be completed is a Mack as shown in the accompanying illustration. The battery comprises battle cars, fitted with rapid fire guns, anti-aircraft cars, repair cars, tank cars, motorcycles, and auxiliary equipment. The entire organization is modeled closely on existing batteries in the European war, combined with the experiences gained in the national guard maneuvers of last fall in the Plattsburgh camp.

Although so far only ten cars have been placed in actual service, it is the intention of adding the others as soon as sufficient men can be enlisted for their operation. Seventy-five motorcycles are now ready for use in connection with the cars, the whole force being under the command of Capt. Harry C. Montgomery, who has been the most active worker in connection with the organization of this battery.

The chassis are the standard Mack, Jeffery, Riker, and White trucks, which have given excellent service in maneuvers and in actual war service. The bodies, however, are manufactured especially for this work by the International Motor company of New York City.

Lincoln Highway Shortens Memorial Road.

PROBABLY the most popular route for transcontinental automobile travel last season when the world's fairs at San Francisco and San Diego attracted thousands of eastern and middle western motorists to the Pacific coast, the Lincoln highway will offer greater advantages for touring in 1916 than ever before.

This is the announcement of the officers of the Lincoln Highway association who aim to make the memorial road the shortest and best artery of motor travel between the Atlantic and the Pacific. To this end, they not only have improved the roads but in addition have changed the route in several sections to decrease the distance between towns and cities.

The road from Newark, on the west side of the North river, opposite the Forty-second street ferry, New York, to Trenton, on the west side of New Jersey, allowed of practically no shortening. The same was true from Trenton, N. J., across the state of Pennsylvania to the Ohio line near East Liverpool. Practically no shortening has been possible in Ohio, where the route follows substantially market route No. 3, a state highway over 80 per cent hard surfaced from East Liverpool to the Indiana line. In Indiana and Illinois the same situation existed. While a few turns have been eliminated, and the efforts of the people have thus cut a few miles from the total of the transstate distance, the saving has been necessarily small.

It was in Nebraska where the greatest possibilities first presented themselves, and the county authorities there have been accomplishing excellent work along the line of an efficient transtate road. The Lincoln highway as originally routed across Nebraska followed as nearly as possible the line of the Union Pacific, which, of course, was laid out in as direct a manner as possible but there were many difficulties in the way of routing the Lincoln highway to be as short as the Union Pacific mileage. There were questions of an intricate legal nature as to the possibility of building a road on the Union Pacific right of way across that state. This constant jogging added greatly to the mileage. However the Union Pacific Railroad company has coöperated with the association and with the people of Nebraska in an effort to shorten the Lincoln highway, and the county officials and the company have worked together in an effort to reduce the number of grade crossings and to accomplish the transference of the Lincoln highway to its permanent position paralleling the tracks of the Union Pacific and on one side of the tracks as far as possible.

To this end the Union Pacific Railroad company made an offer to the counties of the state of Nebraska, agreeing to allow them the privilege of laying out and building a permanent road on the outer 50 feet of their right of way on the north side of the tracks at a small nominal rental per year.

In Dawson county shortening of the route amounting to over six miles has been possible by the elimination of the jogs caused by following section lines, and by the acceptance of the Union Pacific's offer. The efficiency of the route in Dawson county has been increased by this move to as near 100 per cent efficiency as it is humanly practical to proceed.

Other counties in Nebraska are rapidly following the lead of Dawson county and undoubtedly the efficiency of the route across the state can be increased by 10 or 15 per cent during the next two or three years.

The state of Wyoming also has done much toward reaching the ultimate of road efficiency on its section of the transcontinental route. Great coöperation has been extended by the state in prohibiting and fencing off of the natural contour route across the state by settlers. This practice at one time threatened to constantly increase the mileage and decrease the efficiency of the route by causing jogs around fenced-in land which encroached on the natural rights of way. The effort has been to maintain open for all time the natural, direct, short route, without forcing the traveler to the necessity of following around section lines fences.

The problem of obtaining and efficient transtate road in Utah has been a difficult one, and the original route of the Lincoln highway across that state, as it stands at present, was, in the light of careful investigation, the best possible road from the Wyoming line near Evanston to the Nevada line near Ibapah, Utah. This road, as originally laid out and logged by the speedometer, is of an approximate distance of 271. A road of 100 per cent efficiency between the two points named would be about 175 miles. Of course, anything approaching the possible efficiency of the route in the flat, level country of the east and middle west is impossible in northern Utah, because of its excessively rugged, mountainous character

The situation in laying out an efficiency route across the state of Nevada is not as complex as that encountered in Utah, the character of the country being generally flat entirely across the state to the foothills of the Sierras on the western state lines, and the problems of the association and of the people of the state in the matter of shortening the present official Lincoln highway from Ely to Rero are not great, and can be handled without difficulty. The route across the state is now on the map practically a straight line, and the question of eliminating curves is being rapidly and satisfactorily taken care of by the local communities.

Pacific Northwest Auto Meet Carded.

STARTING Memorial day and lasting until the first of October, the Pacific northwest will be the scene of several automobile race meets. The circuit, as arranged to date, is as follows:

May 30—Races for amateur drivers at Tacoma speedway.

July 4—Dirt track meet at Cœur d'Alene; purses, $2,000.

July 15—North Yakima dirt track meet; purses, $1,000.

Aug. 12—Portland dirt track meet; purses, $1,500.

Aug. 5—Montmarathon trophy race, Tacoma speedway; purse, $10,000.

Sept. 4-5—Spokane dirt track meet; purses, $2,000.

Sept. 18—Washington state fair meet.

Sept. 25-26-27—Montana state fair meet.

Other meets for that section of the country now are being planned for the 1916 season and the races should be particularly attractive to the drivers, who are not campaigning on the speedway circuit on the eastern side of the Rocky mountains.

The dirt tracks at Cœur d'Alene, North Yakima, and Portland are the best mile courses in the Pacific northwest. All meets will be run under the sanctions of the contest board of the American Automobile association.

MOTORIST'S CALENDAR for April

[All events of interest to motorists will be listed in the Motorists' Calendar if the automobile editor of "The Tribune" is notified.]

April 19—Weekly luncheon, Chicago Automobile Trade association, Hotel Metropole.

April 23—Practice for amateur drivers' race, Chicago speedway.

April 23—One hundred mile dirt track race, Bakersfield, Cal.

April 26—Weekly luncheon, Chicago Automobile Trade association, Hotel Metropole.

April 26—Easter ball, Chicago Automobile club.

April 29—Three hundred mile road race, Fresno, Cal.

April 30—Practice for amateur drivers' race, Chicago speedway.

Saxons Play Part in Chase of Villa

SAXON motor cars are playing a part in the chase of the United States troops after Pancho Villa, bandit and Mexican revolution leader.

Just as the sturdy race which gave them their name always played a prominent part in the warfare of the British Isles and the northern part of Europe, so are the motor cars giving their best to the service of Uncle Sam along the sluggish Rio Grande. At El Paso, Tex., where a large number of troops have been stationed since the border mobilization in 1913, three Saxon cars were sold to United States army officers before the pursuit of Villa and they were used by the officers for trips about the border.

First Lieut. Guy H. Wyman of the Eighth cavalry is the owner of a Saxon six and Second Lieuts. Welton M. Modisette and William A. Robarg of the Fifteenth cavalry both have Saxon four roadsters.

When the United States decided to enter Mexico in pursuit of Villa and the border was thrown into a fever of excitement, these three officers found a practical use for their motor cars in patrol duty and messenger service in and about El Paso. The cars were pressed into service because they covered ground faster than a horse and because the sand and mesquite of the border country offered no obstruction to them.

At the same time F. O. Cavin, Saxon dealer at El Paso, placed three other machines at the service of the government. He took cars from his stock for this purpose and offered them to the army officers. The cars which were loaned to the army were all sixes and they have found a ready use in the quartermaster corps. One of them is being used daily by a major of that department and it has traveled hundreds of miles in the last two weeks.

Exhaust Echoes

E. A. Williams Jr., president of the Garford Motor Truck company, has just received a report of an overland delivery of a truck by his San Francisco branch which, from the standpoint of hardship and thrilling details, rivals the most stirring experiences of the early western pioneers. Three men were assigned by the San Francisco office to take the truck overland from Ludlow, Cal., to the lead mines in the heart of the Panamint mountains, 150 miles due north. It was necessary to travel 800 miles through driving rain and flooded districts, over mountain tops, and across Death valley.

Despite the restrictions that the British government has placed upon the automobile business, there are still many cars being sold in England, and Dodge cars rank among the leaders. The war has made so many demands on the young men, however, that there are few automobile salesmen left. This has opened a new field for young women and there are a number of them engaged in demonstrating and selling cars. Miss Dorothy Stone has been appointed by Charles Jarrot & Letts, Ltd., in association with Thrupp & Maberly, Ltd., to demonstrate the Dodge car and at the same time serve a patriotic purpose by taking a man's place so that he might fight for his country.

"The cost of gasoline is one of the less important items to the prospective purchaser of an automobile whose aim is economy. This is the opinion of one of the most prominent manufacturers of automobiles in the world. He bases his argument on the declaration that the modern car of today is so complete in its equipment and so reduced in its price that these features entirely offset any increase in gasoline cost which has developed or may develop. "The automobile buyer would ease his mind materially about gasoline prices by taking into consideration other features involved in the purchase of the modern car," said John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, recently. "Every automobile owner is getting more value for his money in the automobile market today than ever before."

In the European war has been seen the need of a light car. The heavy cars in the war zone have been found wanting. They have gone to pieces over the heavy roads and over those battlefields where roads have been second consideration. The light weight, well balanced cars have skipped easily over the rumpled map of Europe, performing their duties with such brilliant effect that there is now no room for doubt that the day of the heavy car is past. It has been for this reason that the Marmon 34 is urged as a car of size, speed, and durability, based on the constructive superiority of Lynite aluminum which holds sway in both motor and body of the new Marmon.

No product of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer corporation of Chicago appears to have proved more popular with the public in general than the model 100 magnetic type speedometer built especially for Ford, Saxon, and Chevrolet cars. The fact that the instrument was low in price and at the same time absolutely accurate in its workings seems to have immediately put this special Stewart speedometer in a class by itself.

Following the recent announcement of a $404 raise in the price of Chalmers six-thirty touring cars officials of the Chalmers company have given figures indicating the greatest year's business in the history of the company. "During the twenty-seven working days of March we shipped cars valued at $8,865,000," said Paul Smith, vice president in charge of the selling division. "On March 31 cars valued at close to $800,000 were shipped, marking the largest single day's shipment of cars since the organization of the company. We have established new production and sales records in the last three months and the Chalmers plant is on a day and night schedule. The biggest year in the Chalmers history is already an assured fact." Prediction of higher prices made by Hugh Chalmers at the Chicago automobile show in January have been fulfilled by the raise in price of Chalmers six-thirty models, effective April 15; the touring car price has been increased from $1,050 to $1,090, the cabriolet from $1,400 to $1,440, and the roadster from $1,050 to $1,070.

Effective May 1, the price of the model 33 Winton six will be increased 8¾ per cent. This is an advance of $200 and will bring the price of the five passenger car to $2,485 f. o. b. Cleveland. The cause of the increase is the advanced cost of materials and labor.

March broke all production records for the Ford Motor company, with an output of 58,329 cars. Also, March 25 saw the biggest day's production in the history of the company, 2,768 cars being built on that day. When the Ford company, in August, 1915, launched into a production of 500,000 cars for the coming twelve months, an epoch in the automobile industry was marked. The contemplated output of the Ford factory represented a volume of motor cars equal to 30 per cent of all the automobiles in use at the time the announcement of the proposed production was made. In the eight months of the 1915-16 manufacturing year since August last the demand for Ford cars has more than kept pace with production, and for the last several months the company has found itself confronted with the same situation which has existed in previous years—the demand continually ahead of productions. A production of 500,000 cars this year will bring the totals of Fords in use on Aug. 1, 1916, up beyond the 1,500,000 mark. Ford cars in operation today generate more horsepower than is represented by the total number of horses of all descriptions in use in this country, according to the United States government reports. The quantity of material entering into the manufacture of 58,329 cars reaches figures which are astonishing to the uninitiated. Four and one-half carloads of spark plugs are used in this output. In the body tops are 6,500,000 square feet of rubber cloth material, while 6,750,000 feet of copper tubing enter into the construction of the radiators.

Speaking of the effect of the European war on the supply of automobile material in this country, E. E. Allyne, president of the Aluminum Castings company, says that the war has taken all of the European supply of aluminum while at the same time the demand for light, efficient cars in America has made the use of aluminum here essential. Mr. Allyne remarks that formerly America imported from Europe 25 per cent of her aluminum. As soon as the war broke out this supply was cut off. The French equip their soldiers with aluminum mess kits, including plates, cups, knives, and forks. Even the buttons on their uniforms and the soles of their shoes are made from this material. Hundreds of thousands of pounds are used in the manufacture of the fuses for shrapnel, while bullets tipped with aluminum are being manufactured by the billion. Then, too, a large amount is used in the manufacture of the many trucks, automobiles, and aeroplanes. To make up this shortage which the war cut off American manufacturers are working night and day with increased forces, but cannot entirely fill the demand. The Aluminum Castings company is turning out millions of pounds per month of lynite aluminum castings to fill the demands of American car manufacturers, who realize that the public now demand a much lighter car than formerly, yet one which is stronger.

A model motor car manufacturing plant combining all the most modern methods of economical and efficient production is to be erected in Cleveland, O., for the Jordan Motor Car company. The announcement that Cleveland had been selected as the location for the new Jordan factory after twenty different cities had been considered was made by President Barton Little of the Cleveland chamber of commerce. The first building of the group will include 80,000 feet of floor space and will cost about $50,000. It will be situated on a five acre site on One Hundred and Fifty-second street, Cleveland, and will be ready for occupancy June 1. With Edward S. Jordan and Paul Zens, who are the head of the Jordan company, [illegible] leave the Jeffery company, where they held positions for many years, until Jan. 15, they had within sixty days completed their model car, financed their company, and on April 1 ground was broken for the plant. The specifications of the Jordan car will include Continental motors, Brown-Lipe clutches and transmissions, and Timken axles and bearings.

Equip Your FORD

with LYNITE ALUMINIUM PISTONS

They are the greatest engineering improvement of 1916. Their use in the best of the season's high-priced cars proves this.

Put this improvement into your Ford. Enjoy the same smooth, quick, powerful, snappy motor service that these 1916 cars give because of their LYNITE Aluminum Pistons.

LYNITE Pistons weigh two-thirds less than iron pistons. This means great reduction of vibration—less repairs—greater riding comfort—greater speed—more flexibility. They lengthen the life of both motor and car.

He Who Fails to Investigate the Allen Is Satisfied With Less Than His Money Can Buy

Here Is Well Rounded Motor Car Value.

In judging a motor car the sum of the things you want is what you should consider.

Single details are easy of accomplishment. Any manufacturer by lowering his standards in other parts of the car can give a single feature that is not offered by other makers.

But this does not give well-rounded value. It may give extra power, or wheelbase, or some other single feature, but any one of these points unsupported by equal merit in every part is of but little use.

The ALLEN is consistently good. It is not a one-feature car.

The ALLEN has plenty of power, 37 actual horse-power.

It has the comfort of ample leg-room, good upholstering, a perfect spring suspension, and road balance unexcelled.

It has the beauty, style and careful finish that makes the ALLEN owner proud of his car.

Its economy of gasoline and tires pleases the most frugal.

Scrupulous selection of materials assures the Allen owner years of unfailing service.

The financial strength of the Allen makers is a guarantee to the Allen owner that his car will never be an orphan.

THESE POINTS MAKE COMPLETE CAR VALUE AS WE SEE IT.

That is the goal ALLEN designers and engineers have worked for and accomplished. Each ALLEN car in use is a continuous demonstration of this accomplishment.

Through thoroughness and efficient Factory methods, Allen production men have made possible a price of $795 for this consistently good car.

It is a car you will like to ride in. The easy operation and perfect road balance make it possible to relax at the wheel—to sit back and enjoy the ride.

Then, in the city, positive control and flexibility of the ALLEN motor make driving easy and safe.

MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J. C. Burton

Bob Burman's Star Racing Career Was Marked by Few Victories.

AT the round table of the automobile race drivers for whom Death has waved the checkered flag the spirits of David Bruce-Brown, Spencer Wishart, and Harry Grant have made room for another veteran. The wraith of Bob Burman has joined them.

Burman was not a successful driver, if you judge success by the number of victories that a man scores. For he could count his triumphs in blue ribbon events on the fingers of one hand. He was a hero in the eyes of the automobile racing public, however, not because he won, but because he always tried to win, no matter how hopeless and great the odds against.

No more fitting epitaph could be written for Bob Burman than this:

HE WAS GAME.

And I doubt if he would be more pleased with any other.

Had Burman lived, this would have been his eleventh year as an automobile race driver. In ten seasons of campaigning he finished first in only three races of national importance, although his barnstorming record on dirt tracks is a list of time shattering victories. It would require the services of an adding machine to total up his accidents and miraculous escapes from death during that time. Burman seemed to have a penchant for wrecking his cars. He demanded more of steel than steel could give.

If there ever was a red letter day on the calendar for Bob Burman, that day was April 23, 1911, when in a single afternoon he shattered the world's marks for one kilometer, one mile, and two miles with the historic Blitzen-Benz on the Daytona-Ormond beach. His time for these distances is as follows:

One kilometer, 15.88 seconds; one mile, 25.40 seconds; two miles, 51.28 seconds.

Burman reached his highest speed in the one mile trial, his average for that distance being 141.7 miles per hour, a velocity greater than that of a man falling one-half a mile from a balloon. So great was the speed of the car that Bob was driven through the seat cushions from the impact of hitting the tiniest pebble. The wind pressure forced the lens of his goggles out of the steel rims and against his eyes.

"If any one doubts Burman's supreme daring he did not witness the Daytona-Ormond trials," Starter Fred J. Wagner declared in commenting on the dead driver's courage. "After establishing the two mile record he came back to me and said that he was going after the one mile mark. The tires on the Benz were so badly worn that I told him he would have to change casings before I would permit him to continue. I knew that he would be hurled to his death if a tire blew. He cursed me for my attempt to save his life, raving like a madman."

Since that April day five years ago only one man has traveled faster in a motor car than Bob Burman. In December, 1913, Arthur Duray, the French star, covered a kilometer with the three hundred horse power Fiat at Ostend at a speed of 142.2 miles per hour.

In addition to the marks made at Daytona-Ormond Burman is credited with the following records by the contest board of the American Automobile association:

Straightaway free for all—Twenty miles in 13:11.92 and fifty miles in 35:52.31, both made with the Buick Bug at Jacksonville, Fla., in 1911.

Speedway—One-quarter mile in 8.16 seconds and one kilometer in 21.4 seconds, both made at Indianapolis in 1911 with the Blitzen Benz.

Dirt track—Ten miles in 8:16.4, fifteen miles in 12:23.2, twenty miles in 16:25.6, twenty-five miles in 20:28.8, fifty miles in 40:57.8, all made at Bakersfield, Cal., with the Peugeot in 1915, and seventy-five miles in 1:08:56, made at Galesburg, Ill., with the Peugeot in 1914.

Speedway 301-450 stock car—Two hundred and fifty miles 4:38:57.4, made at Indianapolis with the Buick in 1909.

Of his few victories and many record breaking feats Burman was proudest of his earliest achievement, the winning of the twenty-four hour race run at St. Louis on July 4, 1907. He was then a body painter and tester for the Jackson company and worked on his car at night and without pay in order to get it tuned up for the event.

His teammate was a shop superintendent in whom Burman had little confidence. Bob took the car at the start of the race and drove it fourteen hours without relief on a dirt track that was badly cut up. He then turned over his mount to his teammate and after getting something to eat returned to the course. He discovered that the shop superintendent was beating it and fearing that the car would not stand the strain asked the officials to call him in. With only an hour's rest Burman went back behind the wheel and captured the race.

When he returned to the factory the president of the company gave him $25 for the most gruelling twenty-three hours' work that he had ever done. The trophy that Burman had won the head of the Jackson company gave to his son as a wedding present.

"I would rather have that cup than any trophy ever given for a famous speed classic, the Vanderbilt cup and the grand prize included," Burman once told me.

In addition to winning the St. Louis twenty-four hour event Burman has finished first in only two other races of any importance. In 1909 he captured the Vesper club trophy at Lowell and last season, after five years of defeats and bust-ups, annexed first money in the Oklahoma City road race.

He was a challenger for the grand prize in four races. He finished third in 1910 classic with the Buick, but in the other three events, run in 1908, 1909, and 1912, he wrecked his car before the victor thundered over the finishing line.

Burman was a starter in all five of the 500 mile races run at the Indianapolis speedway, but finished inside the money but once. In 1911 his Benz was still running when Harroun got the checkered flag; in 1912 he turned over with the Cutting when in the lead at the end of 312 miles; in 1913 his Keeton was an also ran; in 1914 his Burman Special completed only forty-seven laps, and last year he took sixth money with the Peugeot.

In fact, last year was Burman's most successful season since he first donned the khaki of Mercurian knighthood. His speedway campaign netted him about $10,000, his record being as follows: First in Providence twenty-five mile race, second in Providence and New York 100 mile events, third in Chicago 100 mile challenge contest, fourth in the Tacoma Montamarathon, sixth in the Indianapolis international sweepstakes, and eighth in the Chicago 500 mile motor derby.

Although in his ten years as a race driver he has broken about every part of a motor car and figured in five serious accidents, Burman never sustained a fractured bone until he rode to his death at Corona last week. His worst wrecks are as follows:

1909—San Antonio, turned over on dirt track and was badly bruised.

1912—San Diego, car caught on fire. Burman drove it into Pacific ocean to put out the flames.

Indianapolis, car turned over twice. Burman and his mechanician, Harry Goetz, sustained cuts and bruises.

1915—San Francisco, Vanderbilt cup race. Broke wheel on Case and turned over. Joe Cleary, mechanician, was in hospital three months as result of the accident.

1916—Corona grand prize. Burman and his mechanician, Schrader, killed.

In his ten years of racing, Burman was identified with the following makes of cars: 1906-7, Jackson; 1908-09-10, Buick; 1911, Blitzen Benz; 1912, Cutting; 1913, Keeton; 1914, Burman Special and Peugeot; 1915-16, Peugeot.

Burman not only was a driver but a racing car builder as well. He assisted the factory engineers in making the Cutting and Keeton, designed and built the Burman Special, and has torn down and rebuilt the Blitzen Benz and the Peugeot.

April was Bob Burman's month. It gave him life, fame, victory, and finally death. He was born at Imlay City, Mich., April 24, 1884. He won international fame on April 23, 1911, when he established his world's records in Florida with the Blitzen Benz. After five seasons of continual defeats, he captured his first road race out of twenty-six starts at Oklahoma City on April 2, 1915. He raced with death and lost at Corona on April 8, 1916.

The diamond is the birthstone of April's child. It is a gem that shines from its own, not a reflected, luster. Bob Burman was the diamond in the crown of Mercury, god of speed.

Where Shall We Go Today?

IF today's skies are blue and the sun is flushed with spring fever, thousands of motorists will hear and heed the seductive call of the open road.

For this is the season of the year that each automobile owner quotes the Count of Monte Christo and arrogantly declares: "The world is mine!" He takes as his own the monarchy of all outdoors.

Were I a betting man, I would give odds and wager that hundreds of motorists and motorists' wives this morning will ask the common question, "Where shall we go today?" They will repeat that question next Sunday and the next.

To furnish an answer to this common question is the object of this article, and that of similar articles that will be published in the automobile department of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE each week during the 1916 touring season.

The recommended tour for today is from Chicago to La Porte and return, a distance of approximately 150 miles, via East Chicago, Gary, Michigan City, La Porte, and Valparaiso; from there over the Lincoln highway to Dyer, and thence by way of Hammond and South Chicago home. For the routing we are indebted to the Automobile Blue Book.

For a Sunday tour at this season of the year it is not advisable to attempt any trips off the hard roads, for until the April rains are over and the gravel and dirt roads have had an opportunity of becoming settled they are liable to be quite soft, and in the case of dirt roads the motorist is almost sure to encounter some bad mud holes.

For this reason we suggest the trip to La Porte because it is over macadam roads all the way, most of them in fairly good shape.

Leaving Chicago, follow Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard, then drive east into Washington park, through the Midway into Jackson park, and southeast through the park to the South Shore Country club, going out South Shore boulevard, following trolley line through South Chicago, out Ewing avenue to Indianapolis avenue.

Turn left going through East Chicago and Calumet, follow direct road, gradually curving a little to the south, and eventually coming on to Fifth avenue, Gary, which is followed to center of city, at Broadway, thirty-one miles from Jackson boulevard.

Keep ahead through Gary on Fifth avenue, passing Aetna station. Cross railroad at Miller station and turn immediately to right. From here on to East Gary the road is easy to follow, although winding; but special caution should be used for two bad railroad crossings, where the view is obstructed.

At end of road in East Gary turn east, following stone road with main travel to four corners. Three miles beyond turn left about three-quarters of a mile, and then right one and one-half miles; then left until after crossing the Michigan Central railroad. Turn right along railroad to end of road, where turn to left is made, passing Porter off to right.

Go to first four corners beyond Porter; turn right to end of road, then left half mile, where you turn right again. Just after crossing the second railroad turn left. From here on road has numerous turns, but is macadam all the way direct to Michigan City.

In the center of Michigan City turn right in Michigan street, going straight east out of city on South Bend road for a little over five miles to prominent fork, where you bear right and leave South Bend road. Follow this road direct over slightly rolling country, with some attractive views of small lakes in this region, coming into La Porte via Pine Lake avenue and Madison street direct to center of city.

For return trip go west out of La Porte, following the Lincoln highway markings all the way through Westville to Valparaiso, twenty-three miles.

From this point into Chicago there are two well known options, but we suggest continuing west on the Lincoln highway route. While this is a little narrower route through Hobart, it is, at present, in good shape, and is through a little more attractive country, with only slightly increased mileage.

On the west side of Valparaiso this turns left over railroad bridge, and from there on is direct on good hard road through the quaint village of Deep River, 8.5 miles from Valparaiso.

About ten and one-half miles from Valparaiso, at four corners, it is advisable at this season to turn right with macadam into Ainsworth. Turn left around store, coming back to the straight road one-half mile beyond. The short stretch of dirt on the direct road is liable to be bad at this season. Follow the straight road with macadam, again through Merrillsville and Schererville, to Dyer, twenty-five miles from Valparaiso.

At four corners in the center of town turn right. Go almost straight north until after crossing two railroads at Maynard. Here jog left and immediately right, going straight north on wide macadam through eastern edge of Hammond, crossing Lake George on built up road.

Follow the same route into city as used on outgoing trip.

Make Your Own Comparisons

YOU have seen many of the light sixes for 1916. Doubtless you have seen all the leaders.

Take any point of construction or design—or all points. Judge the Velie Values in comparison with any other light six at any price. This is the Velie Test of quality and workmanship.

Judge economy. You can easily get the records of miles per gallon from Velie owners. This is the real test. The Velie weighing less than 2500 pounds, everything in and on, is setting an economy pace in every locality.

The silent, supple Velie-Continental motor easily surmounts every road and grade. The upholstery in high grade leather and real curled hair is luxurious in its depth and comfort. The flexibility of the car is inspiring.

Distinctive design and finish of the car itself elevates it above the commonplace. Here Velie quality and long years of manufacturing experience are apparent even to the passer-by.

Up to the present time we have made no raise in prices, and the opportunity is still yours to secure a Velie car at a low price. Our line is complete. Touring Car, $1065; with sedan top, $1240; Roadster, $1045; Four-passenger Coupe, $1750. Wire wheels on any model $70 extra.

More Speed with Less Power

THINK back to your bicycle days when you found how much easier it was to pedal along a circular path than on a smooth asphalt pavement. Your smooth tire clung to the smooth surface.

Smooth automobile tires cling in the same way and that's one big reason we put these indentations in

BATAVIA Security TIRES

The engine develops more speed with less gasoline just as you could pedal faster with less effort when once the asphalt was left behind.

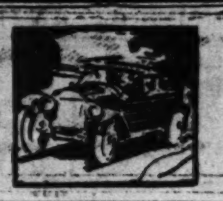
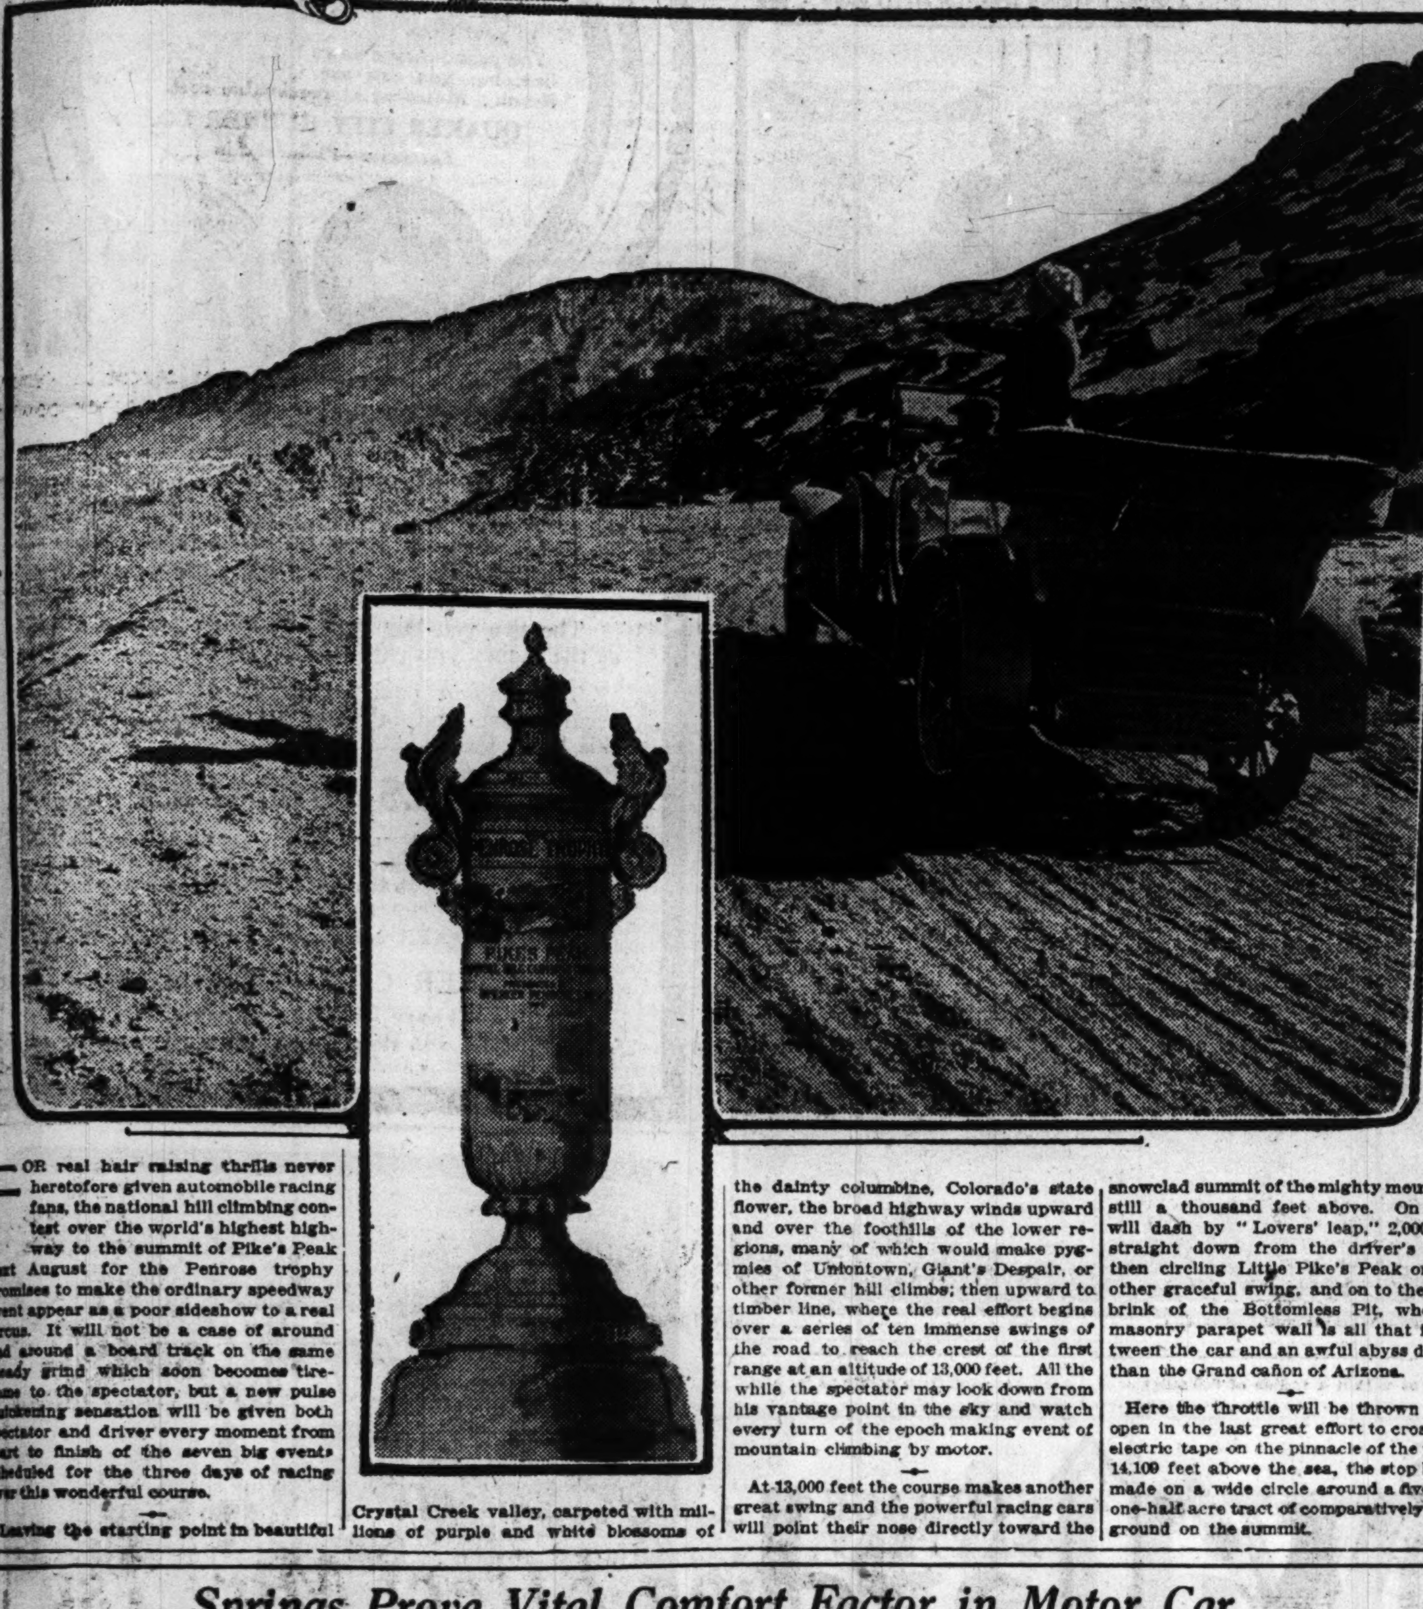
MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J. C. Burton



View of Pike's Peak Road and Hill Climb Trophy.



FOR real hair raising thrills never heretofore given automobile racing fans, the national hill climbing contest over the world's highest highway to the summit of Pike's Peak next August for the Penrose trophy promises to make the ordinary speedway event appear as a poor sideshow to a real circus. It will not be a case of around and around a board track on the same steady grind which soon becomes tiresome to the spectator, but a new pulse quickening sensation will be given both spectator and driver every moment from start to finish of the seven big events scheduled for the three days of racing over this wonderful course.

Leaving the starting point in beautiful Crystal Creek valley, carpeted with millions of purple and white blossoms of the dainty columbine, Colorado's state flower, the broad highway winds upward and over the foothills of the lower regions, many of which would make pygmies of Uniontown, Giant's Despair, or other former hill climbs; then upward to timber line, where the real effort begins over a series of ten immense swings of the road to reach the crest of the first range at an altitude of 13,000 feet. All the while the spectator may look down from his vantage point in the sky and watch every turn of the epoch making event of mountain climbing by motor.

At 13,000 feet the course makes another great swing and the powerful racing cars will point their nose directly toward the snowclad summit of the mighty mountain still a thousand feet above. On they will dash by "Lovers' leap," 2,000 feet straight down from the driver's seat; then circling Little Pike's Peak on another graceful swing, and on to the very brink of the Bottomless Pit, where a masonry parapet wall is all that is between the car and an awful abyss deeper than the Grand cañon of Arizona.

Here the throttle will be thrown wide open in the last great effort to cross the electric tape on the pinnacle of the peak, 14,109 feet above the sea, the stop being made on a wide circle around a five and one-half acre tract of comparatively level ground on the summit.

Springs Prove Vital Comfort Factor in Motor Car.

THE springs under a motor car are one of its most important units, but it is doubtful whether the average automobile purchaser gives the spring question the thought that is really essential to his comfort and welfare, and that of his passengers when making a purchase. There is far more difference in the quality of various makes of springs on the market than in any other important detail of the car's construction. Yet people know very little about springs—that is the average buyer—so springs are generally passed over without much consideration. At least, that is the contention of Artemus Ward Jr., president of the King Motor Car company.

Vibration and shock have been two problems that automobile engineers have given much thought. Noises were disagreeable to passengers—shocks caused nervousness. Springs of improved construction today make riding a pleasure. While there are several types of springs there seems to be the cantilever spring and the semi-elliptic for the rear spring suspension on motor cars.

For pleasure cars the types of rear springs used have been the semi-elliptic, the three-quarter elliptic, the full elliptic, platform, and cantilever type.

In nearly all cases, except for the very light and small cars, it is generally conceded that the semi-elliptic type of spring for the front springs are the most satisfactory, the reason for this being the fact that the front end of a motor car does not want what spring engineers term a soft ride. There must be something steady there to hold the car on the road and prevent ducking. By using a long, semi-elliptic spring in the rear of the car a soft ride can be obtained.

As a general rule automobile engineers find that the three-quarter elliptic spring is not good on account of its construction, limiting the length of the scroll or upper part. This is because deflection in spring action varies indirectly as the square of the length, and must be cut down to conform to body construction. The trouble as a result of making three-quarter elliptic springs so they conform to body design is so undesirable that many automobile engineers look to this type of spring suspension as passing out. The three-quarter elliptic is being replaced by the long, semi-elliptic because it is more adaptable and cheaper.

The full elliptic has had its day. Spring manufacturers do not like to talk it with their customers. It is unsightly and interfers with fender and body design. On account of its own design necessitating a greater arc of curvature, it has greater reaction. With the public demanding cars built closer to the ground the full elliptic spring is a handicap.

Even in the platform type of construction which generally is found on high priced cars, as good riding qualities as found in the cantilever spring is not obtained. And it is an expensive type of suspension, with this construction difficult to suspend the gasoline tank on the rear and carry tire saddles, it is a type of spring suspension that is only adapted to certain motor vehicles.

In the cantilever spring suspension the maximum freedom from shocks for the length of the spring is obtained. All cantilever spring users are employing long springs. When the cantilever spring is made long the action becomes slower or sluggish and less rebound is caused, making riding ideal and saving car shocks. There is more steel in the cantilever spring than in the semi-elliptic that of course makes the cost higher to the manufacturer, but the results obtained are claimed to fully justify the extra expense.

There seems to be no doubt but what the popular type of rear spring suspension among automobile manufacturers is rapidly becoming the cantilever.

Besides maintaining a bureau of information as to the best automobile routes throughout the country "The Tribune" is prepared to answer all technical questions about automobiles. Address all inquiries to High Speed, care of "The Tribune," Chicago.

LAUDS "TRIBUNE" ROUTE BUREAU.

Automobile Editor, Chicago Tribune: For the benefit of those who wish to make a trip through Illinois and Iowa at this time of year I am writing this letter. We left Danville, Ill., April 8 and made Ida Grove, about sixty miles from Sioux City, Thursday evening. The roads in Iowa are in fine shape. We had the chains on once in the entire distance. From Davenport to Ida Grove the roads are like pavements. The Lincoln highway from Ames to Carroll is poorly marked at the crossroads. We lost much time on this account. Your bureau of information is better than any touring guide published. We had no trouble finding our way from town to town as you directed.

FRED FOX, Ida Grove, Ia.

Will you please publish the best route from Chicago to Joliet, Ill.; also from Chicago to Canton, Ill.? Is the Automobile Blue Book the best general guide for touring? H. C. M., Chicago.

From Chicago to Joliet, go down Michigan boulevard to Garfield boulevard, west to Western avenue, and south in that thoroughfare through Blue Island, Homewood, Frankfort, and New Lenox. The distance is 49.2 miles. From Chicago to Canton go west in Washington boulevard to Marengo avenue, south to Madison street, west through Forest Park and outskirts of Maywood to Ninth avenue; pick up the Starved Rock trail, marked by white and yellow bands, and go through Naperville, Aurora, Plano, Sandwich, Somonauk, Wedron, and Sulphur Lick Springs to Ottawa, 89.7 miles. Continuing from Ottawa, pass through Lowell, Tonica, Mount Palatine, Magnolia, Varna, La Rose, Washburn, Lorpoint, Cazenovia, Metamora, Washington, East Peoria, and Peoria, 76.1 miles. From Peoria go to Farmington, 22 miles, and from there through Norris to Canton, 10.2 miles. Total distance from Chicago, 198 miles. You cannot purchase a better general automobile guide than the Automobile Blue Book.

Will you please give me the best route from Rock Island, Ill., to Indianapolis, Ind., by way of Blue Island and Chicago as far north as Seventy-first and Halsted streets? Is Ninety-fifth street, from Halsted to Ewing avenue, in good condition? HARRY FULLMER, Rock Island, Ill.

You will do much better by going direct to Chicago and thence to Blue Island. Go through Moline, East Moline, Watertown, Hillsdale, Erie, Denrock, Lyndon, Galt, Sterling, Dixon, Franklin Grove, Rochelle, Creston, Malta, De Kalb, Geneva, West Chicago, North Glen Ellyn, Lombard, Elmhurst, Maywood, Oak Park, and Austin to Chicago, 172.9 miles. From Chicago go south in Michigan boulevard to Garfield boulevard, west to Halsted street, south to Ninety-fifth street, west to Western avenue, and south to Blue Island. Ninety-fifth street from Halsted to Ewing avenue is paved with asphalt and is in fine condition.

Last summer there was an important automobile race in Chicago, and I desire to know if another one is to be held there this summer. WARREN J. COLWELL, Syracuse, Ind.

Three big races are billed for the Chicago speedway this year. The first will be a nonprofessional race on May 13. The most important event will be the 300 mile derby, which takes place on June 10. Another professional race is set for some time in October.

Please inform me through your bureau if there is a map of the Dixie highway published and by whom. Also details of route from Chicago to Danville, Ill. H. H., Chicago.

You may obtain maps of the Dixie highway by addressing W. S. Gilbreath, secretary Dixie Highway association, Chattanooga, Tenn. The best and most direct route to Danville is by way of South Chicago, Hammond, Highlands, Schererville, Crown Point, Orchard Grove, Thayer, Enos, Morocco, Ade Station, Kentland, Raub, Freeland, Dunnington, Ambia, Hoopeston, Rossville, Alvin, and Bismarck to Danville, 155.2 miles.

Can you advise me as to the best route from Chicago to Manhattan, Kas.? What is the present condition of the "Trail to Sunset" from Chicago through Des Moines and Omaha to Kansas City? L. R. JONES, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Go through Maywood, Naperville, Aurora, Montgomery Station, Bristol, Plano, Sandwich, Somonauk, Earlville, Barreton Station, Mendota, Lamoille, Dover, Princeton, Wyanet, Buda, Neponset, Kewanee, Galva, Altona, Oneida, Watega, and Galesburg, 184.3 miles. In dry weather the roads to this point should be found good, but after a heavy rain they might cause you trouble. From Galesburg go through Coldbrook, Monmouth, Oquawaka, Mississippi river ferry to Burlington, 50.2 miles; then through West Burlington, Middletown, Danville, New London, Mount Pleasant, Rome, Lockridge, Glendale, Fairfield, Jockey Hollow, Batavia, Agency, and Ottumwa, 73.0 miles; Blakesburg, Foster, Moravia, Venterville, Jerome, Seymour, Harvard, Allerton, Clio, Lineville, Mercer, Princeton, Spickard, Tindall, Trenton, Chillicothe, 153.0 miles; Utica, Ludlow, Plymouth, Braymer, Cowgill, Polo, Elmira, Lawson, Excelsior Springs, Liberty, Birmingham, Randolph, Kansas City, 96.6 miles; Merriam, Zarah, De Soto, Eudora, Lawrence, Stull, Topeka, 76.7 miles; Silver Lake, Kingsville, Rossville, St. Mary's Belvue, Wamego, Wabaunsee to Manhattan, 59.9 miles. Total distance from Chicago 698.7 miles. The so-called "Trail to Sunset" is not an organized route and is but little used by tourists. The route would be a roundabout one to Kansas City.

Will you please publish in your column the best route from Dubuque, Ia., to Chicago? I wish to make the trip about May 1. E. B. H.

From Dubuque go through East Dubuque, Ill., Fairplay, Wis., Hazel Green, Leadmine, Shullsburg, Warren, Ill., Nora, Freeport, Rockford, Cherry Valley, Belvidere, Garden Prairie, Marengo, Harmony, McQueens, Elgin, Ontarioville, Bloomingdale, Addison, Maywood, and Oak Park to Chicago. The distance is 188.4 miles.

I have a friend living in Atchison, Kas., who wishes to visit Chicago in the near future and who will make the trip by automobile. Can you furnish me with a guide of some sort or inform me where I may procure a book giving detailed routes and maps that would help him out? C. F. GRIMM, Chicago.

We would advise you to buy a copy of Vol. 5 of the Automobile Blue Book, which shows various routes of the section referred to. The books may be purchased from any leading dealer in automobile supplies or may be had by addressing Automobile Blue Book Publishing Co., Mallers building, Chicago.

What effect has a cutout on a motor? I have a car which has none on. Would you advise me to get one? A. K., Dubuque, Ia.

Muffler cutouts are almost obsolete and few of the modern cars are being equipped with them. An idea used to prevail that the devices gave more power by preventing back pressure on the motor, but that theory seems to have been exploded. It is the consensus of opinion that a muffler cutout is a nuisance and Chicago and many other cities have ordinances that forbid their use. About the only time that a cutout is useful is when a motor is being tuned up following repairs. Then the repairman is enabled to listen to the explosions to see that they follow in regular sequence. Our advice would be to cut out the cutout.

Please publish in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE the best route from Oshkosh to Yellowstone National park by way of Milwaukee. I would like to follow the route with the best scenery. Please let me know what road conditions to expect in June. T. C. H., Oshkosh, Wis.

From Oshkosh go through Van Dyne to Fond du Lac, Theresa, Addison, Schlesingerville, Meeker, Menominee Falls, Milwaukee, Waukesha, Delafield, Johnsons Creek, Vilas, Madison, Sauk City, Prairie du Sac, Baraboo, Reedsburg, Elroy, Portland, La Crosse, Winona, Eyota, Rochester, Zumbrota, Cannon Falls, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Robbinsdale, Anoka, Elk River, St. Cloud, Albany, Freeport, Sauk Center, Alexandria, Garfield, Brandon, Fergus Falls, Moorhead, Fargo, Casselton, Bismarck, Dickinson, Glendive, Miles City, Forsyth, Billings, Livingston, Yellowstone National Park. From Madison on your route will take you over the National Parks highway, which has been greatly improved in many sections. With fairly good weather between now and June the roads should be found in excellent condition.

Will you please publish the best route from Des Moines, Ia. to Grand Rapids, Mich., and oblige? A. B. E., Des Moines, Ia.

Go through Altoona, Mitchellville, Colfax, Newton, Kellogg, Grinnell, Brooklyn, Carnforth, Victor, Ladora, Marengo, South Amana, Oxford, Homestead, Tiffin, Coralville, Iowa City, West Liberty, Moscow, Durant, Davenport, 191.2 miles; Moline, East Moline, Watertown, Hillsdale, Erie, Denrock, Galt, Sterling, Dixon, Franklin Grove, Ashton, Rochelle, Creston, Malta, De Kalb, Geneva, West Chicago, North Glen Ellyn, Lombard, Elmhurst, Maywood, Forest Park, Chicago, 116.7 miles; South Chicago, Hammond, Hessville, Gary, Miller Station, East Gary, Porter, Furnaceville Station, Michigan City, Rolling Prairie, Hudson Lake, Niles, Pokagon, Dowagiac, Paw Paw, Kalamazoo, Coopers Corners, Plainwell, Martin, Bradley, Wayland, Moline, Cutlerville, Grand Rapids, 182.3 miles. Total distance, 490.2 miles.

What is the best route from Chicago to Niagara falls, returning by way of Pittsburgh? What is the mileage? GEORGE HOFFMANN, Chicago.

The preferred route from Chicago to Buffalo is by way of South Bend, Goshen, Ligonier, Bryan, Wauseon, Toledo, Fremont, Bellevue, Norwalk, Oberlin, Elyria, Cleveland, Painesville, Ashtabula, Conneaut, Erie [Pa.], Westfield, and Fredonia. Returning by way of Pittsburgh, travel south through Gowonda, Jamestown, Warren, Clarion, and Butler. From Pittsburgh motor to Chicago by way of Washington, Wheeling, Zanesville, Columbus, Dayton, Richmond, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Rensselaer, and Thayer. The mileages are as follows: Chicago to Buffalo, 575 miles; Buffalo to Pittsburgh, 241 miles; Pittsburgh to Chicago, 557 miles.

Is there a map of the Great White way published? If so, by whom and where could one be obtained? V. K. LOGAN, Oskaloosa, Ia.

There is a small map of the Great White way in volume V. of the Automobile Blue Book. We would advise that you write the o cers of the association for a map; either President Keeley, Washington, Ia., or Secretary James Stacey, Adair, Ia.

What is the best automobile route from Chicago to Twin Falls, Idaho? CHARLES EDGAR, Chicago.

You probably will find the best roads by following the National Parks highway to Yellowstone National park. This route takes you through Janesville, Madison, La Crosse, Wis.; Winona, Rochester, St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Cloud, Sauk Center, Alexandria, Brandon, and Fergus Falls, Minn.; Fargo, Valley City, Jamestown, Bismarck, Dickinson, and Medora, N. D.; Glendive, Miles City, Forsyth, Billings, Livingston, Emigrant, and Gardiner, Mont., the latter being the northern entrance of Yellowstone park. Tour through the park and leave it at the western exit; then drive south through St. Anthony, Idaho Falls, and Blackfoot, Idaho, to Pocatello. At Pocatello you turn west and drive through American Falls, Rupert, and Hansen to Twin Falls.

Please print in your Sunday column the shortest route from Sioux Falls, S. D., to Springfield, Ill. I am planning to make the trip by motorcycle about the middle of May. Where can I procure a map of the route? JOHN W. CRAFTON, Sioux Falls, S. D.

In this case the shortest route would not be advisable for a motorcycle trip. The best way would be to go to Chicago and from there to Springfield. The distance is somewhat longer than the more direct route, but the roads will be found to be much better. Leaving Sioux Falls go through Canton, Rock Valley, Hull, Sheldon, Sanborn, and Hartley to Spencer, 109.5 miles; Sioux Rapids, Marathon, Laurens, Havelock, Rolfe, and Gilmore to Fort Dodge, 91.8 miles; Webster City, Blairsburg, Williams, Wilkie, Alden, Iowa Falls, Ackley, Aplington, Parkersburg, New Hartford, and Cedar Falls to Waterloo, 107.4 miles; Jesup, Independence, Manchester, Earlville, Dyersville, Epworth, Centralia, and Julien to Dubuque, 90.7 miles; East Dubuque, Fairplay, Hazel Green, Shullsburg, Warren, Nora, Wadham Station, and Freeport to Rockford, 95 miles; Cherry Valley, Belvidere, Garden Prairie, Marengo, McQueens, Elgin, Ontarioville, Bloomingdale, Addison, Maywood, Oak Park, and Austin to Chicago, 88.4 miles; Forest Park, La Grange, Lockport, Joliet, Minokoa, Morris, Dwight, Pontiac, Lexington, and Normal to Bloomington, 149.6 miles; Shirley, Lincoln, Elkhart, and Williamsville to Springfield, 76.5 miles. The total distance is 808.8 miles. About the best road guide for you to get is volume 5 of the Automobile Blue Book.

Will you please be so kind as to furnish me with information concerning the best route from Chicago to Grand Rapids, Jackson, Detroit, and return? WALTER HAMLIN, Chicago.

Leaving Chicago, go through South Chicago, Hammond, Highlands, South Gary, Hobart, Wheeler, Westville, Valparaiso, and Laporte, where, owing to road improvements now under way, inquiry should be made at some garage for directions to South Bend, 100.7 miles. From South Bend go through Niles, Pokagon, Dowagiac, Decatur, Paw Paw, Kalamazoo, Plainwell, Bradley, Wayland, Moline, Cutlerville, and Grand Rapids, 117.7 miles; Cascade, Lake Odessa, Mulliken, Lansing, Okemos, Webberville, Howell, Brighton, New Hudson, and Farmington to Detroit, 148.7 miles. Total distance, 367.1 miles. We would suggest that the return trip might be made by way of Toledo. This route would take you through Delta, Wauseon, Bryan, Edgerton, Butler, Waterloo, Kendallville, Wawaka, Ligonier, Goshen, Elkhart, Osceola, Mishawaka, and South Bend, where the route to Chicago would be picked up.

I intend making a trip from Chicago to Cleveland by way of Detroit. I am planning to leave May 1. Will you please advise me as to the best route? M. C. B.

See answer to G. W. H. in this issue, which will give you the route both ways. Returning you will go from Detroit to Toledo and from there to Cleveland.

Will you kindly furnish me with a route from Toledo to Chicago? I am planning a bicycle trip and would like to know when the roads would be at their best. S. S. SALZMAN, Toledo.

If the weather is good you might safely undertake the trip any time after June 1. For the best route we would refer you to the answers to G. W. H. and M. C. B. in this issue.

Please give me the address of the Norman W. Henley Publishing Co. P. H. SHILBY, Lanark, Ill.

Who Backs the Car?

Now that most automobiles are good the big question is, "Who backs the car?"

Since the first automobile wheel moved no car has entered the field backed by resources more adequate and permanent nor by skill more specialized than those back of the "STANDARD" Eight.

The Standard Steel Car Company of Pittsburgh is known wherever the wheels of transportation turn. It could afford to—and did—test Standard Cars for three years over the mountain roads of Pennsylvania before the first "STANDARD" Eight was offered for sale.

Since then the tests of owners have developed no flaws. The "STANDARD" Eight was right at first. It is right today.

Visit our salesrooms. See the car. Judge for yourself.

MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J. C. Burton

Bread and Bullets Carried to Villa Hunters by Trucks

WITH the American expeditionary force now combing the desert and mountain wilderness of northern Mexico in pursuit of the bandit leader, Pancho Villa, the greatest man hunt in history relies mainly on motor trucks for maintaining the line of communications between the permanent base at Columbus and the field base south of Casas Grandes, Mexico.

Without the aid of the Mexican railways and with each removal of the field base adding to the distance between the field force and the border, the responsibility of the army transport service is greatly increased. The transportation of supplies from Columbus to the thousands of American cavalrymen, infantrymen, and artillerymen under Gen. Pershing is more dependent on motor trucks than on mules.

In fact, this is the first time in actual American war service that the motor truck and the army mule have been pitted against each other under the worst conditions to be encountered in military service. And those who have observed the work of both mule and motor freely assert that the present campaign in Mexico is the last stand of the army mule.

For transport work the war department has formed several units known as the "motor truck companies," each consisting of twenty-seven trucks for hauling and one repair truck, all in charge of a truckmaster having three assistants and twenty-eight drivers, one mechanic, one mechanic's helper, and one machinist.

The first week of actual service revealed the superiority of trucks over mules, not only in the greater speed and running radius of the trucks but in the reduction of labor, hauling units, forage requirements, and cost of operation. One of the first units to reach the front was motor truck company No. 1, composed of twenty-eight Whites.

Ordered by long distance telephone on March 15, these trucks were shipped by special train on March 16 and arrived in Columbus on March 19, only four days after the advance column had crossed the border.

In less than six days after the order was placed with the White company the first detail of White trucks had reached the field base at Casas Grandes with about twenty tons of rations.

As soon as the Cleveland trucks were unloaded on a siding at Columbus a force of army carpenters and mechanics fitted the trucks with field wagon and cavalry wagon bodies. The field wagon bodies arrived in knockdown form, while the cavalry bodies were transferred direct from cavalry wagons to trucks without need of alteration of any kind.

All of the bodies were mounted in one day, March 21, and the first division, consisting of twelve trucks, was sent across the border to begin the 130 mile run through the desert sands and rough mountain trails to Casas Grandes. Each truck carried two soldiers. The drivers, selected from the White factory, were in civilian attire and carried no arms.

This division delivered its load at the field base and returned to Columbus in three days. Mule teams averaged less than two miles an hour. Occasionally between the dispatching of truck transports a few old style army field wagons were sent across the border, carrying no greater load than the trucks, but drawn by four mules.

The second division to leave Columbus consisted of seven trucks which started from headquarters at 5 30 p. m. on March 21 with a load of supplies for the aviation corps at the front. This load consisted of rations, gasoline, oil, tents, spare parts of aeroplanes, knockdown hangars, and other equipment.

By starting out late in the afternoon on a lay when apprehension was felt for the safety of two missing aviators, this division attracted considerable attention at Columbus. Even the hour of setting out across the desert suggested the urgency of the trip.

The third detail consisted of five trucks, which left Columbus at noon on March 22, carrying twenty huge drums of gasoline and oil. The immense quantities of gasoline required by the various fleets of army transports, aeroplanes, dispatch cars, motorcycles, etc., presented a difficulty almost as great as the difficulty of getting an ample supply of water for the troops in the field.

Many of the rivers, wells, and water holes along the route of the army transport service are either polluted or poisoned making it necessary to transport practically all the water used for drinking. For this purpose the war department placed a rush order for three tank trucks of 600 gallons capacity each, and these trucks are now in service.

For seventy-five miles south of Columbus the route passes through only two villages, and these have been deserted. The only opportunity to replenish a water supply is offered by the roadside camps and kitchens which have been established along the route to enable the transport service to keep going night and day.

Every piece of motor equipment now in service in Mexico is called upon to render extraordinary service. In overcoming the natural difficulties presented by deep desert sands, always shifting with the wind and obliterating parts of the trail, as well as the rough routes through passes and cañons, the army trucks have only begun their work. The sand storms which impose so much suffering upon men and mules also impede the progress of the trucks.

Great clouds of dust and fine sand, raised by the gentlest breeze, sweep across the deserts and plateaus of Chihuahua, enveloping the trucks and lodging sand in the truck carburetors, as well as the eyes and throats of the drivers. Eddies of sand strike the face with stinging force and add to the suffering from sun and wind. In some of the narrow passes through which the trucks must travel, a few grains of sand in a carburetor might easily tie up a whole convoy, inasmuch as there would be no opportunity for one truck to pass another.

The trucks have been rendered particularly immune from conditions of this kind, having all working parts fully inclosed, magnetos equipped with leather covers, and carburetors protected from the flying sand.

In addition to hauling supplies, the motor truck is performing an equally important work for the signal corps. Communication between Columbus and the advance column in Mexico is maintained by motor trucks equipped with radio sets.

Situated on the same knoll where Villa's men mounted a machine gun and swept Columbus with its fire on the night of the raid, the signal corps has stationed a one and a half ton truck, whose engine drives a generator supplying electricity for a portable wireless outfit. This plant is regularly in communication with another wireless truck at the front.

The outfit represents a distinct advance in the construction of portable wireless sets for military work. It can be set up for use in twelve minutes and send messages within a radius of 800 miles under favorable conditions. Messages have been received from points as far away as 2,500 miles.

MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J. C. Burton

Completion of Dixie Highway Means New Money for South.

A MILLION tourists in Florida during the present winter season is a conservative estimate made by the various railroads entering that state. It is safe to predict that a similar number or more will be found at the Michigan resorts during the coming summer.

One does not even have to own an automobile to figure the percentage of this 2,000,000 tourists visiting the pleasure resorts along the northern and southern termini of the Dixie highway who would rather travel in an automobile in preference to the train, if a good road extending from the Straits of Mackinac to the lower end of Florida, with the loop around the two states, had been provided.

Place this estimate at the conservative figure of 20 per cent, or 400,000 tourists, traveling over the Dixie highway. Add to this at least 200,000 who are traveling in automobiles this year in reaching the winter or summer resorts. Then to this add whatever estimate you please—as the figures are becoming too staggering to be grasped—of the number of interstate tourists who travel over the Dixie highway but do not reach the winter or summer playgrounds on the two loops of the highway. Then think for a moment of the number of automobile owners who have gone or will go to other pleasure resorts more easily reached in their car than Michigan and Florida. Isn't it entirely sane to suppose still other automobile owners would be induced to make a tour to either or both of these resort regions if they knew a good highway was open to travel?

Then add your own estimate of this number to your previous total. Now, if your mind can stand the strain of getting up into the dizzy heights of millions, multiply your total by $5, the minimum day's expense of a tourist. Each tour would require not less than twenty days to make it worth while. All right; multiply your total by twenty. Take your own total, reduce it by any division you may wish, according to how conservative you may be, and you will still be talking in millions of dollars, all new money, which would be left by automobile tourists along the Dixie highway. With the increase in number of automobiles and the desire to tour, several times this amount will be spent during the next winter and summer and the season to come, when both divisions of the highway will be open for through travel.

With this tremendous demand for a highway from the north to the south on the part of the automobile owner, who in return for a travelable road offers to come and spend his money with the various communities, there is nothing short of the most direful catastrophe to prevent the building of the Dixie highway from Chicago to Florida.

Having been aroused by the Dixie Highway association to the big profits which are within their grasp from tourist travel between the north and the south, counties in eight states are feverishly working to hasten the day when this stream of new money can flow through their counties. And now the opening day is in sight. By late fall the Dixie Highway association confidently expects to be able to announce that it is possible for tourists from Chicago and the great west who travel through her gateway to go to Danville, through Indianapolis to Dayton and Cincinnati, and travel south over the eastern division of the highway to Florida through Knoxville, Chattanooga, Atlanta, and Macon to Jacksonville and Miami. The only barrier which is preventing this being done today is about seventy miles through the mountains of Kentucky, which is being built by the mountain counties just as rapidly as it is possible for steam shovels and other heavy road machinery to hew a road through the mountains.

Within eighteen months at the outside it will be possible for the same tourists to travel back to Chicago over the western division through Chattanooga, Nashville, and Indianapolis to Chicago. The only barrier to this travel at the present time is between Nashville and Chattanooga, where the Dixie Highway association has encountered its most difficult problems. Through active personal work on the part of President Allison one county after another has been brought into line and started to work. The most difficult construction on this division between Chattanooga and Monteagle, on top of Cumberland mountain, has been closed up with the action of Hamilton county authorities authorizing the construction of six miles of road, at a cost of $80,000. Marion county, adjoining, is preparing to spend $[illegible]000 on its mileage of Dixie highway, raised by bond issue and private subscription. Franklin county is now at work expending $150,000 exclusively on the Dixie highway out of the proceeds of a bond issue of $250,000, which was secured through the aid of the Dixie Highway association. The remainder of the road between Nashville and Chattanooga will be amply provided for.

The progress on the construction of the Dixie highway in less than nine months has been so rapid that some of the more prosperous counties are turning their attention to the construction of permanent roads. In each state some paved road will be constructed during the summer of 1916. Three divisions of the highway are in the midst of campaigns for paved roads the entire distance.

In Illinois W. W. Marr, chief state highway engineer and a director of the Dixie Highway association, confidently believes that within two years the entire road will be paved. Between Detroit and Cincinnati, on the eastern division, through Toledo and Dayton, an active campaign is on to pave this entire mileage. There are only a few short gaps which are not paved or definite provision made for permanent improvement.

In Indiana, since the Dixie highway movement was inaugurated, two and a half miles of brick have been laid and provision made for three miles of concrete road north of Bedford. A petition is out for six miles of concrete road north of Bloomington, which will eliminate a bad grade and road and complete the gap of good road through Indiana from Danville, Ill., to Louisville, Ky. By 1917 the entire eastern division of the highway from Jacksonville to Miami will be hard surfaced. From Gainesville to Arcadia provision is being made for a hard surfaced road, either of brick or sand-asphalt. The association is concentrating its efforts on the connecting link between Tallahassee and Gainesville, which will give tourists a splendid road to Tampa and West Coast Florida.

A summary of what has been accomplished on the Dixie highway during the first nine months shows preparations made for temporary improvement of the bad stretch of the highway in Illinois, with an excellent outlook for the paving of the entire mileage; hundreds of thousands of dollars spent in Indiana with only one stretch which may not be expected to be in good condition by summer; a good road now provided for practically the entire mileage in Ohio, with an expenditure approximating a half million dollars during the last nine months; four mountain counties in Kentucky with $1,000,000 in hand working as rapidly as possible eliminating the last barrier on the eastern division of the highway between Cincinnati and Knoxville; all but forty miles of the western division of the highway in Kentucky between Louisville and Nashville graded and newly surfaced, with ample financial preparations for its completion by summer; bond issues voted and appropriations made to complete the stretch between Nashville and Chattanooga; steady improvements in Georgia, so that a splendid road will be provided the entire length of the state by summer, and over $10,000,000 voted in bonds in Florida, of which a large percentage will be expended on permanently improving the Dixie highway.

While accessibility over an easily traveled Dixie highway to the summer and winter resorts is one of the main causes of the tremendous demand for the early completion of this great highway, few tourists will care to hurry through from their homes to their destination. There probably is no road in the United States which offers so varied a list of scenic, historic, climatic, agricultural, industrial, and commercial attractions as the Dixie highway.

A tabulation of the entire number would require pages. Leaving Chicago, a tourist would travel over the old military road modernized, to Danville, thence through the agricultural country of Indiana until the Bedford stone district is reached. Then over the knobs of southern Indiana to Louisville, with the blue grass country in easy reach. The home of Louis Phillippe, the birthplace of Lincoln, and Mammoth cave are attractions which will cause the tourist to linger a while going from Louisville to Nashville.

The blue grass of Tennessee, with the home of Andrew Jackson, the battlefields of Stone river and Murfreesboro, are offered the tourist around the old southern city of Nashville. The scenery of the Cumberland mountains between Nashville and Chattanooga is unsurpassed.

The associations of northern Georgia, with memories of the civil war and Sherman's march to the sea, the peach orchards, the cotton fields and cotton mills, and the progressive spirit of the new south, yet holding a lingering memory of the old, make every mile of the highway through Atlanta to Macon of interest to the tourist. The peach and pecan belts, the old colonial homes, the magnificent estates of northern men who have built their summer homes in southern Georgia again offer a pleasing variety of attractions. It would be impossible to even suggest the wonder of the attractions offered the tourist in Florida.

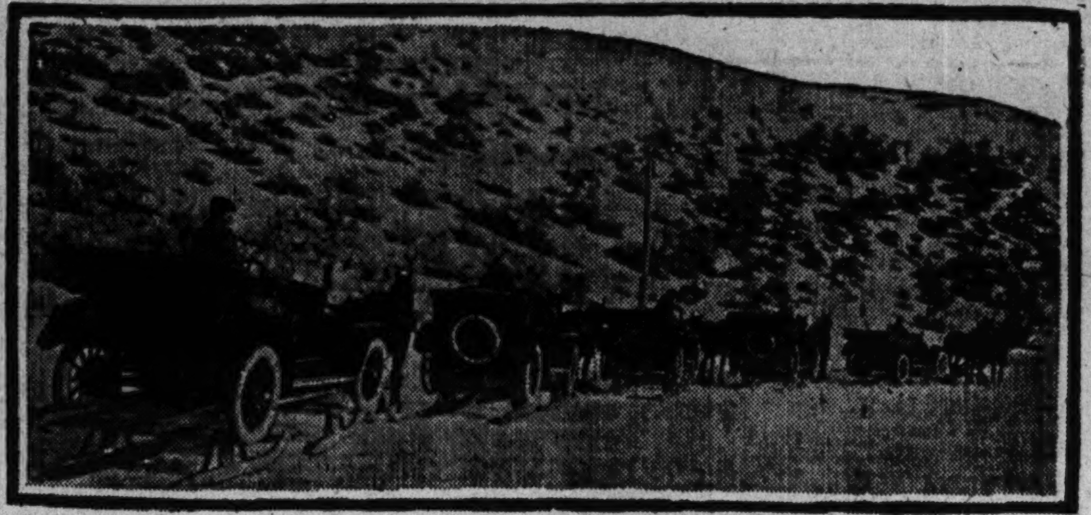
On the eastern division of the highway, after leaving the progressive cities of Detroit and Toledo, the tourist is traveling over a highway used in the days prior to the revolution. Crossing the Ohio river at Cincinnati, the tourist is soon in the far famed blue grass country of Kentucky. Near Richmond is historic Boonesborough, where is located the famous fort from which George Rogers Clark led his expedition into the "Illinois country." Here the tourist soon strikes the trail blazed by Daniel Boone through the Cumberlands of Kentucky, which offer scenery of wonderful attractiveness. From the mountains of Kentucky the tourist enters the famous Powell and Holston valleys into Knoxville. Between that east Tennessee city and Chattanooga the highway follows the old trail for a greater part of the distance used as a passage by the Indians between the north and the south. The locations of the old forts and trading stations of the whites to control this trail are preserved and plainly marked.

And, best of all, most of these attractions are brand new. The tourist traveling on the train is mainly interested in how quick he can reach either Michigan or Florida. The influence on other tourists of the stories told by the pioneers who have braved impossible roads has been dampened by the explanation of the difficulties encountered in reaching the wonder places which will be made easily accessible by the completion of the Dixie highway.

The B. F. Goodrich company of Akron, O., which has supplied the solid tire equipment for most of the war trucks now in Mexican service, also is the builder of many of the motorcycle tires on the war cycles used by the army scouts. Driving conditions along the border and in Mexico are as hard as those to be encountered anywhere. Goodrich tires have proved able to keep the troopers provided with dependable transportation facilities, no matter how far in the rear the "tires hospitals" may be.

How They Ship Motor Cars in Far West.



Shipment of Overlands transported on sledges from Montpelier, Idaho, to Afton, Wyoming

In order to prepare for the spring rush a load of Overland automobiles was dragged on sledges from Montpelier, Idaho, to Afton, Wyoming, a distance of fifty miles, recently. Afton is far distant from all railroads, the nearest station being located at Montpelier. To reach Afton mountains, where one heavy snow piles on top of another, must be crossed. The only means of transportation is by sleds.

Motorist Races Railroad Train to Catch Thief

THE motor car is doing great stunts in the warring countries, carrying supplies to the fighting armies, taking care of the wounded, etc. But, according to W. G. Tennant of the Tennant Oakland company, an Oakland car down in Oklahoma has set an entirely new record.

Instead off employing the services of a good watchdog to protect his home, Howard Wilson of Forgan, Okla., has placed his faith in his Oakland, which he is thinking of naming Sherlock Holmes or Arsene Lupin. Wilson bases his belief on the way in which his Oakland aided him in the capture of a thief a few days ago.

A sum of money was stolen from Wilson's brother. Although the loot was small, Wilson determined to capture the robber and started to look for him. He found that the man had left Forgan on a train bound for a distant point in eastern Oklahoma. When this was ascertained the train had been gone long enough to reach a point fifteen miles from Forgan.

"Jump in the car," said Wilson to his brothers. "We'll get that train." Oklahoma roads are not paved boulevards and there was some rough traveling for the automobile and its occupants. It took a run of just thirty miles from Forgan to Gate to catch the train.

The man who had taken the money was found on the station platform at Gate. He was placed under arrest and taken back to Forgan. Wilson gives all the credit for the capture to the Oakland car. He plans to enter it in a road race which is to be held at Liberal, Okla. The contest will be for endurance, and Wilson is confident that he can win it.

to own a National Six or Twelve
From an engineering standpoint the Six and the Twelve are the logical number of cylinders. This is established without a doubt.
From an owner's standpoint—yours—it is daily being proven that the logical Six or logical Twelve is the National. Even on the face of it, the National prices look very low, but when you learn what you get the prices grow less. Nothing is omitted in structural strength, comfort, beauty or exquisite appointments. Don't deny yourself a demonstration.

Within the Law
All traffic laws, rules and regulations, are becoming more rigid every day.
This is as it should be. Safety first.
All the more reason for the best speedometer on your car—the Stewart.
Without one you unconsciously break the law, because no motorist can possibly figure the speed of his car without a speedometer.
Unless you do drive at a speed within the law, you are liable to the embarrassment of arrest, the humiliation of a trial and the possibility of a heavy fine.
Do not smile. It might happen to you any day, as it has to thousands of others.
This magnetic speedometer is especially built for Ford, Chevrolet and Saxon Cars.

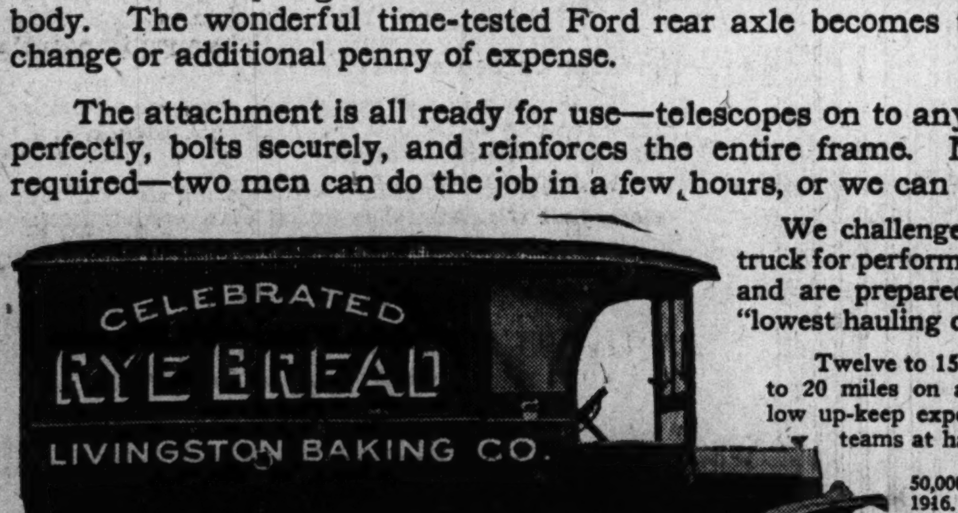
Gentlemen:
After a thorough demonstration we were convinced that the Smith Form-a-Truck was just what we needed to handle business somewhat distant from the plant. We believe it will give us a one-ton truck on a much more economical basis than any other we know of.
Yours very truly,
Livingston Baking Co.

THINK of it—a guaranteed one-ton truck—built of the best procurable materials—a truck of proven dependability—at less than half the usual cost.
In the Smith Form-a-Truck there has been added to the unparalleled dependability, matchless economy, and wonderful durability of the Ford an almost everlasting attachment that carries 90% of the load. This attachment has 4-inch channel steel frame, reel truck wheels, solid pressed-on Firestone tires, double chain drive; 125-inch wheel base, Timken roller bearings, special heavy steel axle and springs and accommodates standard 9-foot roomy body, or any special body. The wonderful time-tested Ford rear axle becomes the jackshaft, without a change or additional penny of expense.
The attachment is all ready for use—telescopes on to any Ford—new or old—fits perfectly, bolts securely, and reinforces the entire frame. No skilled workmanship required—two men can do the job in a few hours, or we can do it for you.



We challenge the world to duplicate this truck for performance and economy. We know and are prepared to prove that it gives the "lowest hauling cost on earth."
Twelve to 15 miles of speed under full load—15 to 20 miles on a gallon of gasoline—ridiculously low up-keep expense—and twice the work of four teams at half the cost.
50,000 of these trucks are being built for 1916. We can absolutely guarantee immediate deliveries now and throughout the year.

Dramatis Personae of the Speed Spectacle.

NO. 1—EDDIE O'DONNELL, DUESENBERG.

EDDIE O'DONNELL has won his first classic. At Corona last Saturday he defeated an all star field in the sweep around the macadam circle and averaged 86.5 miles an hour in his triumphant drive of 301 miles. For this reason he is given the place of honor in a new department that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE inaugurates with this issue.

O'Donnell's career as a driver dates back to February, 1915, when he moved over from the mechanician's seat to the place behind the wheel of a Duesenberg. His promotion was a reward for three years of faithful service as an oil pumper and assistant to Eddie Rickenbacher. He made good from the start. During his first season as a driver he started in fourteen road races and speedway events and finished inside the money in eight of them, anything but a poor showing for a neophyte. His 1915 record is as follows:

Road races—First at Glendale, Cal.; third in the Elgin trophy event; failed to finish in the Point Loma, Grand Prize, Vanderbilt cup, and Chicago Automobile club cup contests.

Speedway races—Second at Sioux City and Omaha; third at Des Moines, New York, and the Twin Cities; fifth at Indianapolis; also ran at Chicago and Providence.

On the speedways alone he captured $13,000 in prize money. He now is dean and captain of the Duesenberg team, the only one with which he ever has been identified.

O'Donnell is the Maud Muller of the gasoline circuit. He raked the hay on his father's farm near Whitewater, Wis., before he left the cows and chickens and decided that working in the service department of the Mitchell agency at Milwaukee "was the life." He made his debut as a mechanician in 1912.

Mort Roberts was O'Donnell's patron and a roll of adhesive tape his talisman, Eddie's foresight in having the tape in his pocket winning the Pabst trophy for the Duesenberg driver and binding the former farm hand to a permanent job with the Duesenberg team. For when Roberts had a commanding lead in the race a gasoline line broke, and had not O'Donnell had the material to repair the connection the car would have been docked.

O'Donnell is a heady driver. He nurses his mount, understanding its limitations as well as its capabilities. He promises to force his way into the king row this season and secure a place beside Earl Cooper, Barney Oldfield, Dario Resta, and Ralph de Palma.

Driving Tests Teach Owners Fuel Economy

ACTING on the theory that many a gallon of gasoline is wasted by the average automobile owner in the course of a year, the Studebaker corporation recently carried on a number of tests in all sections of the country among owners of Studebaker cars.

The results of these tests, just made known, have resulted in greatly increased mileage in many cases. Averages of sixteen to eighteen miles per gallon have been secured from their four cylinder models, while the six cylinder cars have produced fifteen miles per gallon uniformly.

In actual operation the Studebaker plan works like this: An expert calling on an owner who is not getting maximum mileage first disconnects the regular gasoline supply and attaches an auxiliary tank containing one gallon. The owner then takes the wheel and drives a few miles, the expert at his side making mental notes all the while. At the end of the trip the amount of gasoline used is measured.

The expert then relieves the owner in command. Before starting out he adjusts the carburetor and any other features of mechanism that need adjusting in order to secure the greatest possible economy in operation. The expert then drives the car and drives it properly, explaining the owner's faults to him all the while.

Reports show in most cases that the owner did not have his carburetor adjusted to best advantage. In other cases he might have had a tendency to leave the motor running while away from his car for a considerable length of time. In still other instances his fault might be in speeding up the motor and "riding" the clutch when a shift of gears would have been the logical and economical method. Spark plugs may be dirty or the motor may have been otherwise left neglected.

"American automobile owners have been accustomed to low priced gasoline so long that they have become careless and wasteful," says R. T. Hodgkins, general sales manager of the Studebaker corporation. "We can learn a lesson in gasoline economy from motorists in foreign countries, where they pay 65 cents to a dollar a gallon for gasoline in some places, and as a consequence they guard zealously against extravagance in running their cars.

"I do not wish to enter a defense of the present price of gasoline. I would like to see it come down and believe it is bound to do so. But for their part automobile owners have an opportunity to practice thrift in the use of gasoline."

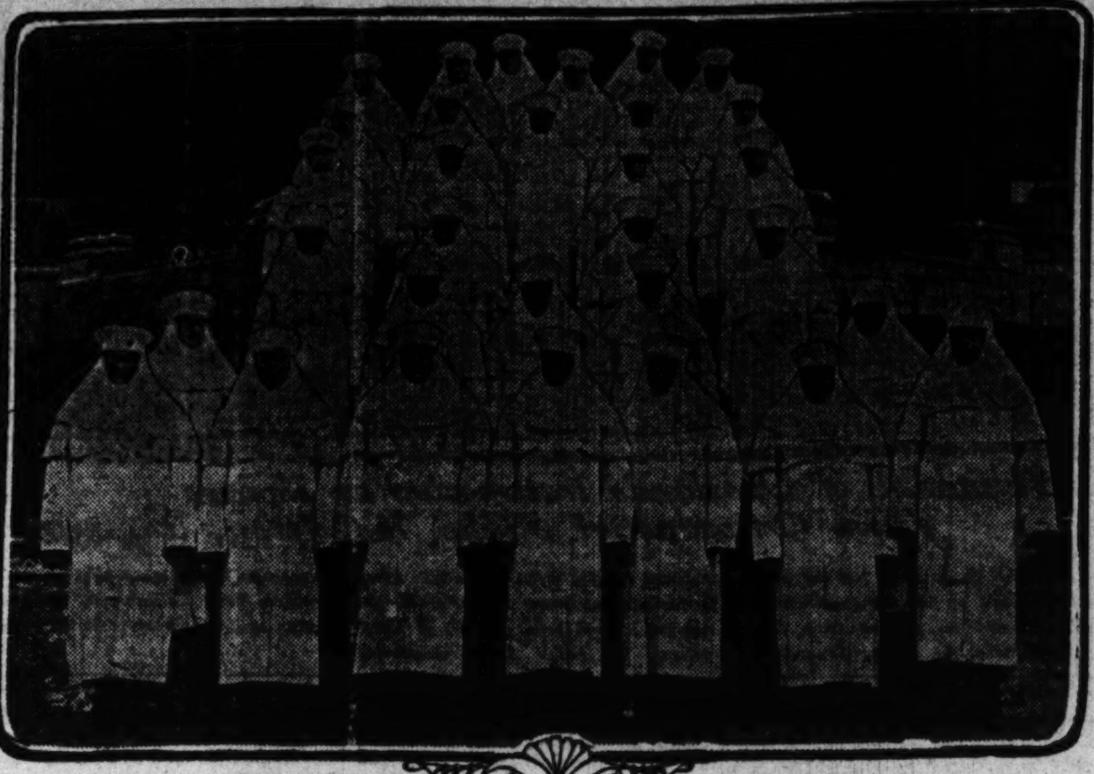
Motorcycle Riders Form Military Corps

IN order to aid in the general movement for national preparedness Los Angeles motorcyclists, with the cooperation of E. E. Welborn, California Harley-Davidson distributor, and A. T. Smith, manager of the Los Angeles Firestone branch, have formed an auxiliary to the California national guard.

On Sunday, March 18, a large number of Harley-Davidson riders with their machines reported to Capt. Jesse McComas at the armory of the California militia at Los Angeles. The men were supplied with uniforms and given information as to the possible duties of a motorcycle reserve of the guard.

On Thursday, March 23, a large squad of riders reported at the armory to consider the matter of enlistment as a motorcycle reserve squad of the California national guard, which in case of continued military action in Mexico would be summoned for active service.

Not Klu Klux Klansmen, but Krossing Kops.



When skies are overcast and the streets are veiled in a dense fog the traffic policemen of New York, Detroit, and San Francisco don raincoats and helmets of white rubber in order that they may be plainly seen by motorists and their signals heeded. This innovation in the nation wide safety first campaign is one that might be adopted in Chicago at slight expense and much benefit. In fact, prominent Chicago motorists advocate the wearing of white gloves, caps, and leggings by the motorcycle officers in order that they can be identified. They claim that the nonuniformed speed cop catches only an occasional offender and that the officer in uniform commands a constant respect for the law.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

Another million dollars has been added to the Allen Motor company's capitalization. This company at Fostoria, O., started to manufacture automobiles in the summer of 1912. The capitalization at the beginning was $500,000. At a directors' meeting it was unanimously agreed that if the increased demand for Allen cars continued as it has during the last few months further additional capital would have to be added to meet the occasion for a greater output of cars. The Allen company has added more than 60,000 square feet of floor space to the factory equipment during the last ninety days. This facilitates an output of cars five times as great as the output last year, which was about 3,000. In June, 1915, the Allen company listed 240 factory representatives and dealers. Beginning January, 1916, they numbered close to the 700 mark.

Dealing in Ford accessories has become as flourishing a business as selling Ford cars or inventing Ford jokes. One of the newest and most popular fitments for Fords that has been put on the market in Chicago is the Hassler shock absorber. The head of the distributing agency for this territory, O. S. Huffman, states that the factory has been forced to increase production to meet the demands of the increasing legion of Ford owners.

An exception to the rule that the value of an automobile depreciates as soon as it is driven from the salesroom by the buyer is a 1916 Marmon purchased by O. D. Gilman in January. After he had driven the car two weeks he was offered $300 more than he paid for it by a motorist who wished immediate delivery of a machine but whose demands the Marmon company could not satisfy.

"The old Peerless customers are coming back," said Frederick A. Jones, manager of the Hughey Motor Car company, local distributor of the new Peerless eight. "Those who bought Peerless cars three, four, five, or even six years ago when the Peerless at $5,000 stood for the last word in motor cars, as it does today at $1,890, find themselves in the market again, and their attention is naturally drawn to the make of car that has served them faithfully during this period. Hardly a day goes by but we receive telephone or personal calls from old owners, and we are selling these people, too."

Billie Burke in "Peggy" is a film of more than usual interest to motor movie patrons, due to the spectacular appearance of a National speedster constructed especially for Miss Burke. This film is a production of the Triangle Film corporation. The manner in which Billie Burke drives her big, powerful roadster is fascinating. During one scene, where she drives the big white car head on, there always arises from the movie audience the murmur, "Why, it's a National!" The distinguished shield shaped radiator immediately identifies the car. Billie Burke drives her roadster at better than a mile a minute clip and looks like a miniature princess in the powerful car, and even more doll-like when she dons pajama-like jumpers to make repairs, which developed to be only the lack of gasoline.

James F. Bourquin, who is vice president and the manufacturing genius of the new Liberty Motor Car company and one of the few who know just what type the new Liberty car will prove to be, made his entrance into the automobile industry when the business "was in short pants." In fact, he assisted the engineering department of the Olds Motor Works as early as 1902 while still at college.

The Lakeside two in one convertible truck body which sells complete for less than $200 does not affect the chassis of the pleasure car, due to its ingenious design, yet provides ample strength for the support of 2,000 to 3,000 pound loads. It appears to be an ideal solution for those concerns desiring a truck at low cost and for small business men who ordinarily could not afford both a truck and a pleasure car.

"The Proof of the Pudding"

After all is said and done, sales are "the Proof of the Pudding"—so far as automobiles or any other manufactured products are concerned.

Therefore, please consider the significance of these figures—

During the month of March, the American people bought 1800 Paige "Fairfields" and paid for them one million, five hundred and fifty four thousand dollars.

When you remember that March was distinctly a winter month in most sections of the country, these figures are truly remarkable.

Could there be any stronger argument for the actual net worth of the Paige Fairfield "Six-46"?

Could there be any stronger proof that this model has taken the nation by storm and won for itself a place of undisputed leadership?

Overland
SIX

An exceptional car—built to meet an exacting demand

The six cylinder motor— in its perfected state—is the engineer's answer to the demand of the automobile enthusiast—the extremist if you will.

The perfected six cylinder motor is capable of a faster pick-up and a smoother flow of power than is possible in a four.

But not all sixes are superior to all fours.

We build fours that are superior to many sixes.

And our only purpose in building a six is to satisfy with Overland finality that extremist demand for well nigh miraculous motor performance.

The Overland Six is a big, roomy, luxurious, seven passenger car with a motor of unusual power, smoothness and flexibility.

But the price is only $1145—much lower than any other car of its size and class.

Such a low price for such a superlative car is possible only because the Overland Six is part of a huge production.

In fact Overland production is easily double that of any other builder of cars of like class.

So in buying the Overland Six you not only secure a car of very unusual performance—

But you get the advantage of the economies possible only in the production of cars on so vast a scale.

While the prices of established sixes are advancing, and those recently announced are on a higher price level, the Overland price remains at $1145.

It is so clearly dominant value among sixes of its size and class, that the demand is taxing even our large capacity.

Today is an Overland Six opportunity which can hardly last.

See us now and book your order.

"The Weavers" Passes; So Does "Her Soldier Boy"

By Percy Hammond.

FOR some reason or other this community failed to react to Herr Hauptmann's threnody of hunger and woe among the looms of Silesia in the early '40s, and it was stilled after last evening's utterance at the Princess theater. Weary and worn fingers, eyelids heavy and red, pathetic appetites which welcomed stray dog mutt, mean nothing, it seems, to those who in this sector of culture pay to go to the play. And so "The Weavers" was as an unheard Miserere, uplifted in a desert of comfort and ease. Why we neglected to don this hair shirt of the drama, especially when it was so earnestly prescribed by the authorities in New York, may not definitely be indicated. It is the dependable black and white stuff of the theater—the employers all black, the employés all white, suffering and pitiable and righteously rebellious. It is said that happy persons like to see the distress of unhappy persons in a play, but perhaps Silesian sorrows are too remote. Besides, the people of a nation whose anthem begins with "O say" may easily be cold to a revolution whose hymn, as in "The Weavers," goes thus:

> The justice to us weavers dealt
> Is bloody, cruel, and hateful;
> Our life's one torture, long drawn out,
> For Lynch law we'd be grateful.

That inflammatory quatrain by the Silesian Irving Berlin inspires me almost as much as Eddie Foy does when he sings, reassuringly, in vaudeville, "America, I love you, and there are a million more like me!"

Some weeks ago in a conversation with Mr. J. J. Shubert I said to him that I thought the Shubert theory of musical comedy was all wrong. I spoke in contempt of hard faced houris with bare, varicose legs, of revolting comediennes like George Monroe, of effeminate male choruses, of suggestive songs, and of the cheap wheezes that go to form the usual libretto from Broadway. "Why not," said I, in my innocence, "give a longing public something with the fragrance of romance in it, aided by music involving such voluptuous and rhythmic charm as may be compatible with occasional performance upon the inevitable Viangelus. "The people," said I, "are becoming culturous. They demand something that combines the grave and the semi-gay in a smart emulsion; they are tired of funny hats, putty noses, barroom jokes, and the monotonous periphery of the female form. Mr. Campanini," I said, "known as 'Il Woppo' in the Cliff Dwellers' club, has bestowed upon us a quasi-longing for lugubrious plays with music; why not capitalize this suspected yearning, diluting the product with comely girls, pretty dresses, a bit of buffoonery, and a happy ending?"

This conversation occurred after a long period of silence between me and Mr. Shubert, who, like Mr. Erlanger and others, believes that the only good critic is a dead one. "You," said he, "represent, more or less, the opinion of the middle west millions. I have on my desk in New York a romance with music. In it there is no horse play and none of its characters kicks a lady in the face. The story, by the author of 'The Merry Widow,' is as good as that of any in grand opera, and the score, by the composer of 'The Midnight Girl,' is not at all the cheap honka-tonk of commercial musical comedy. I will present it in Chicago with whatever prima donna you suggest, and if it fails I think that you forever after should hold your peace."

"Her Soldier Boy" was (more or less) the consequence of this unfortunate conference. The play had real music and a cast which could sing it, a grand operatic story and a big band. It had no bare legs and no vulgarity. It was produced by Beurimo, who wrote and staged "The Yellow Jacket," and its prima donna, Miss Romaine, was of the patriciate of light opera. It introduced Miss Fay Evelyn, an ingratiating ingénue from England, and it developed Miss Audrey Maple, a smart and trim player of musical rôles. It had atmospheric scenery and a graceful entourage. Yet it was not a good show, and so after tonight it will drift into such shadows as may envelop it until it is broken into bits by Edgar Smith or some other tinkerer and remolded nearer to the heart's desire of the elusive public. "Her Soldier Boy" poising on the rim of too good and not good enough is, in the argot of the loop, a dignified flivver. I trust that its troubles will not deter the Messrs. Shubert from future welldoing. All they need is a little experience.

More About R. H. Davis.

THOSE who were Richard Harding Davis' associates and familiars in his days as a reporter in Philadelphia expected him to devote his career to the stage rather than to fiction, according to Frederick Donaghey, who, too, was born in and gathered news for that Arcadia. Both were on the Philadelphia Press when it possessed a staff which, for size and skill, is still talked about with awe in eastern newspaper haunts. "Davis was fond of the theater in those days," says Mr. Donaghey. "I do not mean as a mere theatergoer, nor yet as an aspirant; he reacted to it in its every phase, even after he had learned all there was to know about its tawdry, disillusionizing insides. With the possible exception of 'Gallegher,' most of his early fiction seemed to have been written with a proscenium opening through which Van Bibber, the Disreputable Mr. Reagan, and the others could aim their speeches.

"Back in 1888, Davis founded, wrote for, and helped to edit a weekly called The Stage. It was a typographical exquisite; it was marked throughout by a good taste unknown before or since in any other periodical of American make devoted to the affairs of the theater; it was written in wit, in a sense of proportion, and in fancy. It possessed everything except circulation and paid advertising. Davis, himself, did a weekly column called 'The Limelight Man,' of paragraphs and capital verse. The weekly was making headway when Davis ran off to England in '89 to play cricket with the Belmont eleven; and with his going the pep seemed to leave the pages and The Stage died away.

"On of the most effective of the Van Bibber stories, 'Her Last Appearance,' was, although it is not generally known, written as a result of Davis' being back stage the night De Wolf Hopper produced 'Wang' in New York. The story was dramatized as 'The Littlest Girl,' and used over and over again on the two-a-day circuits by Robert Hilliard. Davis and Hopper were close friends, and the former elected to view the première from the wings, spending the entr'acte in the star's dressing room. The smallest of the four or five children who sang with Hopper and Della Fox in the refrain of the song called 'Baby! Baby!' caught Davis' fancy; he questioned her, and then questioned the woman who looked after the child, and from their replies obtained the idea afterward used in the yarn. This, I suppose, gives color to the old allegation that the Van Bibber stories were imaginatively autobiographical—an allegation never meant to be complimentary to Davis, but one which he never bothered to deny.

"The truth is that his temperament in those days was markedly dramatic in its showings. The best of his stunts as a reporter on the Philadelphia Press would, if made into a scene in melodrama, be looked upon as sheer extravaganza. He let his beard grow for a week; he grease painted a 'black eye'; he obtained appropriate togs, and then took lodging in a thieves' hangout in the city's badlands. He played the part of a hunted, suspicious, untrusting lawbreaker so well that he was taken into the confidence of a gang whose successful operations had baffled the police for months, and then, emerging, turned up the band of outlaws and put over a scoop so sensational that it made him overnight.

"This and like exploits gave us reason, back then, to think that Davis would become one of the big men of playwriting; but he did not, in his work for the stage, seem able to footlight his talent. He had the strongest sense of the theatric of any man I have ever known; but I take it that sense of the theater must be something else."

Mme. Yvette Guilbert Feeds More Fine Art to Vacant, Patient Seats.

By Eric De Lamarter.

ORIGINALLY this first paragraph was a grouchy meditation. It contained bitter, bitter thoughts, and tart language. It alluded to Mr. Percy Hammond's creed, whose principal tenet of faith is the provincialism of Chicago. It included profane assent thereunto. The cause of the original Jeremiad was the reception accorded Yvette Guilbert here this last week. The reason for the change to a warm and sweetly scented balm of language again was Mme. Guilbert. For it is impossible to hold deep rancor with a lively memory of her surpassing artistry. Therefore let us weep that all the professional singers and all the students who might have learned invaluable lessons in the interpretive art, at a cost relatively absurd when "coaching" fees are considered, had not the time to study the masterpieces of an interpreter without peer. Possibly they feared the corroding influence of the tradition which made her, in another decade, the high priestess of "double entendre"? Of course, their prudery must be protected; and you know, dear reader, that any French song may be very much more "suggestive" than Richard Strauss' famous and empurpled ode to passion, sung regularly at lieder concerts. Let us weep that all the "pas beaucoup parlez-vousers" were busy with the usual smug distractions, the conventional concerts, the tawdriness and furbished vulgarity at other theaters. Let us condole with them for their loss of a unique chance to hear rare specimens of ancient song given us only once or twice during a lifetime. Let us raise the loud "Hallelujah" that their doing was the very perfection of interpretation, even though, in the jargon of the theater, she "starved to death" during the engagement. So did Albert Chevalier, you'll remember. Altogether, now, let us strike up a seven-part fugue on our "culture" while we sneer at others!

But bless us if another "culture" doesn't tramp into this column. It is of the chamber music cult—a form of musical sanctification symbolized by a mendicant quartet of string players feeding surreptitiously at the back door. Here is another thing worth leaving on the doorstep. It is too good to be true, and if untrue therefore to be frowned upon and let severely alone. What if Vincent D'Indy did say of it: "The most wonderful piece of instrumental music since the last of Beethoven's quartets . . . daring, but harmonious beauty . . . unique not only in the worth and loftiness of its ideas, but in the perfection and novelty of its structure"? And right here is a pigmy wager that MM. Kortschak, Felber, Dasch, and Stoeber will face an audience almost as "select but appreciative" as the hackneyed phrase goes, as Mme. Guilbert's of this last week. For they are to play this wonderfully beautiful quartet by Cesar Franck—with the three chorales for organ and the lyric drama "Ghisele," the last significant utterances of a genius rare in French music. With it was made their debut as an ensemble. During the twelve month of this organization's existence the other masterwork of French composition for quartet (d'Indy's score, based on an antique Gregorian motif, and considered in this column early this season), has appeared on its programs. And still Mr. Kortschak and his associates are bursting with zeal, for, like Mme. Guilbert, their "sensibilities of the artist (as she said the other night in a bit of speech), are touched and inspired by the beauty before them." Bland souls, are they not, the five, to imagine that finesse, feeling, skill, poesy, fantasy have any rightful place in art!

Now, having brewed this "warm and sweetly scented balm of language," let us turn to pleasanter items. The first involves the program of the Chicago Mendelssohn club of this week. Conductor Harrison M. Wild was overheard to address the general direction of the moon in wonderment as to what the reviewers of his männerchor concerts really would consider worth performance? "Everything I have chosen for quite several years they've reported to be passable, but of what value? We've sung the entire repertory. Nothing in it is altogether good. We sing all right, they say; but what we sing—ohe! ohe! Have you any suggestion?" But the moon hadn't any suggestion. Let's watch the reviewers Friday morning, garnering in their suggestions.

Leo Ornstein, faithful to his cult of the extremely recent in music, this week submits the Scriabine piano sonata, opus 23, together with young Korngold's "Fairy Pictures" and odds and ends of the repertory—including his own justly celebrated "Three]Moods." James Huneker's tabloid comment upon Scriabine is interesting: "His piano music leans heavily on Chopin, with a Slavic nuance all its own. At the last he experimented with structural as well as with harmonic problems." And Rosa Newmarch's estimate seems to be the general impression, that Scriabine died (in 1915) "with his most arresting message still upon his lips, at a moment when his spiritual enthusiasm and lofty optimism were most precious to his country."

Music Notes.

REVIVAL of patriotic and war songs of the civil war and Spanish war periods will be the feature of the benefit for the Country Home for Convalescent Crippled Children on May 9 at the Auditorium. A general chorus of 300 voices, the Paulist Choristers (the Rev. Father Finn, conductor) and the Edison orchestra of 105 members will have the assistance of Clarence Whitehill, baritone; Montgomery and Stone, the Illinois National guard, and the Naval Reserves, and a ballet. The dancing of the popular steps of the civil war period, Montgomery and Stone's revival of a plantation dance they did formerly in vaudeville, and drills by the national guard are on the program. The revival of these war time songs—"Dixie" and "Marching Through Georgia" on the same program, by the way!—is of timely interest.

Mme. Lili Petschnikoff, soloist with the Chicago Singverein at its last concert of the season on April 29, is the wife of the eminent Russian violinist and a Chicago girl. Her training was accomplished mainly under the supervision of Joachim. Unfortunately, our informant neglects note of her maiden name, which would be of interest.

The chorus class of the Chicago Grand opera established some seven years ago will soon resume its summer work under the direction of Giacoma Spadoni at the Auditorium. The work of this department has been exacting but beneficial, and has grown in favor from season to season. Last year out of 300 applicants fifty were selected on merit and received free instruction. The studies embraced twenty-two operas, French, Italian, and German. Commencing next Wednesday the chorus director, Spadoni, will meet applicants daily at the Auditorium from 11 to 12 o'clock.

Burns Mantle's Weekly Review of New York's Shows.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We give you the name of John D. Williams. It may have been given you before, but never at so important a stage in the young owner's career. Mr. Williams was for many years Charles Frohman's aid de camp. He sat at the manager's right hand and modestly made suggestions as to those plays and players that came up for discussion.

He shunted unwelcome and pestiferous visitors into side rooms that the busy Charles should not be annoyed. He dictated all the important correspondence that was issued from the Frohman offices and carried out most of the important plans. If Alf Hayman was Mr. Frohman's right hand, Williams was the left—and we are not so sure that Frohman was not left handed. Ambidextrous at least.

When Frohman died, declaring, as Miss Rita Jolivet reported, that he was entering upon the most beautiful adventure in life by way of the sinking decks of the Lusitania, Mr. Williams found his occupation for the moment gone. And then his work redoubled. There was a reorganization, and he was included in it. Augustus Thomas became the artistic director of the Charles Frohman company, Inc., Williams an important assistant.

But this change did not entirely satisfy the young man. He has an idea that he would like to be his own artistic director. His judgment had prevailed in the selection of plays for others to produce, why should he not do a bit of producing on his own account? Echo and his friends had the same answer—why?

And then Mr. Williams branched out. With two former managerial associates, Madison Corey and John Riter, he formed a company for the production of "Erstwhile Susan," with Mrs. Fiske. That comedy is still running and has been successful. Then came the big moment in his new career as a producer. He picked John Galsworthy's play of "Justice" and allowed he would like to produce it. He had always wanted to do it. It was, he believed, one of the great plays of the English stage.

His associates were fearful. "Justice" is a depressing play, they pointed out, as every other manager who ever read it has done, and no depressing play ever made a cent. A fine thing, but hopeless. Mr. Williams' personal capital was not great, but his personal courage was. And he determined to take the chance on his own.

Now, then, this decision was in no way remarkable. Many another manager, young and courageous, has taken the few hundreds or the few thousands he has saved and ventured them upon a play in which he had faith. But he has done so either timorously, shaving the corners to save the pennies, or boldly, without reason. It was the way young Mr. Williams proceeded that counted.

He engaged the best cast of actors he could find suited to the parts he had to fill. John Barrymore's salary is $600 a week. He knew that. But he wanted John Barrymore to play Falder, the convict, and he got him. Henry Stephenson costs more money than many another good actor. But he can play a better English solicitor than any other. And he was hired for that job

O. P. Heggie was the ideal Cokeson and Heggie was lured away from his job as Androcles and put in the new play. There are a hundred ingénues who would jump at the chance of playing Ruth Honeywell, the heroine, but Williams wanted Cathleen Nesbitt, and got her.

The production was assembled. It was partly new and partly old, but complete when it was ready, down to the last detail. And "Justice" was produced. Dramatically it was well nigh a perfect thing. Yet, as predicted, the first performances lost money. Baltimore did not rise to it.

A week later Boston did. Not grandly, but profitably. By the time New York was reached, which it was last week, Mr. Williams was only a few hundred dollars in debt. Here, then, was the big test. Broadway would either make or break this particular venture. And who could hope for the success of a depressing play in this carnival atmosphere?

The first night crowd was of the tenderloin elect, which is to say the wise folk of the Broadway world, with a sprinkling of those elevated brows that make for a good intellectual average. The applause indicated an honest but hesitating interest. The Galsworthy sentiment rather than the Galsworthy play was approved.

The plea of the attorney for the defense, a sound bit of eloquence, was the first incident to be applauded with any vigor, and that, of course was a response to sentiment rather than to art. There was a round for the vivid bit of acting Mr. Barrymore contributed as the condemned Falder, breaking under the strain of solitary confinement, pacing his cell as a wild beast until the distant pounding on cell doors, growing louder and louder until it reached him, inspired him to join the chorus, beating the iron with his bare fists in hysterical fury.

At the end of the play the attitude of the audience was noncommittal. Not a thing had been done to invite its kindly interest beyond the practically perfect presentation of a great work. There had been no embarrassed speech of thanks by the author. There had been no curtain calls with grinning players stretched across the stage to receive the noisy approval of friends while they played hob with the illusion of the theater.

The reviews next day were favorable, even laudatory, but they expressed guarded doubt as to the length of time the interest of the public could be depended upon to endure. It was, indeed, a depressing play, they agreed, albeit a fine one.

That night Mr. Williams, finishing a late dinner after 8, decided to call the box office to learn the worst at once.

"How're things?" he queried.

"The house is full and we turned 200 away," they told him.

And so it has continued to date. "Justice" is a box office, as well as an artistic success. And so the courage and judgment of the youngest producing manager among us has been rewarded. Do you not consider that rather an important item these days? I do.

It is a simple tragedy of protest against the crushing inhumanity of an impersonal justice, of the machine that "when once some one has given it the starting push rolls on of itself." You see it pick up a lawyer's clerk in London, when he forges a check and takes the $400 he gets by it to help the woman he loves get away from the brutal husband who is mistreating her and her children, and gradually crush the life out of him.

There is no getting away from the picture of Falder, brought to justice, given a fair trial that does honor to the majesty of the law though not to the hearts of its interpreters, and sent to prison for "two years hard." You see him through the heart breaking, body crushing experiences of the "solitary," where the awful silence of his cell brings about the break that is akin to madness.

And you see him, finally, seeking to pick up so much of his life as the state has left him, beaten by the parole law that he has failed to live up to; horrified at the thought of going back to prison, throwing himself from a balcony and breaking his neck that he may free his soul from torment.

And yet, although this is written in all sympathy, there is no point at which you can say Falder has not been given as good a chance as another. He is a weakling. He is guilty of crime. He has a fair trial, and, according to the law, he is honestly sentenced.

In prison the guards would be fair to him, even kindly. But there are rules. Others follow them; why not he? His mind falters, they tell the prison doctor. His weight is unimpaired, that functionary answers. Couldn't he be moved to the hospital? Yes; but if he is moved there would be no excuse not to move dozens of others who suffer as much from loneliness and the like.

And so the tragedy of Falder is carried to the end of a remarkable play. How long the response to it will continue there is no saying.

NEWS of the THEATERS

Gaby Deslys will not be in "Stop! Look! Listen!" next season, although the entertainment was prepared as a frame for her tentative talents. Her venture therein ended last evening.

T. Roy Barnes again claims mention as withdrawing from a cast—this time that of "Katinka." Herbert Corthell goes in.

Kin Hubbard observes that "you never see any films o' th' silent actors' salaries."

Reginald De Koven will next season get his longed for hearing as a composer of Something Higher. His "Canterbury Pilgrims," with a libretto by Percy Mackaye, will be mounted by the Metropolitan Opera company. Twenty-nine years will have passed since the late John A. McCaull staged De Koven's first operetta, "The Begum."

The Blackstone, after today's recital by Mme. Yvette Guilbert, will not be the scene of a professional entertainment until on April 27 the Boston Opera company and Mme. Pavlowa open their brief engagement. The managers, however, having in mind their gospel that grand opera can be made to pay by utilizing the by-products, have arranged for the theater to earn its rent in the first half of the week they hold there. Moreover, mindful that Shakespeare will by then be 300 years dead, their arrangement has to do with three of his plays—"The Taming of the Shrew" and "Twelfth Night," which will be given by some of the amateurs from Hull house, and "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which will have for its players the children of Miss Florence Holbrook's Forrestville school. These matters will take up Monday and Wednesday evenings and Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. The pretty theater will be alight Tuesday evening also, that a guild of printers and binders may black up for a min-ster-ell to raise funds for the comfort of the lame and the halt of their calling. After a season of cynical observation at close range of the ways and means of grand opera Mr. Hardy was quoted as saying: "The waste were the profit!"

Miss Margaret Anglin abandons Shakespeare and his tercentenary for Oscar Wilde, whose "A Woman of No Importance" she is about to present. Holbrook Blinn will be the star of the revival and Miss Anglin will play the title rôle.

APRIL

Open Casements

ORIOLES with vibrant ecstasy sing at the early light of day to the odorous freshness of which casements with gently waving cretonnes are open, freely admitting the voice and presence of spring. The waking moment thus is instantly perceptive of the mid-April impulses, conscious of the spiritual and physical husking. The four tight walls of hut happiness which have contained the intensified life of winter become lattice-like and open to the penetrating invitation of outdoors.

Illusion which may have atrophied during the dead months is alive and urgent, revealing a glad world with warranted ends and pleasant processes, eternally resurgent in physical form and spiritual significance out of the husk of its dead self.

This resurgence is of a million forms of life savagely seeking subsistence, each at the expense of another form. It means the recurrence of struggle which has been suspended during inanimation, but such is the beneficence of illusion that the return of savage competition has nothing but a gracious aspect and nothing but the sound of song. We hear the oriole and do not see the hawk. Thus illusion glosses what sentiment might abhor but what knowledge would accept, the transformation of energy by processes careless of sentiment but of enduring purpose.

Casements made magic by what they open for are wide to all the fragrance and sound of returning life. The hard maple blooms, the hepatica is tall on its stem. May flowers raise their tents, the warblers fill the thickets, and life is benevolent in condition and content in spirit.

CLIFFORD RAYMOND.

Marino Falieri, doge of Venice, executed 1355; George Villiers, second Duke of Buckingham, died 1689; Benjamin Franklin died 1790. "No pleasure endures unseasoned by variety."

"The loss of wealth is loss of dirt,
As sages in all times assert;
The happy man's without a shirt.
Let the world slide, let the world go;
A fig for care, and a fig for woe!"

WONDER WHY?

O GIRLS, have you heard that Francis Ford and Grace Cunard have left the Universal company? Just exactly how and why the parting of the ways came is not being, at the present time, generally given out, but—they say—that for some reason or other Mr. Ford and Miss Cunard were informed while in the midst of a serial story they were producing, that their services were no longer required. Too bad!

Do you reckon you could jump across a forty-seven foot ravine in an automobile? You probably reckon not. This, however, is the feat that Thomas Chatterton and Juanita Hanson are said to have performed in one of the episodes of a picture they were taking.

Helen Rosson declares she is not engaged, despite the fact that a practical joker stated in a newspaper in Santa Barbara that she was about to be married to a prominent young actor with the American company.

One of the latest stars to join the Triangle company is Dorothy Dalton. Miss Dalton was born in Chicago, but is not relation to Jack Dalton.

Some dream has J. Warren Kerrigan been the last week in the costume of a hussar which he has been wearing in a picture play. Yes, girls! and it's leap year, girls.

"Alien Souls" is the name of a picture in which Sessue Hayakawa and his wife Tsuri Aoki will appear shortly.

"Lady," the Thanhouser collie, is valued at $2,000.

Milton Sills, for long known as leading man with Carlotta Nilson, Blanche Bates, and Julia Dean on the speaking stage, has joined the William Fox Films in California.

Neil Shipman has gone to Vitagraph. She has entirely recovered from her recent blindness, which was caused by oak poison.

FEATURE FILMS OF THE WEEK

"By Whose Hand"—Equitable production in which Edna Wallace Hopper makes her debut in pictures. Charles Ross and Muriel Ostriche support her. All of these people are popular. Edna Wallace Hopper and Charles Ross have been great favorites "legitimately" and Muriel Ostriche is a pet of the screen.

"Feathertop"—Gaumont Mutual picture featuring Marguerite Courtot in a double rôle. This picture goes to show that though modern society may be a gaudy vessel it is an empty one.

"Haunted and Hounded"—Three act Knickerbocker star feature. Madeline Pardee takes the lead. Sounds like a combination of Poe and Pinkerton.

"Her Bitter Cup"—Five reel Red Feather Universal drama with Cleo Madison in the lead.

"Her Maternal Right"—World Film production featuring Kitty Gordon, she of the glorious back.

"Playing with Fire"—Five reel Metro drama featuring Madam Petrova in her famous emotional gymnastics.

"Silent Selby"—Three part Mustang drama with Anna Little and Thomas Chatterton playing the leads.

"Sin's Penalty"—Three part Vitagraph production featuring Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell. One of these paying, paying, paying things!

"Sold for Marriage"—Griffith Triangle drama featuring Lillian Gish.

"The Gay Lord Waring"—Bluebird Universal drama featuring J. Warren Kerrigan. Some bluebird!

"The Great Experiment"—Bluebird comedy drama featuring Violet Mersereau. Sayeth the press agent: "It is based upon the psychology of crime." Whoever based it, however, seems to have gotten some comedy out of it. If this is the case, he is to be congratulated.

"The Larrimore Case"—Three act Biograph drama featuring Vera Sisson.

"The Last Adventure"—Three reel Essanay drama. Lillian Drew, Edward Arnold, and John Lorenz play the leads.

"The Love Mask"—Lasky drama with Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely in the lead.

"The Other Way"—Three part Vitagraph drama featuring Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell.

"The Stepping Stones"—Triangle production with Mary Boland and Frank Keenan playing the leads. A good woman assists a man to rise and is discarded when he has attained the heights. His fall occurs soon after.

"The Three Wise Men"—Selig drama featuring Bessie Eyton and Thomas Santschi, supported by an all star cast. Make this your Easter week picture. It's worth while.

"The Wayfarers"—Three act American drama starring Alfred Vosburgh and Vivian Rich. Coincidence is the busy little worker in this plot.

Stationary Photoplays.

Castle—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "The Sowers," Lasky production, featuring Blanche Sweet. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, "The Heart of Paula," Equitable production. Leonore Ulrich is featured.

Colonial—"The Children in the House," five reel Fine Arts-Triangle, featuring Norma Talmadge. Also a Keystone comedy.

Fine Arts—"The Ne'er Do Well," Selig picturization of Rex Beach's novel. Kathlyn Williams and Wheeler Oakman are featured.

La Salle—"Carmen," four act Essanay burlesque on the opera. Charles Chaplin is featured.

Strand—"The No Good Guy," five reel Kay Bee-Triangle comedy drama, featuring William Collier and Enid Markey. Also a Keystone comedy.

Studebaker—"Molly Make Believe," Famous Players' picturization of Eleanor Hallowel Abbott's book. Marguerite Clarke is featured.

Ziegfeld—"The Half Million Bribe," Metro picturization of William Hamilton Osborne's novel, "The Red Mouse," featuring Marguerite Snow and Hamilton Revelle.

Buy Your Piano
NOW and HERE

NOW—because we are showing this week a most complete exhibit of new and rebuilt pianos and player-pianos.

HERE—because this is Piano Headquarters—the largest exclusive piano store in this city. You will find at our music rooms this week a new shipment of beautiful Mason & Hamlins and a complete showing of our famous new 1916 models.

The SOLO CAROLA INNER-PLAYER—the miracle player.
The MIDGET GRAND—a $750 tone for $585.
The EUPHONA INNER-PLAYER—$200 lower in price than any former Inner-Player.
The CONOVER Style 46 UPRIGHT—more conservatively priced than any other really great piano of today.
The KINGSBURY ART STYLE UPRIGHT—a made-to-order model at no advance in price.
The WELLINGTON BABY GRAND UPRIGHT—designed for city apartments and small homes.

And in addition a large number of rebuilt pianos, including such makes as A. B. Chase, Vose, Knabe, Chickering, Weber, Bradbury and Bush & Gerts. No matter what make you prefer or what amount you wish to invest, NOW is the time and HERE is the place to settle your piano question.

Used pianos accepted in part payment. Convenient terms arranged for those not wishing to pay cash.

Don't move your old piano. Sell it to us. We'll give you a due bill for its full cash value towards the purchase of a new piano or player-piano for your new home.

Monday's Great Easter Shopping Parade Wi[illegible] in APRIL 16TH. THIS IS A SKETCH OF THE BOARDWALK AT ATLANTIC CITY—THE BEST LOOKING, BEST DRESSED CROWD IN AMERICA. THERE'S MANY A $15 SUIT [illegible] CROWD THAT

SIEGEL COOPER & COMPANY says

You can buy any suit shown in the picture above tomorrow for $14.75. You can buy any hat shown for $5. You can buy any waist shown at from 95c to $5 (see the numbers on the waists and the corresponding numbers in the advertisement).

These are the things that will make the great Easter Shopping Parade come swinging along to this end of the Loop tomorrow and all next week.

Public appreciation of values is growing rapidly. People are beginning to know more about merchandise than some stores would like to have them know.

Women know, for example, that the suit for which certain stores are asking $40 probably cost $10 for labor and materials; and they want to know where the other $30 is going to.

Women know that a hat made from a piece of Milan Hemp with a cluster of flowers and a yard of ribbon should not cost over $5. And they are beginning to suspect those ultra-genteel mixtures of business and sentiment who try to charge them $25.

Even the "style" talk doesn't go any more, because women know that as quickly as a style is created deft fingers can copy it line for line, so that it is exactly the same as the original creation.

And these are some of the reasons why the great State Street Shopping Throng keeps swinging more and more to this end of the Loop.

Merchandise at the price of Merchandise has become popular, as these two solid pages of remarkable values will prove.

So this is our message to the people of Chicago: "If you want real values—Merchandise at the price of Merchandise—

Shop at This End.

Women's and Misses' $20 to $25 Suits at 14.75

This is our big Easter Sale. We have priced these Suits at other stores, and we know they are asking $20, 22.50 and $25 for exactly the same things. And here we have this wonderful array of them for 14.75.

The Styles Are:

Belted Models

POSTER SHOW RIOT OF COLOR.

If you enjoy reveling in bright colors, if you like to see them juggled with and massed together and then brought forth into an harmonious, splashing whole, you cannot fail to enjoy the Newark poster exhibition, which opened at the Art institute last Wednesday.

Quite without exaggeration, I am sure that every color extant has been brought into play in these different posters. They are a galaxy of hues. But they are attractive. And they are epoch making, too, in the history of this comparatively new branch of commercial art. For they have raised the standard of poster designing by their dignity and strength and rational treatment.

While no especial schooling is necessary to the average person to appreciate poster art, since its very essentials are an appeal to the popular taste, the successful poster must measure up to a large number of requirements. The judges who award decisions are governed by points just as cut and dried as those who award prizes at the horse show.

In the first place, it should be practical and appropriate. Its idea should convey each idea needed to attract the supposedly uniformed public to be instructed. Then there is the design, which, quite independent from the idea of the poster, must carry out adequately that idea or make a failure of the whole work. It should be simple, and it should be unusual; it should be bold, and yet not so blatant as to repel. Then, the colors must be striking and the enormous importance of contrast should not be overlooked. Even the lettering of a poster is important, since too large lettering or too small lettering, or lettering that for some reason or other is not legible, can spoil a whole poster.

The poster design of A. E. Foringer, which won the special prize by public vote, is really a remarkable innovation in the field of poster work. It is a painting that is in character with some of our best murals. Indeed, it is more suited to a mural than to a poster from its rare refinement of drawing. It's idea is symbolical entirely. Newark posed on the wheel of progress is displaying the various symbols of her advancement. She has in her hand the wand of Mercury, who is the god of trade. Her equipment of schools and libraries is symbolised by the lighted torch and her advancement in the field of industrial science by the retort and book. At her side is suspended the seal of the city, and the large gear wheel behind the figure typifies the large manufacturing interests of the city.

The immediate reason of this exhibition was the celebration by Newark of its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary. In 1666, the year that one sees mentioned on nearly every poster, Robert Treat, a Quaker, led a party of pioneers from Connecticut into New Jersey. There, on a site by the Passaic river, they laid the foundations of the city of Newark.

The first exhibition of these posters was held in the public library of Newark and was attended by thousands of people, an unusually large number in comparison with the numbers that other exhibits were wont to receive. The participation of the public in the awarding of one prize created much interest, and over 3,000 votes were cast.

The posters are for sale, and prices may be had from the person in charge of the exhibition.

Some water color paintings by Ferdinand Janin are on exhibit at the Art institute in place of the studies by Persis Kirmse. They are effective, appealing water color paintings.

From April 10 to April 24 there is an exhibition at Albert Roullier's art galleries of selected masterpices of burin and mezzotint.

A large portion of the current bulletin of the Municipal Art Society of New York, just issued, is devoted to the work of New York's art commission. This account, which is illustrated with contrasting designs, approved and disapproved by the commission, will doubtless clear away much popular misconception of the character and work of that body, and might be studied by municipalities everywhere.

Dr. John Quincy Adams, the executive official of the commission, has said, in describing its work: "The commission does not expect nor attempt to get masterpieces in every case. Its decisions are not based solely on artistic and ideal qualities, for with the city, as with the private citizen, many practical questions must be taken into account. What the commission persistently does do is to prevent the erection of the ugly and unsuitable, and in each case to secure the best possible structure under the circumstances."

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW by FANNY BUTCHER

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

Richard Harding Davis gave up his pen forever last Tuesday. Often he has had the opportunity of testing its power while swords were clashing about him. And always he wielded it with the zest and fervor of a soldier. He was 52 when he died, but the fire of youth had never been quenched in his heart.

Here are two documents which speak for themselves:

There are, I am sure you will agree with me in believing, many admirers of Rupert Brooke and his work in Chicago, who will welcome the opportunity to pay in some measure their debt to him, particularly remembering that this city stimulated and interested Brooke more than any other in America. You will observe that $5 is fixed as the maximum contribution. I may perhaps add that the dimes and nickels of those who wish to make their offering to his memory, but cannot afford the larger sum, will be welcomed in the spirit of their giving. English, no less than American, lovers of Rupert Brooke will be grateful to you for any assistance you may render in making Chicago's contribution worthy alike of the city and of the cause. MAURICE BROWNE.

It has been decided to set up in Rugby chapel, England, a memorial of Rupert Brooke in the form of a portrait-medallion in marble. The medallion will be the work of Prof. J. Havard Thomas, and is to be based on the portrait by Scheil. Contributions not exceeding $5 may be sent to Maurice Browne, Chicago treasurer, Rupert Brooke memorial fund, 434 Fine Arts building, Michigan avenue, and will be forwarded to England without deduction. Money left over after the completion of the medallion will be given to the royal literary fund.

An interviewer asked Amy Lowell what American poetry chiefly needs and she answered: "The thing that we chiefly need is informed and authoritative criticism. What we want is a critic who is neither an old man despairing of a better job, nor a young man using his newspaper work as a stepping stone to something higher. Of course, brilliant criticisms do appear from time to time, but what we need is criticism as an institution."

This story is being told to chuckling audiences. It sounds almost too good to be true. They say—the indefinable man who sagt, or the one who dit—it's a sure 'nuff yarn. A German and a Dane met recently in Schiller's house in Weimar. As they were gazing reverently at the scene, the German, swelling with pride, turned to the Dane.

"So this is where our national poet, Schiller, lived?"

Richard Harding Davis
A SNAP-SHOT TAKEN BY JOHN T. McCUTCHEON AT AMERICAN OUTPOST AT LEGARTO TWO YEARS AGO

"Pardon me," said the Dane, "not national, but international."

"How so?" asked the German, with Teutonic surprise.

"Why, consider his works," replied the Dane. "He wrote 'Mary Stuart' for the English, 'The Maid of Orleans' for the French, 'Egmont' for the Dutch, 'William Tell' for the Swiss."

"And what did he write for the Germans?" interrupted the other.

Snap came the answer, "For the Germans he wrote 'The Robbers.'"

Sir James Barrie is doing everything in his power to help with the war. "The latest thing he has done has been to provide a dramatic surprise in the form of a playlet which will be given at the coming royal matinée at the London Coliseum, all the proceeds of which will be devoted to Red Cross work," writes a London correspondent. "Not even the title of this surprise playlet has been revealed, but it will be acted by an all star cast selected by Barrie himself."

Booth Tarkinton, whose latest is "Seventeen" (Harpers), was voted the favorite author of fiction by the class of 1916 at Princeton. Tarkington's a Princeton man himself, an active alumnus, and one of the sure fire hits at all alumni banquets.

Willard Huntongton Wright, whose "The Man of Promise" (John Lane) is going to be talked about—and chastised—this spring, was asked why he wrote so many books on different subjects before he tried novel writing. He answered, "I consider the novel one of the most difficult and intricate of literary forms, and until I had spent many years studying the esthetic and documentary development of the novel I did not feel qualified to participate in its evolution. My present novel represents the result of ten years of sedulous apprenticeship in the art of writing."

For the Shakspeare centennial yet another useful book—"A Book for Shakspeare Plays and Pageants" (Dutton) it is called. "A Treasury of Elizabethan and Shakspearean Detail for Producers, Actors, Artists, and Students. Describing Elizabethan Life and Customs, the Costumes, Sports, Buildings, Court Festivities, the Stage and Drama, the Dances, the Songs and Music of the Period," by O. L. Hatcher, Ph. D., sometime professor at Bryn Mawr college. Profusely illustrated with nearly 200 portraits and pictures, mostly from contemporary sources, as well as the music for the songs and dances.

Sophie Kerr, whose "Love at Large" (Harper's) was published not long ago, is an editor as well as an author. "People ask me," she says "'When do you get time to write, when you have to be at your office all day?' To which I reply, 'There still remain nights, Sundays, and other holidays, and, like the old darky, "if you wants to bad enough you kin."' But, of course, it keeps me somewhat well employed."

◆

"Gibby of Clamshell Alley" (Dodd-Mead), is a Van Dresser family affair. Jasmine Stone Van Dresser wrote the story, her husband, William Van Dresser, illustrated it, and their son, Cleland, posed for the illustrations. Master Cleland was not such a willing mother's helper as he might have been, for he revolted against having to let his hair go uncut all the time he was posing.

Wholesome Cars for Wholesome People

Auburn SIX $1085

The men who know the value of the dollar own Auburn cars. They demand proof, not rhetoric; performance, not promises.

The Auburn is a family favorite, admired and trusted by mother, father and children. It is the family's out-door home—adequate to protect them in all road conditions—obedient to their control—reliable and safe—comfortable and commodious—dignified and creditable in appearance. There is nothing "sporty" about the Auburn nor has it a "cheap" look. It looks exactly what it is—a wholesome car, sound to the core, and acts the part year in and year out.

Look for excellence in every detail. We do not make one part good to feature it at the expense of the rest of the car. Every item of construction is of proportionate value.

GOODRICH SAFETY TREAD

That new, black—— ——"Barefoot" Rubber!

It took 47 years of Rubber-Manufacturing Experience to produce this wonderful new Goodrich Rubber.

It took the best efforts of the largest, and ablest, Research Department possessed by any Rubber Factory in America to develop it.

But,—it was worth all the time, effort, and skill, required to develop it.

Because, it has done for Goodrich Rubber what certain other marvellous Alloys have done for Steel and Bronze,—i. e., multiplied its EFFICIENCY for the purpose intended.

And, it has done this without increasing the cost of Goodrich Tires to Consumers.

One of its most valuable characteristics, for Tire (and Shoe) purposes, is its CLING quality—its tenacious grip on smooth and slippery surfaces.

Through that it gives its maximum Traction with a minimum of Friction.

When you put on the Brakes to stop the Car, or throw in the Clutch to start the Car, the Tires made of this black "BAREFOOT" Rubber instead of grinding against the ground for Traction, CLING to it, as your bare foot would cling to a slippery floor.

That's why we've finally christened it, and trade-marked it, as "Barefoot" Rubber.

Get a sliver of it, from any Goodrich Branch or nearest Dealer.

You'll find it stretch almost as much, and return to shape almost as instantly, as a pure Rubber band.

Weigh a Goodrich "Barefoot" Tire of any size against the corresponding size of other makes of Tire, and you'll find it many pounds lighter, though many "Miles" stronger.

Drive it, and you'll find in Goodrich "Barefoot" Tires a liveliness, a quick response to power, a tenacity of traction,—and all this with a Mileage capacity which will surprise and delight you.

We developed this "Barefoot Rubber" primarily for use in our now famous "Silvertown Cord" Tire which, last year, showed such marvellous ENDURANCE on the Race Track, at over 100 Miles per hour.

But we now make it into Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Motor-Cycle Tires,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires,—Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, as well as into Silvertown Cord Tires.

Because,—in all of these its characteristics of "Cling,—Spring,—Stretch,—Strength,—and Lightness" are first requisites.

Now, compare GOODRICH Fair-List prices with prices you are quoted for same size Tires of other Brands, that have not the wonderful Resilience and Cling-quality of this new black "Barefoot" Rubber, which can be had in no other Tires than those made by——

that gives you money's worth—and more.

Not only does this new way save you 15% to 40% of the usual cost of life insurance, but it also gives you the right kind of insurance service, based on thoroughly sound, tried and tested principles and scientifically computed rates.

4% Reserves—Low Premiums

The old line companies maintain 3% or 3½% reserves—we maintain 4% reserves based on a standard table of mortality; consequently, our premium rate is lower. Incorporated under Illinois laws, more than 100% solvent and with ample resources, this Association is not an institution for profit. Men and women insurable on equal terms.

Reliable Agents

VAUDEVILLE WIT

MAJESTIC.

Eddie Foy and Six Little Foys:

"Hello, Central. Gimme 1007456789543 New Rochelle. Nobody home? Whaddayamean nobody home? My family couldn't all go out at the same time.

"Hello. Yes. This is papa. Tell mamma I won't be home for dinner. What? She says it will be all right if I bring you home a doll. Well, what kind of a doll do you want? What? Your mother says to tell me I'll know what kind—that I know all about dolls. Well, you tell her I know enough not to bring the kind I know about home.

"Hello, son. How's things in New Rochelle? Say, son, which one is this? O, yes. Hello, kid. Load the folks into the car and come on downtown. Which car? Quit kidding; you know we only got one car—the truck. Get out of New Rochelle for the evening—that's the only town Columbus refused to discover.

"Hello. Who's this? O, you. What? The black chicken laid a duck egg today. Well, don't let the rooster know anything about it."

McVICKER'S.

Holden and Harron: "They tell me you've been traveling."

"Yes, I've been on a tour."

"O, you've been on a tear."

"Not a tear; a tour. I went through Europe."

"Did you get many pocketbooks?"

"Certainly not. I went to Europe for my liver."

"Did you have a stormy trip?"

"Very."

"Seasick?"

"No, the sea wasn't; I was."

PALACE.

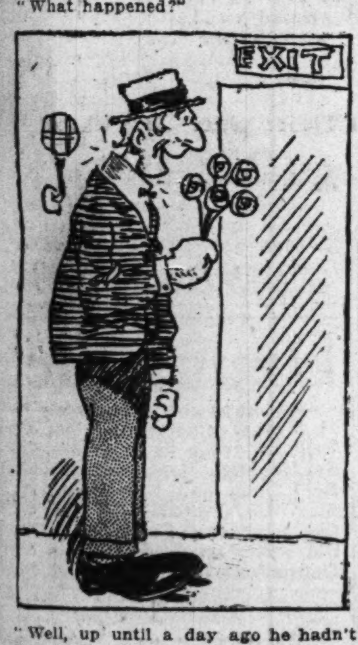
Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Barrie:

"Sy Terwilliger, the editor of the Henville Hornet, is certainly a great editor."

"How's that?"

"Well, he came right out and contradicted the New York Evening Journal the other day."

"What happened?"



"Well, up until a day ago he hadn't received any reply."

"I went down to New York for two weeks."

"How much did you get trimmed for?"

"It wasn't like that at all; in fact, I made my expenses."

"Why, how?"

"Well, everybody knew I was a rube just to look at me. So I went around and bought eggs for 15 cents a dozen and sold them as strictly fresh country eggs for 50 cents a dozen."

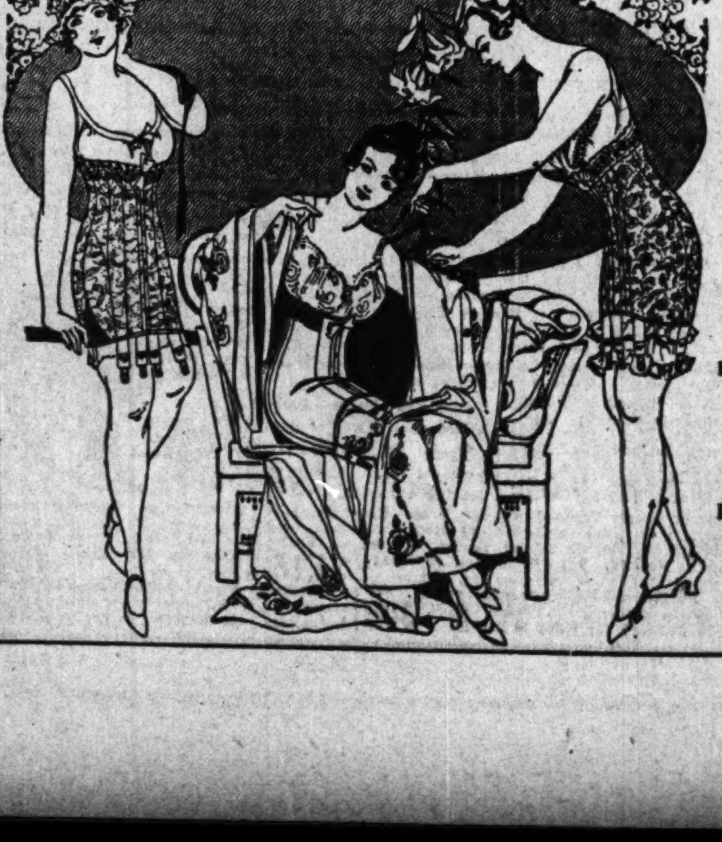
The Pink Corset Is So Very Fashionable for Easter

Third Floor—Center



that hundreds of women will be delighted to know that we are again prepared with R & G pink corsets in complete variety, but before we say more about it we want to stop and impress a goodly number of women who never seem to realize it until too late that their Easter clothes cannot fit properly nor have that swagger look unless they are fitted over a new corset. In demand, we just naturally feature the R & G Pink (flesh color) corsets, because they're made in so great a variety that we can fit you properly—and fitting here may be called a science, for it is a well known fact that the woman who has been fitted here becomes a permanent customer. The correctly fitted corset will not alone improve your health but your figure as well; your clothes will look smarter, too. For the fitting we make no extra charge. Note modish bust, the smoothly fitting hips, the straight back, the slight waist curve of the R & G corsets.

R & G corset, as illustrated, a beautiful pink brocade, will fit the average plump figure. This model has given the highest satisfaction and is extremely pleasing in every respect, the wide elastic section at side of skirt makes the garment self-adjusting to every body position. The bust is medium high, 6 hose supporters, sizes 21 to 30, at $5

R & G corset of pink dotted batiste. This model is much in demand, no boning over hips, has medium bust, attractively trimmed with ribbon and lace, with the fashionable nip at waist, fits average figures, sizes 19 to 30, at $3

R & G corset of pink coutil, low bust, long skirt, free hip, elastic lacing below front steel holds the corset firmly about the hips, attractively trimmed with lace and ribbon, 6 hose supporters, sizes 19 to 28, at........ 2.00

R & G corset of pink brocade, a colonial model, suggested by the clear resemblance of the present day styles to those of the colonial days. This has a medium bust, nips beautifully at the waist, the skirt is shorter than last season, sizes 19 to 26, at 3.00

R & G corset of pink batiste, topless, elastic band at top of corset, this is the popular corset with the debutantes, they love the freedom it gives, especially when dancing, sizes 19 to 26, at 1.50

Breathing Sea Air a Serious Business at Atlantic City

By Mme. X.

HAVE you ever been to Atlantic City? If not, many others have. The local claim is that 12,000,000 people a year go there. Yes, that means a monthly average of 1,000,000. The gaping visitor is also proudly told that taxes are paid on $100,000,000 worth of real estate along the famous Boardwalk. The topmost peak of the highest hotel is one foot higher than Bunker hill monument. Between us three, the prices of most Boardwalk hotels are higher than even this highest height. But then it's worth it, for the place is unique.

The combination of sea, sun, and air on the one hand and of the amazing line of hotels, shops, places of amusement, and densely packed, slowly moving, ever changing yet ever the same crowds on the other is something not found anywhere else in the world. Coney Island and the English seaside resorts, Brighton, Hastings, and Bournemouth, remotely resemble it, but are lacking in one characteristic of Atlantic City, its profound, impeccable, almost depressing respectability.

There are few daring flights of fancy in costume. Every one is fairly well dressed after a conventional fashion, but no one is dashingly smart. A pretty Chicago north side young matron, who wore a most becoming soft green felt sports hat and a rather bright check suit, was the most conspicuous figure on the Boardwalk a fortnight ago, and imparted the sole note of gayety to the scene, as she threaded her way swiftly through the slow moving throng.

There is nothing either in the vast corridors, restaurants, or assembly rooms of the hotels, or in the constantly moving procession on the sea front to suggest that the people come there for pleasure. Every one seems soberly and heavily intent on but one object, breathing sea air. So great is this universal obsession that you wonder it doesn't produce a strong, slow, unceasing east wind, or movement of air from out the ocean wastes into those millions of dutifully expanding and contracting lungs.

Respectability Pervades Resort.

Although Atlantic City is not a dry town, any evidence of overindulgence in alcoholic stimulants is entirely absent. As you survey that patient, dutiful, quiet multitude you almost wish that some rollicking Falstaff would come rolling along in one of those wheel chairs. But he doesn't. If there are any beautiful Camilles there they are disguised in the sober habiliments of the middle class respectability which pervades Atlantic City.

There is nothing to give the pleasant sting or shock to taste and traditions for which one leaves home and goes out into the world. Nor is the American "grand monde," which makes it a practice to spend a week or so at Atlantic City in the spring, distinguishable from the ruck and rabble there. The American ruck and rabble is so extraordinarily well dressed and presentable.

At the time these notes on Atlantic City were made a fortnight ago Mrs. Lorillard Spencer Jr., Prince and Prince Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, and Stephen B. Elkins Jr., Mrs. Gardner Cassatt of Philadelphia, Count Mankowski of Russia, Mayor John Purroy Mitchel of New York, and Mayor and Mrs. James H. Preston of Baltimore were among the frequenters of the Boardwalk, as were such well known Chicagoans as Princess Engalitcheff and her son, Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Fairbank, R. T. Crane Jr., Mrs. Harry Farnum, Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Walker, Miss Ethel Wrenn, and Mrs. Charles Bartlett.

The builders of Atlantic City missed a great opportunity. They had the same engineering problems to solve as the early Venetians. Like the latter, they built their city on a widespread sea marsh dotted with pulpy islands. Atlantic City, like Venice, rests on piles driven deep down through salt water, ooze, and sand to a substratum of solid earth.

Why, O why, didn't the builders of our seaside resort construct waterways instead of asphalt streets? Gondolas might have vied with wheel chairs as a means of getting from place to place. Reflected in tranquil canals, the towering domes and strange coloring of those extraordinary hotels might have gained a weird beauty now only vouchsafed them at night, when seen through the shimmer of the Boardwalks' electric lights.

Easter Sunday is the great day of the year there. Every room in the town is engaged months before for that date at exorbitant prices. Every wheel chair is in use and the double line of humanity, awheel and on foot, is so dense that, for the three or four miles that constitute the popular part of the Boardwalk's ten miles, it is only possible to move at a snail's pace.

It is certainly a place for the millions with the millions.

Entertain Herbert Ward.

The last week in Chicago society has been much occupied with Herbert Ward of England and Paris and his message about the work and needs of the American war relief clearing house at Paris. Incidentally, having fallen into the capable and hospitable hands of Chauncey McCormick, his personal entertainment has been thoroughly arranged.

Monday evening he dined en famille with the Chauncey McCormicks. On Tuesday they gave him a dinner. On Wednesday he was guest of honor at a luncheon at the Cliff Dwellers; later he visited the French war shop in East Washington street. Then he was rushed down to a reception that President and Mrs. Harry Pratt Judson gave at the university in his honor. That day ended with a dinner given for him by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Patterson. On Thursday he was dined by Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Carry and addressed a large meeting in the evening at Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Crane's. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Blair gave a dinner for him on Friday, preceding a reception when he again spoke on his personal experiences at the war. Yesterday he talked at the University club and later was fêted at Evanston, where he made one or two addresses. Tomorrow night the "Dick" Cranes give a dinner for him.

Mr. Ward's informal accounts of his personal experiences in ambulance work at various points along the French front, given on the various occasions here, were illustrated by exceedingly clever sketches which he had made at the scenes of his work. Both pictures and talk gave the most vivid idea of the terrible drama of life being hourly played out there of any description we've yet had.

In presenting the cause of the "war relief clearing house for France and her allies," Chauncey McCormick called the attention of those present at Mrs. Crane's and Mrs. Blair's to the fact that France and England had contributed $880,000 to the needs of Chicago after the great Chicago fire of 1871. Have we yet paid that debt even in part? We have not. It's up to us to disprove the proverbial ingratitude of democracies.

The fact that Mr. Ward has lost one son on the western battle line, that his only remaining son, a lad of 17, is a prisoner in Germany, and that he himself was severely wounded doing Red Cross ambulance work is certainly sufficient to account for the unrelieved sadness which envelops him. Added to these contributory causes is the fact that, as he is an artist, he probably has a temperament more easily affected and torn by the scenes and incidents of which he has had personal experience than would be the case with a man of a military, medical, or journalistic, or other toughening profession.

Example of American Efficiency.

The American clearing house at Paris, for which he comes as an advocate, is one of the finest evidences of American efficiency and generous sympathy that the war has evoked. It ranks with the Hoover committee in Belgium and the American ambulance hospital at Neuilly.

It was formed by Myron T. Herrick in Paris a month or two after the war opened, when he saw the hospital supplies beginning to flow into France with no proper agency for their reception or distribution. He formed a committee that evolved this clearing house which insured that contributions should go where they were needed. It is a huge task, as there are five hundred smaller hospitals in northern France alone, not to mention the many other departments of French need that Americans are trying to aid, such as the war orphans, the refugees, the families of destitute artists, and so forth. The French government is coöperating with the American clearing house by giving all goods shipped to it from this country right of way on French ships and railways.

The clearing house is under the management of a public spirited American, Mr. Beatty of San Francisco, who, like all the other workers in this enterprise, gives his time and brains for the love of the cause.

A Chicago committee is to be formed to coöperate with the parent organization and to this Chicago branch all who come henceforth with calls for help for the various needs of suffering Europe must be duly accredited.

Scant Appreciation of Art.

What is the matter with Chicago? Are we really lacking in appreciation of the exquisite in art? The Russian ballet came here and played to spare and scattered audiences, and now Yvette Guilbert, supreme in her line, is with us and nightly plays to small, though enthusiastic, gatherings with a gloomy background of empty seats and untenanted galleries.

When she came here twenty years ago crowds thronged her performances. To be sure she is all those twenty years older, but it was not her youth that attracted then, nor, knowing my Chicago, do I think it was her art then that drew the throngs. It was the advance rumors of the audacious quality of her songs, their racy, possibly salacious, flavor.

Now that she has achieved the dignity of being "une femme sérieuse, une vraie artiste," we neglect her. To the connoisseur, however, she is still a delight. She plays on your emotions with exquisite precision. After an evening with her one wants to shriek out a protest to the inattentive world to take instant measures to stop the destruction of a people so supremely artistic and with so beautiful a language as the French. They are going and nothing will ever take their place.

The French war shop gave an impromptu reception for Mme. Guilbert on Thursday afternoon.

Meeker-Cramer Wedding.

The quintessence of youth was the Meeker-Cramer wedding last Wednesday afternoon. The bride, the bridegroom, and the bridal attendants all looked so gay and young and so confident that this was a good world that there was none of the sad solemnity that marks many a marriage ceremony.

The ceremony was performed in the Meekers' stately golden bronze tinted library at the south end of the room.

Pedestals, crowned with baskets of spring flowers and looped together by broad white ribbons, marked the passageway through the assembled company which the bridal party traversed from the door to where Dr. McClure stood, with Ambrose Cramer Jr. and the latter's best man, Donald Ryerson. More spring flowers stood in tall vases in the corners of the room and on every table and console.

The respective families of the bride and groom are so much a part of Chicago and are so numerous and ramified that quite every other person in the gathering was a relative of one or the other. Chicago is fast developing a society so interrelated by marriage that in another generation it bids fair to be a great big family party. That is, this might happen but for the constant influx of people from other cities brought here usually by business considerations.

The actors in the famous Casino film play, being constructed under the leadership of Allen Haines, Roy McWilliams, and others, will have a busy time next week. On the evening of the 27th there is to be an assembly ball—a real one—in the Blackstone crystal ballroom, wherein will figure most of the governors and matrons of these affairs. In the middle of the evening the company will give itself over to going through the movements of a scene of the film plays. The guests will enter and be received by the matrons; Allen Haines will lead a figure in the cotillion and other regulation events will be acted out. Before and after this interval of movie business those present will participate in a real ball.

On the Saturday and Sunday following other films will be worked out in Lake Forest, where various stage settings will be furnished by the noted spots in that far famed neighborhood. There will be a dinner and dance at the Onwentsia club and a polo match on the polo field, among other features for the movie drama. Already house parties are being organized for the participants in the performance.

There is a fearful and deadly fascination in the chance offered in this enterprise to see yourself as others see you. Jack as the world sees him and Jack as he sees himself are two different objects of manly beauty. Few of us underrate our corporeal pulchritude, so that it is probable there will be some severe disappointments among the amateur participators in this drama when the films are finally released for public joy.

It is hoped that this release will be in mid May, when an initial performance at the Casino will be a prelude to a long career of appreciation on the part of the public. A quarter of the net receipts is to go to the national Red Cross.

The Roy McWilliamses are giving an informal buffet supper this evening to the organizers of this enterprise, when various details will be worked out.

Young Lawyers Honored.

Recently signal honors have befallen two of Chicago's younger legal lights. Thomas Swan of the firm of Bentley, Burling & Swan, was offered and accepted the post of dean of the Yale Law school, while Albert Kales of Kelly, Kales & Hale, has consented to fill a law professorship for a year at the Harvard Law school, which appointment may be of longer duration if Mr. Kales can bring himself to sever his connections with his native place. Mr. Kales comes directly by his legal acumen, as his father, the late Judge Kales, was one of the best known and most respected lawyers of his time here.

From a sick bed in New York, Mrs. William J. Chalmers is still active in organizing and directing the great "War Songs of America" festival, which is to take place here early in May. She has sold all of the Auditorium's fifty-seven boxes and is having twelve more added to fill the demand.

The young women who are to sell music and programs will be a charming feature of the occasion, as they are to be dressed in flowered organdies worn over billowing and burgeoning hoopskirts. The spirit and form of 1861-'65 is to be restored for the occasion.

Demand for "Follies" Tickets.

The Junior league is one of our most delightful and inspiring institutions. It expresses completely the boundless enthusiasm and self-belief of youth and justifies both. In the cast for the Junior league "Follies," to be presented on April 25, are over 150 young people.

Mrs. Thornhill Broome, chairman of the box committee, has sold fifty-three of the fifty-seven boxes, which means $3,680 in hand, while Miss Marian Forgan, who has the sale of the seats in charge, announces that only fifty remain on the main floor and the balcony is going like hot cakes.

Every day Donald Macdonald puts the performers through their paces in the three acts that compose the review.

The Junior league rest rooms for working girls is the object for which it is raising this money. These are in new quarters in the Consumers building and consist of two rooms, charmingly decorated and furnished by Miss Cornelia Conger. One room contains sixteen cots and the other has a half a dozen sewing machines and a complete kitchenette equipment. There are also two bathrooms and shower baths.

Is there a call for these rest rooms? I should say there was. An average of eighty girls a day use them. There were 1,809 girls last month who availed themselves of the various opportunities of rest and rehabilitation offered there.

Besides these rooms the Junior league maintains a bed at St. Luke's for girls registered at the restrooms—a bed that is always occupied by some working girl in need of medical care.

Mrs. James Forgan Jr. is president of the Junior league and Mrs. Addison Stillwell is manager of this entertainment.

Parents' League to Hear Surette.

April 26 is to be a full day for high brow fashionables—and the terms sometimes seem almost synonymous. On that afternoon Thomas Surette of Boston will speak on "Children and Music" before that august body, the Parents' league, at the residence of Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick.

He is the apostle of a new method of teaching music to the young. Two hundred thousand little Boston boys and girls are now being musically inoculated under his supervision with the folk songs which he says are the basis and fabric of all music. Mr. Surette is a magnetic expounder of his own musical theories. He catches the unwary Boston business man at the noon hour and talks to him on music until the cares and preoccupations of the day fade away.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson is going to give him a chance at Chicago business men by getting up for him a course of lectures at 5 in the afternoon of April 28 and 30 and May 2. The first one, on Bach, will be at Mrs. James Waller's; the second, on Beethoven, at Mrs. Ryerson's, and the third, on Brahms, at Mrs. George Higginson's.

The parents' league is furthermore making arrangements for a talk from Gen. Leonard Wood at the Auditorium in May.

On the evening of April 28 another coterie of h. b. f.'s will be found at the City club listening to Mrs. Elsie Clews Parsons (or Mrs. Herbert Parsons, as you may prefer to call her), on some phase of society life. Mrs. Parsons has a delightful way of startling and horrifying the staid, conservative, conventional stock from which she sprung. Sociology is her hobby, and on various phases of it she has written various books.

Be sure to get some of your Easter blossoms at the flower sale next Saturday in the Elizabethan room of the Congress hotel. The proceeds of the sale will go to the home for destitute crippled children. Miss Grace Dixon is president of the Childrens Flower association, which holds the sale.

Sunbeam Dances Raise Funds for Children's Work.

By Hazel Whitaker.

WITHIN the four years of its existence the Sunbeam league has spread its cheering, helpful rays into the hearts and homes of hundreds of sick and helpless children. Not only time but money is needed to do this, so twice a year large social affairs are given, and this spring a series of tea dances have been added to raise more money. The big spring card party is to be held in the gold room of the Hotel La Salle on April 27, for which over fifty prizes have already been donated.

About $1,200 is raised yearly in this way, and with this money four kindergartens are maintained, with a paid kindergartner at each. Two of these are at the Cook county hospital, one in the children's, the other in the eye, ear, nose, and throat ward; the third at the Crippled Children's home, the fourth at the Home for Convalescent Women and Children.

Under competent supervision, these maimed, sick children, whenever their condition permits, are taught the fascinating kindergarten lessons, such as making baskets, furniture, laces, woven mats, models in clay, etc. Thus they are able to while away what would otherwise be long, dreary hours. Some samples of their best work are kept on display at the hospital, the others are taken home when the hospital days are over.

Miss Katherine Stiles, Miss Mary Larkin, Miss Catherine Seymour, and Miss Harriett Stewart are on the committee in charge of the third annual charity ball of the Iota Beta Phi sorority, which will be held on Friday evening, May 5, in the Hotel La Salle. The proceeds will be used for the charity work of the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial Lodging House for Women at 2412 Prairie avenue.

Besides this biggest branch of their work, these young women have been instrumental in opening at the county hospital a circulating library for the children's use. Two graphophones have also been contributed to further liven up dull hours.

Last October all the children who were able were taken to enjoy the "sunshine" of the flower show. Christmas with the league has become a season of great celebrating, for there are parties at all four nurseries, parties that include the mothers, sisters, and brothers at home. Not only were these made happy last year, but twenty-five other families received Christmas cheer. This part of the "sunshine" has so spread that each year the league is reaching more and more children and helping more and more families outside of those it knows through the hospitals; in fact, a call for immediate help is answered at any time during the year.

An exceedingly effective plan has been worked out, whereby some member visits each of the four nurseries a different day each week for the purpose of entertaining and reading to the children. Each part of the city is in charge of a supervisor whose duty it is to arrange these visits. Miss Patrice Thomas, 5241 Kenmore avenue, is the north side supervisor; Miss Suzanne McGinsie, 887 Drexel square, the south side; Miss Mary Holabird, 424 South Irving avenue, the west side.

The present membership of 200 includes both regular and associate members. Once married, a member cannot hold office and votes only at the general election.

Both board and general meetings are held once a month at the Hotel La Salle. The annual election and meeting will be held this year on Wednesday

The present officers are: President, Miss Persis Rollins; first vice president, Miss Mildred Benson; second vice president, Miss Nan Gore; recording secretary, Miss Faye E. Hart corresponding secretary, Miss Mary Cushing; treasurer, Miss Nettie Baumann; chairman of arrangements, Miss Marie Buhmann.

Besides the regular officers there are two directors—Miss Elizabeth Harris and Miss Naomi Scanlan, whose duty it is to supervise the entire work of the organization.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

There will be a meeting of the Chicago Political Equality league on Saturday at 2 p. m. Prof. James H. Tufts of the department of philosophy, University of Chicago, will give an address on "Future Legislation in Social Welfare." William B. Owen, who is president of the Chicago Teachers' college, will speak on "The Responsibility of Lawmakers to Education." There will also be an address by John D. Shoop, superintendent of schools.

On Wednesday the Pennsylvania colony and Susquehanna village of the Illinois Colony club will hold its annual "fort meeting" at the Auditorium hotel. The program includes a reception. There will be songs, instrumental music and interpretative dances, also a matinée minstrel, in which thirty members are taking part, under the direction of Mrs. Edward J. Buchan. Mrs. D. Harry Hammer, commander in chief, will be the guest of honor.

Le Cercle Français will hold its regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Anna Morgan studios in the Fine Arts building. The program will consist of a play, "La Cigale chez les Fourmis," by La Biche, followed by a paper to be read by Mrs. Harry B. Lusch on the author of the play.

Our Lady of Providence alumnæ will give an informal reception and dance in the twin ballrooms of the Hotel La Salle on May 19.

On Tuesday the North Carolina colony and Manteo village of the Illinois Colony club will meet at the Morrison hotel for luncheon at 12:30.

Arrangements are being made by the Chicago chapter of the St. Marys of the Woods alumnæ for a lecture and musical to be given next month.

The newly elected officers of the Daughters of Indiana are: Mrs. Joseph L. Davis, president; Mrs. M. R. Stuart and Mrs. S. Shaw, vice presidents; Mrs. Charles M. Carver, recording secretary; Mrs. James F. Gould, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Thomas J. Jackson, treasurer.

The Oberlin women will meet for luncheon at 12:30 on Wednesday in Field's north grillroom.

On Wednesday the Chicago Woman's club will hold its closing literary meeting in Recital hall, Fine Arts building, at 2 p. m. The afternoon will be devoted to the welfare of the child and Miss Julia C. Lathrop will tell of the children's bureau. The home, philanthropy, and philosophy and science departments will hold their business meetings Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. The reform department will, in addition to the election of department officers and committees, have reports on the Sunday open door, by Mrs. Henry S. Jaffray; Juvenile Protective association, by Mrs. Benjamin Eldridge Page, and the county section, committee on public affairs, by Mrs. Henry Solomon. A special meeting of the club will be held in the club parlors on Tuesday at 2 p. m. to consider the questions of park consolidation and the municipal pier. Under the auspices of the forestry class and of the Woman's Outdoor Art league, the Lincoln highway films will be shown in Studebaker theater Tuesday from 10 to 12 in the morning, and in Fullerton hall, the Art institute, from 1 to 6 in the afternoon. The art and literature department will present its annual program in commemoration of the birthday of William Shakespeare in the Fine Arts theater Saturday at 10:30 a. m. The program is as follows: Song, "Shades of Night," Mrs. John C. Shaffer; "An April Night's Dream," Mrs. Joseph N. Redfern; "The Understudy," Miss Helen Bagg; "Shakespeare and the Foreigners," Mrs. Wilson G. Baker; "Loon River Shakespearology," Miss Florence Beckett; "Shakespeare and Music," Miss Hattie Summerfield, with Mrs. Hyde Wallace Perce at the spinet; sonnets [a], Shottery; [b], cinematograph, Mrs. Vibe K. Spicer; "Shakespeare's Last Message," Mrs. Charles A. Goodnow; "Shakespearean Fantasy," planned by the chairman, assisted by pupils of Mrs. Wilson's school, under the direction of Miss Lucy Duncan Hall. Following the program in the theater there will be a luncheon in the clubrooms.

On Saturday, May 6, the annual luncheon of the Catholic Woman's league will be held in the Hotel La Salle. Mrs. James Carroll is luncheon chairman. Mrs. Samuel K. Wilson is president of the league.

The following lectures and demonstrations will be delivered at the School of Domestic Arts and Science, Tower building, 6 North Michigan avenue, during the week: Tuesday, 10:30 a. m., demonstration, "Evening Refreshments"; Wednesday, 10:30 a. m., "American Potteries," A. S. Hope; 2 p. m., "Some Ideas on Women's Clothes from a Mere Man's Point of View," A. Lawrence Erickson.

At the Renaissance club's annual meeting tomorrow at the Art institute, the election of officers, revision of by-laws, and reports of chairmen of committees will be the business of the day.

The League of Cook County Clubs will meet in the Corinthian room, Masonic temple, on Saturday at 10:30 a. m. Short reports will be given by club presidents.

At the annual meeting of the Illinois chapter, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Charles Salmon; vice president, Mrs. B. A. Fessenden; recording secretary, Mrs. George H. Bryant; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harry C. Ellis; treasurer, Mrs. I. C. Cope; registrar, Mrs. N. C. Shumway; historian, Mrs. William B. Austin; chaplain, Mrs. William E. Sims; custodian of flag, Mrs. George F. Cook.

The Central Eleanor club, 16 North Wabash avenue, will have as its speaker Prof. Henry Cowles, and music by Miss Norma Altermatt, violinist, today. The program will be from 4 to 5 and a social hour will follow.

The regular meeting of the First Ward Civic league will be held on Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. at Community center, Dearborn and Harrison streets.

Chapter A, Illinois P. E. O., will meet tomorrow at the Auditorium hotel at 2 p. m. Mrs. John O'Connors will talk on "Group of English Essays."

The regular meeting of the I Will club will be held in the Hotel La Salle at 2 p. m. on Thursday. John D. Shoop will be the principal speaker.

The next regular meeting of the Lloyd George chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the British Empire will be held at the Auditorium hotel Tuesday evening.

SOUTH SIDE CLUBS.

On Friday the Martha Washington club will hold its annual meeting at the residence of Mrs. Edwin A. Wise, 6326 University avenue.

Fifty presidents of as many clubs and organizations accepted the hospitality of the Arché club on President's day. There was a program of music and brief talks by Mrs. Zimmerman, Mrs. Fred Dow, and Mrs. Charles Caldwell.

At the annual luncheon and business meeting of the Bryn Mawr Woman's club, held on Monday, the following officers were elected. President, Mrs. Isaac N. Powell; first vice president, Mrs. H. M. Cone; second vice president, Mrs. F. W. Sweet; recording secretary, Mrs. Albert Griswold; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. D. Rock; treasurer, Mrs. B. B. Phelps; chairman of the philanthropic department, Mrs. F. A. Morgan; art and literature, Mrs. H. F. Heath; home, Mrs. M. G. Hausler; civics, Mrs. Allen Laird; delegates to general federation biennial, Mrs. I. N. Powell and Mrs. T. C. Lutz; delegates to state federation, Mrs. I. N. Powell and Mrs. H. M. Cone; alternates to state federation, Mrs. Quinton Johnstone and Mrs. H. F. Heath.

On Tuesday chapter A, I. P. E. O., will meet at the home of Mrs. E. B. Jacobs, 6405 Kenwood avenue. Mrs. George B. Young will speak on "The Wild Flowers of Chicago and Vicinity."

The South Side club will use the Kenwood theater in Forty-seventh street on Wednesday afternoon from 1:30 until 6 o'clock, showing the Lincoln highway motion picture film.

The Neighborhood Child Study circle of the Washington Park Congregational church will hold a meeting on Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock at the church. Mrs. Berry will entertain the club by telling stories.

Cards are out announcing the dancing and card party of the Loretto alumnæ of Woodlawn Thursday evening, April 27, at the Hotel Del Prado. The Misses Aileen Fitzpatrick, Florence Fox, Loretto Burke, Kathleen Malooly, and Helen Fitzpatrick are actively interested in the success of the party. Mrs. Gerald Fitzgibbons is in charge of the cards and will be assisted by Mrs. James Carroll and Mrs. L. V. Combs.

At the Woman's guild of Plymouth church on Tuesday, April 25, at 8:30 in the evening at the home of Frank B. Stone, 4940 Woodlawn avenue, Marie White Longman will give a song and story program.

The South End Woman's club will hold its "welfare and reciprocity day" on Wednesday at Bessemer park.

The Chicago Literary Score will meet on Tuesday with Mrs. T. E. Swiney, 7020 Clyde avenue, for election of officers.

Tomorrow the Frances Willard Parent-Teacher club will hold its annual business meeting at 2:30 in the school assembly hall. Election of officers will take place and chairmen of standing committees will report.

The Lewis Champlin Parent-Teacher association will have a social next Thursday at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. F. Moody, 424 West Sixty-first street.

Tomorrow the Englewood Woman's club will hold its annual business meeting and election of officers. Reports will be given by the officers and chairmen of committees. A special luncheon at 12:30 p. m. will be a feature.

The Ridge Woman's club holds its annual meeting Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. During recess a cafeteria lunch will be served.

At the annual meeting of the Morgan Park Woman's club the following new officers were elected: Mrs. D. A. McQueen, president; Mrs C. G. Blake, vice president; Mrs. B. L. Verner, secretary; Mrs. O. E. Blew, treasurer.

There will be a meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of the Carter Practice school on Tuesday at 2:30 p. m.. Mrs. Moses Purvin will speak on "The School as a Community Center."

Tomorrow evening Anthony Matre will present his illustrated lecture on "The Life of Christ and the Passion Play of Oberammergau" at the new auditorium, Paulist Settlement, 11222 South Wabash avenue. It is the hope of those in charge that sufficient funds will be realized from this affair to extend the work of the settlement.

Tomorrow the children's south side free dispensary will hold its annual meeting at 10:30 a. m., at the home of Mrs. F. A. Poor, 4890 Grand boulevard.

Gossard Corsets

Two Figures Gossards Successfully Fit Daily

The Short Waisted Figure

WOMEN of this type may be tall, medium or short. What they desire is a longer waist—lower bust—ample room under the arm—reduced hip line—smaller lower back and the elimination or reduction of the fullness so noticeable in front at the top of the corset. Slender figures with short waists are just as exacting in their corset needs.

Thousands of short-waisted women today have the appearance of the average ideal figure because of some special Gossard. You can be fitted in a few minutes. A few of the models for your figure are listed below. Have a trial fitting tomorrow.

Three special Gossards designed with great care for this "rather difficult to fit figure," at each.... $12.50
Designed in a low bust, long skirt, short-waisted effect is a special Gossard in a figured material, at.... $8.50
One of the most popular selling models in the Gossard line is a special model for this figure, priced at.... $2.00
Four special Gossards that enjoy great favor with many women of this figure type are specially priced each at.... $3.50
Even at the price, this special Gossard enjoys a very large sale because of the wonderful figure improvement possible.... $25.00

The Arched Back Figure

OVER HALF of the women who come to us for a correction of their back line are natural figures, who have been incorrectly corseted for many years. A hollow, or curve at the waist line, accentuates the lower back, always. When the shoulder blades are prominent it adds to the unsightliness of the back line. So many women of this figure type have been helped that we are positive a special Gossard will do as much for you. It requires less than six months to correct, absolutely, this unsightly line. Some of the most popular Gossards for this type are described below. Any one will help you—and the improvement will be seen by you immediately. A trial fitting does not obligate you.

For this "rather difficult to fit figure" is a model developed in imported silk brocade, at.... $15.00
Five special models in long wearing batiste, each at.... $6.50
Three models whose sale continues to grow, each ideal for this figure type, special at.... $8.50
One special model that enjoys a tremendous sale at.... $2.50
Five Gossards for the woman who limits her corset expenditure to.... $5.00

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME.

Miss Shirley Barker

Miss Barker is pictured here in the costume which won for her the first prize of an automobile, presented for the most original get-up at the annual American Fakirs' ball held in New York last week. The Fakirs are well known artists and the proceeds of their yearly gatherings are devoted to art students and talented but needy artists.

Many Weddings Planned for Spring Season.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Everything in the polite world goes, you know, by seasons, and now is approaching the most important season of all. I refer to the time allotted to getting married. Everybody is about to stop all other activities and see through the usual spring crop of brides and bridegrooms in their big event.

As somebody has said—somebody belonging to the circle—there are so many weddings arranged for the early summer that one scarcely will have time to change cars in getting from one to another. One popular usher is planning to get a high power machine in order to be sure of making his various engagements.

Invitations to country weddings are the most coveted invitations of the year, and this summer there are to be more of them than for many seasons past. Of course, these occasions themselves will result in other engagements, as there seems to be something especially irresistible in the situation of a young man and a young woman standing side by side as usher and bridesmaid at a wedding. Nature seems to look for these occasions for getting in her deadly work.

To Wed Lord Torphichen.

There is always a particular romance surrounding an international marriage, especially when one of the contracting parties carries a title. Mr. and Mrs. Windlow St. Pierce of Dunstable, Bay Shore, Long Island, have just announced the engagement of their daughter, Grace, to John Gordon Sandilands, Lord Torphichen, of Calder house, West Lothian, in Scotland. The smart little colony on Long island is all agog over the news.

Lord Torphichen is serving with the British army. He is the thirteenth bearer of the name and has succeeded to it within the year. It was created in 1564 and is in full Baron Torphichen of St. John of Torphichen, West Lothian, in Scotland. He was born in 1886. His mother was a daughter of Lieut. Gen. Charles Edward Parke Gordon, C. B. He has an elder sister and a younger brother.

The history of the Sandilands is a romantic one. Several times the title has gone to an uncle or a nephew or a grandnephew. The first Lord Torphichen at the time of the reformation held the office of prior of St. John, head of the Knights Hospitalers, a position that gave him a place in parliament among the greater barons.

The bride to be came out in London two seasons ago, when she was the guest of Miss Beatrice Elliott, daughter of Sir Arthur and Lady Elliott, at their town house in Portland square. Mr. Sandilands, now Lord Torphichen, paid a great deal of attention to her at the time, and he came over here last summer to visit her family. Her debut was made in New York a year ago last winter. Mr. Pierce, her father, is a director of a number of large railroads and has law offices at 37 Wall street. He is a member of many clubs, among them being the Metropolitan, the Lawyers', and the New York Yacht clubs.

Wins Titled Woman.

Naturally I have not many announcements of the magnitude of this for the column, but there is one other involving some one of title. The usual situation this time is reversed. It is not often that we hear of an American man marrying a foreign maiden of title. The title does not appeal to the American man. It is our home bred girl who hunts them down. Our American man does not get the title when he marries, and he could not use it if he did.

Not for titles, however, but for love, Lieut. Marburg Jr. of the royal naval flying corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Marburg of 14 West Mount Vernon place, is to marry Baroness Gesselle de Vavario, a member of one of the oldest families in Belgium. The announcement was made last week by Mrs. Marburg after she had received a cable message from her husband, who was one time United States minister to Belgium, saying that his son and his son's fiancée were in London. No other details were given, but the boy's mother said that the marriage would probably take place in London before her husband and son and the baroness started for America. They had intended to come on board the Noordam, but it did not sail and probably will not do so before next week.

A friend of Lieut. Marburg's in Baltimore received a letter from an acquaintance saying that the young aviator had married the "most beautiful woman in Belgium." If Mrs. Marburg is not mistaken, this announcement was premature and her son is not yet wed. Romances of the day, with their war setting and entanglements, have a stirring and a martial quality indeed.

Mrs. Spencer's Niece Engaged.

Over and above all this Mrs. Edwards Spencer of 11 West Sixteenth street has announced the engagement of her niece, Miss Huguette De Foras, to Charles Campbell Jr., first secretary to the American legation at Berne, Switzerland.

Miss de Foras is with her parents at the Chateau de Thuise at Haut Savoie Thuon, near Lake Geneva on the French side. For several years she lived in New York with Mrs. Spencer, and is said by numerous acquaintances to be a most attractive young woman. She is the daughter of Comte and Comtesse Max de Foras, the latter of whom was Miss Marie Meredith Read of New York and a sister of Mrs. Spencer, to whom the cable of announcement was sent.

Mr. Campbell was born in St. Louis in 1886 and he lives in Charlottesville, Va. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia and has practiced law. He was appointed third secretary of the ambassy in Tokio in 1909. Since then he has been secretary of legation in Roumania, Serbia and Bulgaria.

Miss Edith January Elliott, daughter of Howard Elliott, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, and of Mrs. Elliott, has selected her bridal attendants. She will be married on April 29 to Edmund Pendleton Rogers of Hyde Park and New York. Society of New York, Boston, Providence, and St. Louis will be represented. Miss Janet Elliott will be the bride's chief attendant. The wedding will take place in Emanuel church, Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Rogers will take a party of young people in a private car to the wedding.

The smart set is being ravaged by a dread foe. The measles are abroad and spreading. Miss Lida Fleitmann was obliged to cancel her entries at the Brooklyn horse show because of a severe attack. She had intended jumping her horses, Cygnet and Secuga—and this, although she is obliged to limp, owing to her accident at the Piping Rock horse show a year ago. She has been in the saddle for several weeks schooling her jumpers for the spring horse shows.

The last and largest of the many costume balls of the winter season was held last week by the Association of Fakirs at the Vanderbilt hotel. The purpose of the organization, which numbers among its members many well known artists, is to encourage American art, and the proceeds of the annual balls are devoted to the aid of art students and indigent artists of talent. The costumes were in many respects the most daring and gorgeous of the season, which has been especially keen for costume balls. Miss Shirley Barker, an artist, won the first prize of an automobile given for the cleverest costume. Her costume was of a transparency for which Flo Ziegfeld's designer has a predilection.

Fraulein Marie Meyer

Fraulein Marie Mayer of Oberammergau will tell the story of her kinsfolk and of the Passion Play of Oberammergau in the interest of the Guardian Angel's settlement today at 3 o'clock at Powers' theater. All her life has been spent practically in preparation for the Passion Play. In 1892 she was a little girl in the triumphant scene of the entry into Jerusalem; ten years later she was the angel in the scene of the "Agony in the Garden of Gethsemane," and in 1910 she realized what had been her mother's unfulfilled ambition and appeared as Mary Magdalene. In 1920 when the sturdy villagers have returned from the trenches Marie Mayer hopes to play the mother of Christ. The lecture will be preceded by a musical by George Hrusa, Thomas J. McGranahan, and Miss Katherine Madden. Following are patronesses of the event:

Mrs. W. A. Amberg,
Mrs. C. F. Spalding,
Mrs. J. H. Barnard,
Mrs. M. J. Russell,
Miss Adelia Hopkins,
Miss Mary T. Cudahy,
Mrs. T. C. Dennehy,

WEDDINGS.

Miss Mildred Swigart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Swigart of 190 East Chestnut street, is to marry Arthur Andrews Burrows on Tuesday, April 25, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at St. James' Episcopal church.

The wedding of Miss Hannah Ferguson, daughter of Mrs. H. Ferguson of 4801 Grand boulevard, and David J. Chatkin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Chatkin, 4534 South Michigan avenue, took place on Wednesday at 4:30 o'clock, at the Ashland club.

A double wedding took place Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock, at the Little theater, Fine Arts building, when Miss Elma A. Pease of Huron, S. D., business manager of the Little theater, was married to Edward H. Taylor of the Stratford hotel, and Miss Winifred L. Taylor, daughter of Mr. Taylor, became the bride of Knowles Entrikin. Miss Taylor and Mr. Entrikin are members of the Little Theater company.

April 26 is the date set for the wedding of Miss Lucille Griffith Monroe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Ross Monroe of 5321 Blackstone avenue, and William Burchard Day. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. John Henry Hopkins at the Church of the Redeemer, and will be followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents.

The wedding of Miss Hortense G. Gowing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Parker Gowing of Wilmette, and Eliot Howland Evans will take place at the home of the bride's parents April 25 at 7:30 o'clock. The bride will be attended by Miss Katherine Ziesing of Glencoe and Miss Marian Rinn of Chicago as bridesmaids. Charles Evans Jr. will serve his brother as best man.

At the wedding of Miss Janet Vincent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Vincent of the Virginia hotel, and Joseph Shumway Barker, which is to be celebrated on Monday, April 24, at 4:30 o'clock in St. James' Episcopal church, the bride will be attended by her sister, Mrs. Lloyd Canby, as matron of honor, and by Mrs. Charles R. Vincent, a sister-in-law; Mrs. Howard H. Spaulding Jr., Miss Ellen Barker, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Rosamond Goodrich. There will be no maid of honor. Philip Ryder will act as best man for the bridegroom, and the ushers will be Charles R. Vincent, brother of the bride; Lloyd Canby, Ritchie Kimball, Robert Hammond, and Howard Spaulding Jr.

Miss Eleanor Freer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Freer, was married yesterday to Russell T. Wilson, a grandson of the late R. T. Crane. Relatives and a few intimate friends were the only guests present when the service was read.

Miss Rose Tuberville Griffiths, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Griffiths of Evanston, and Earle K. Radford of Kansas City were married on Saturday evening, April 8, at the residence of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Baganza of 4514 Washington boulevard announce the marriage of Miss Rida Marie Rein to H. Sidney Smith of Indianapolis.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Stowell of Minneapolis announce the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor, to Howard Hibbard, son of Edward R. Hibbard of Oak Park. The wedding will take place in June. After the honeymoon the young couple will reside in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kendrick of 1312 North State street announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Elizabeth, to Xavier Vigeant, son of Mrs. Marie E. Vigeant of 1216 Astor street.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Small of Highland Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjory Claire, to Walter Neilson, son of Mrs. Margaret Neilson of Evanston.

Anniuncement is made of the engagement of Miss Barbara Meyer of 2838 Cambridge avenue to Reuel Harvey Thayer of 114 East Walton place. The afternoon of Saturday, May 6, has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Collins of Jacksonville, Ill., formerly of Chicago, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miriam Ruth, to Frank J. Feeley of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Freschl of Detroit announce the engagement of their daughter, Florence, to Warren Lamson Lobdell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lobdell, 3938 Ellis avenue. The wedding will take place in September.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Barlow of 433 East Forty-fourth street announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Irene Bindley, daughter of Dr. James H. Bindley of San Antonio, Tex., to Victor J. Poll, son of Mrs. Natalie Poll of Edgewater. The wedding will take place in May.

Dr. and Mrs. James Henry Bogan of Mackinac Island, Michigan, announce the engagement of their sister, Eleanor Nash, to Allen Du Pont Dimmick of Chicago. The wedding will take place on May 10 in Green Bay, Wis., at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. James Flatley.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bickart of 3240 West Polk street announce the engagement of their daughter, Edna, to Joseph J. Gordon.

Mrs. Carrie Sheibner of 930 Barry avenue announces the engagement of her daughter, Kathryne, to J. Maurice Pettit of Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lincoln Gettys of 4238 Grand boulevard announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Hortense, to Roger Edward Hill of Woodstock, Ill. The wedding will take place early in June.

Lindsley Haviland announces the engagement of his sister, Florence Haviland, to Cowan Stephenson.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson Jr. of 1322 Astor street are at the Lenox club in Lenox, Mass., where they were suddenly called because of the illness of Mr. Higginson's father.

Mr. and Mrs. John Borden left for California last Monday. They will motor from San Diego to Seattle. A boat is being built in Seattle for Mr. Borden to use in his cruising of the Alaskan waters.

Mrs. P. A. Valentine, who came west to welcome her first grandchild, the baby of the Philip Armours III., is at the Blackstone hotel. Mr. Valentine is at French Lick Springs, where he went with Perceval de Costa about two months ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Keene of Lincoln Park West are at Virginia Hot Springs, where they have joined Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cadwallader of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Jonathan Latimer and her son, Jack, of 5457 Cornell avenue return this week from Pinehurst, N. C., after two months spent in the south. While at Winter Park, Fla., Mrs. Latimer won the woman's southern golf championship.

Miss Helen Lord of 7700 South Shore drive is spending a few weeks in Washington as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Copley Seavy.

Mrs. Francis Jewett Johnson of 81 East Division street and Miss Mabel Linn of 1415 Astor street, who went to California together in March, have returned. Mrs. Johnson has been visiting friends in Santa Barbara. Miss Linn extended her trip to Honolulu, where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham.

Mrs. James T. Harahan of the Blackstone left on Wednesday for New York.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Eckhart of 1530 Lake Shore drive will open their Lake Forest home the latter part of May.

Mrs. Jacob Baur of 115 Bellevue place and her little daughter, Rosemary have gone to Atlantic City.

The William Ashley Magies of 5021 Drexel boulevard, who have been at Pasadena, Cal., for some months, are to remain a much longer time on the coast than usual this year and will not be back in Chicago until the forepart of July.

Mrs. James Sears Dunham, with her daughter, Mrs. John Rice Reilly, and her two little sons, have returned to Winnetka, after a visit of three months in Redlands, Cal., with Mrs. Lawrence L. Moore, who formerly was Miss Ella M. Dunham.

Mrs. James L. Houghteling and her family returned on Thursday to their country home in Winnetka. Mrs. Houghteling has given up the house at 650 Lincoln parkway that the family has occupied for several winters, and when she moves to town in the fall she will take an apartment.

Mrs. Clare E. Crawford of 445 Roslyn place, who has been visiting in Winnipeg, Man., has gone to New York. She will later go to Palm Beach for several weeks before returning to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckingham Chandler are so pleased with living in Hubbard Woods that they have decided to make it their permanent place of residence, and will not return to their bungalow at 33 Bellevue place, which this last winter has been occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Bowman, and who are returning May 1 to their country place in Lake Forest. Mr. and Mrs. Chandler have bought a site on Sheridan road in Hubbard Woods and are going to build a colonial white brick residence, which will be ready for occupancy by next fall.

Mrs. Robert B. Gregory of 1638 Prairie avenue went east Monday to see her new grandson, the infant of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sweetser of 206½ West Thirteenth street, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Sweetser will spend part of the summer in Highland Park with Mr. and Mrs. Gregory, as will also Mr. and Mrs. Raymond E. Durham, the latter formerly Miss Eleanor Gregory. Mr. and Mrs. Durham have rented their house in Winnetka to Mrs. Elliott H. Phelps.

Mrs. George Walker Meeker of 1431 Astor street is in the east on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Ackerman.

Miss Edith Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Edward Kendall Rogers of 12 Scott street, has gone to Washington to join her sister, Mrs. William Ernest Walker.

Stanley Field of 1550 North State parkway has joined Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field of 1200 Lake Shore drive at their cottage at Aiken, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Curtiss and their daughter, Miss Marion Curtiss of 1404 Astor street, arrived home on Wednesday from a trip to Honolulu.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther W. Bodman of 1519 North State street have returned from a five weeks' trip in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McGann of 120 Pearson street have returned from California.

Miss Isabella Holt has her oil portraits of Miss Catherine ReQua and Miss Louise Meadowcroft on exhibition at the Independent Society of Artists' display in the Ohio building.

Miss Anna V. Hyatt of New York, the noted woman sculptor, whose recent exhibition at the Art institute was one of the finest of the year, arrived in Chicago on Thursday, and is the guest of Mrs. Howard Van Doren Shaw of 1130 Lake Shore drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Peabody Butler are planning to live in Winnetka permanently. They are moving from their house at 121 East Huron on May 1 and will spend six weeks at the home of Mr. Butler's mother, Mrs. Hermon B. Butler, in Winnetka, and afterward Mrs. Francis Butler and her children will go to the seashore for three months. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Butler will take a house of their own in Winnetka.

Mrs. P. D. Armour of 2115 Prairie avenue will go to White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, after Easter.

Unique Memorial for St. James' Choir Mother.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

A MEMORIAL unique, beautiful, and expressive will be dedicated today at 4 o'clock at the St. James Protestant Episcopal church, Cass and East Huron streets. The memorial is a vox humana stop in the pipe organ which has been placed therein by friends as a memorial to the late Mrs. Allan P. Millar, who served for more than twenty years as choir mother in the St. James parish. The organ builders who constructed the mechanism say they have used their utmost skill in making the most perfect musical effect of which an organ is capable.

A brass tablet inscribed to the memory of Mrs. Millar will also be unveiled.

Mrs. Millar died on Aug. 8, 1913. She was well known in the various charitable organizations of Chicago. The specifications for the St. James organ were drawn by Dudley Buck forty-five years ago. In 1903 modern mechanical action and accessories were installed. The musical service today will be under the direction of John W. Norton, choir master.

A three months' schedule has been mapped out by Archbishop G. W. Mundelein, which will include the dedication of seven churches, the celebration of three golden anniversaries, many confirmations, college, seminary, and school commencements.

The churches to be dedicated and their dates are: St. Bernardine's, Forest Park, April 30, 10 a. m.; Holy Family, North Chicago, May 7; Our Lady of Lourdes, North Ashland and Leland avenues, May 21, 10:30 a. m.; Momence, Ill., June 7; Lisle, Ill., dedication and opening of seminary, June 18; Corpus Christi, Grand boulevard and Forty-ninth street, June 25, 10:30 a. m.; St. Pascal's, July 2, 10 a. m.

Golden jubilees will be observed for Fr. de la Porte, Wheaton, Ill., April 25, 10:30 a. m.; the Alexian Brothers' hospital, with pontifical mass, May 9, 10 a. m.; Annunciation, Paulina street and Wabansia avenue, golden jubilee of the parish and silver jubilee of the pastor, the Rev. Joseph A. Glennon, May 14, 10:30 a. m.

On May 30, Memorial day, the Blue Island hospital will be dedicated at 10 a. m.

Archbishop Mundelein will officiate this week at the Cathedral of the Holy Name, Superior and North State streets, today at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m., Thursday at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., Friday 9 a. m. and 3 p. m., Saturday 8 a. m., and on Easter.

"The Half Gods" will be the subject of the address by the Rev. John E. White, pastor of the First Baptist church of Anderson, S. C., at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall this evening at 8 o'clock. O. Gordon Erickson, conductor of the club choir of 100, has arranged special music in observance of Palm Sunday. Mrs. Katherine Howard Ward will give the organ recital, and Gustaf Holmquist, the club bass soloist, will sing the offertory. Paul W. Paver, secretary of the J. M. Paver company, will act as scripture reader.

Dr. White is pastor of what is said to be the largest Protestant church in South Carolina, and also president of the Woman's college of Anderson. He is the first southerner to appear on the Sunday Evening club program this season. It will, however, be his second address before the club. He will also preach at the University of Chicago today at 11 o'clock.

Dr. White has been active not only in religious and educational work in the south but also in social movements. He has been vice president of the southern sociological conference, similar to the national conference of charities and corrections, and although a comparatively new organization, it has exerted a wide influence in the southern states. Dr. White is the author of numerous books, among them "The Silent Southerners," "My Old Confederate," and "Southern Highlanders."

The Rev. M. P. Boynton.

The Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton, who is pastor of the Woodlawn Baptist church, Sixty-second street and Lexington avenue, has been elected general chairman of the Chicago evangelistic committee of 100, which will prepare for and direct the tabernacle revival campaign under the leadership of the Rev. William A. Sunday. Dr. Boynton is president of the Chicago Church federation, composed of the churches of nine denominations.

The Sunday meetings will not begin until Sept. 24, 1917, but the work of organization previously required is vast. One aim is the organization of 500 men's Bible classes of 100 members each and an equal number of women's classes. The selection of a site for the tabernacle, the erection of it, and the complete mobilizing of all of the coöperating churches in prayer and Bible study groups must all be arranged for.

The executive committee with Dr. Boynton as chairman representing the committee of 100 is composed of the following: The Rev. John Timothy Stone, Fourth Presbyterian church; the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, St. James' Methodist Episcopal; the Rev. B. F. Aldrich, New First Congregational; the Rev. Charles G. Kindred, Englewood Christian; L. Wilbur Messer, general secretary Chicago Young Men's Christian association; J. A. Hiller, West Side Y. M. C. A. secretary; William A. Peterson, finance chairman, and George W. Dixon, site chairman.

The relation to each other of the members of the Christian churches in the warring nations of Europe is the subject of a statement sent out by Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, the general secretary of the federal council of the Churches of Christ in America, and will be the subject of a special discussion of the executive committee of the council in New York on Wednesday. Dr. Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago is the president of the federal council. Dr. Macfarland recently made a visit to the nations at war and conferred personally with many of the Christian leaders.

"The time has not yet come for political intervention," Dr. Macfarland says, "but it is time to multiply our relief work and to prepare for reconciliation and reconstruction as soon as the time is ripe for action." At the meeting on Wednesday the means will be devised for communicating with the churches of Europe and for expressing to them the sympathy of the Christian people of the United States.

A service of the Palms, followed by benediction of the blessed sacrament, will be held at 4 o'clock today at St. Mary's Catholic church, South Wabash avenue and Ninth street. The entire choir of the Paulist choristers led by Father Finn will assist at the service. The special service was established several years ago at the Paulist church to make popular the idea of presenting in musical episodes various scenes in the life of Christ of an extra-liturgical character, which were first developed by St. Philip Neri with the help of such great musicians as Giovanni de Palestrina and Giovanni Animuccia.

The Rev. Norman O. Hutton, rector of St. Chrysostom's Protestant Episcopal church, has been conducting a Lenten class in personal religion at which such health subjects as nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, timidity, and kindred topics were discussed.

The Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue, has made a tender of its church building for the use of a cathedral while further plans are being developed to construct a new cathedral on the south side. The offer was made to Bishop C. P. Anderson, who has vigorously espoused the cause of a cathedral, but has been temporarily checked in his plans by the refusal of the Grace church to become a part of the cathedral plan.

The Congregational ministers will meet tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. in the New England church, North Dearborn street and Delaware place. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. W. H. Spence of Hinsdale. The Rev. J. A. Jenkins will preside.

The Congregational club will meet tomorrow evening at the Hotel La Salle. The address will be given by John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union. The Pan-American union is composed of twenty-one American republics.

Palm Sunday services will be held at 10:30 today at the Grace Evangelical church, Wrightwood and Kimball avenues, of which the Rev. William Henry Huber is the pastor. Nineteen graduates of the class in religion will be publicly examined and will be given diplomas for the work done. Holy week services will be held every evening with ministers of various denominations assisting.

"Why Boys Go Wrong" will be the subject of a sermon tonight at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Harrison street and South Ashland avenue, by the pastor, the Rev. Roy L. Smith. Prizes will be distributed to the successful essayists among the boys who wrote on the subject, "How I Spend My Spare Time." The prizes to be given are a camera, a gold watch, and a fountain pen. The contestants are all 15 years of age or under.

Miss Marie Mayer, who took the part of Mary Magdelene in the Passion Play at Oberammergau in 1910, will speak at 8 o'clock today at Powers' theater on "The Meaning of the Passion Play," for the benefit of the Guardian Angels' settlement. Tableaux representing scenes from the Passion Play will be shown. The musical program will include numbers by George Heusa, violinist; Thomas J. McGranahan, soloist of the Paulist choristers, and Miss Katherine C. Madden.

An imposing gathering of specialists in missionary work will be the national missionary congress which will be held in Washington, D. C., April 26 to 30. The total number of delegates is limited to 1,500. These have been apportioned by a certain ratio on the basis of the membership of the fourteen participating denominations. All of the great living religions of the non-Christian nations will be represented. The congress marks the close of the series of seventy-five or more laymen's missionary conventions which have been held in the principal cities of the United States. The first convention was held in the Medinah temple, Chicago, last October, and registered more than 5,000 delegates. The president of the Chicago convention was Harry A. Wheeler.

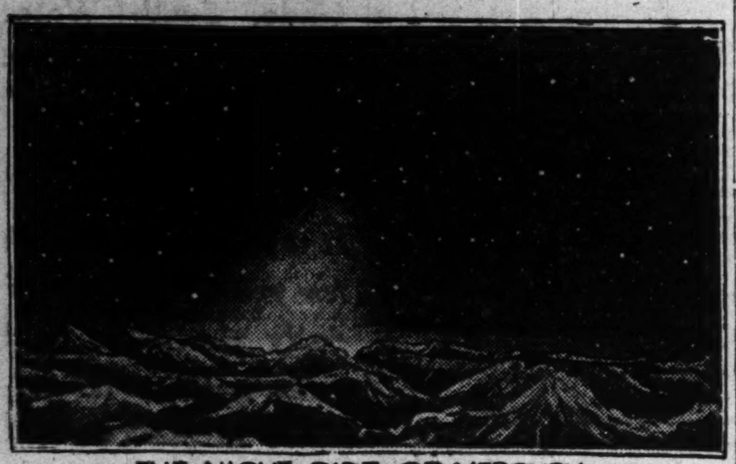
Among the speakers at the congress will be Robert E. Speer, John R. Mott, Shailer Mathews, Hubert C. Herring, George Innes, J. Campbell White, George Sherwood Eddy, N. W. Rowell, K. C., Toronto; Amos P. Wilder, Silas McBee, Bishop Arthur S. Lloyd, Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, William B. Millar, S. D. Gordon, John F. Goucher, Bishop F. J. McConnell, James L. Barton, William F. Oldham, A. J. Wallace, and Raymond Robins. These men, laymen and ministers, without exception, represent leaders in men's work or in worldwide missionary endeavor. Other speakers than those mentioned are also on the program.

Presbyterians in all parts of the United States are planning to receive as much profit as possible out of the Presbyterian general assembly which will convene in Atlantic City, N. J., May 18-26. A program is being arranged for Wednesday, May 24, which is to be given in local churches everywhere. The intention is to make Presbyterians familiar with the national and world movements of the denomination and to inspire loyalty to leaders who are seeking to promote the great benevolent enterprises of the church.

Holy week services will be held at 7:45 p. m. at the Unity Evangelical Lutheran church, Balmoral and Magnolia avenues, with the following speakers: The Rev. S. S. Kauffman, the Rev. C. E. Kerr, the Rev. A. J. Hesson, and on Thursday and Friday nights, the pastor, the Rev. David A. Davy.

ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND



THE NIGHT SIDE OF MERCURY
DRAWN by S. F. MAXWELL.

Here there never is a day. The sun, with its glowing appendages, may rise almost to the horizon, illuminate the bleak, cold crags for a short time, then sink again.

IT is a theory, with good substance, that Mercury, the planet nearest the sun, presents only one side to our star. This, if it be true, is due to the solar tides. Mercury, so far as can be known, has no moon. It is the planet nearest to the sun. Therefore it is subjected not only to the great heat of the sun's rays but also to the compelling power of the sun's tidal influence.

The tendency of tides is to reach a stationary condition in which there will be always in one spot the ebb and in another the high tide. If such an equilibrium can be established the effect of the tides ceases, they having done their work, and the body which, suspended in ether, has been subject to their influence comes to rest.

In the case of our own earth we have the powerful lunar tides oppposed by the less powerful solar tides, but in the case of Mercury there is presumably only the solar tides, and they are supposed to have reached the total of their effect and to have resulted in a suspension of the movements which tides cause.

Therefore Mercury is supposed to present constantly one side to the sun. One side is in eternal daylight and the other in eternal darkness; one is scorched by the everlasting heat of day; the other is immersed in the unbroken cold of night.

The illustration which accompanies this text is a purely fanciful presentation of the surface of Mercury as it must logically appear. Mercury never has been possible to accurately study. It is too small and too near the sun.

Certain major facts regarding it may be determined and understood, but its surface conditions cannot be mapped. It must be looked for, when it is to be seen at all, just as the twilight dims, or before the daylight comes. It is so near the sun that it disappears soon after the radiance of our star has gone. It has, in its best periods, a short lived luster and brilliance.

When Mercury is nearest to the sun, in its eccentric orbit, it is exposed to scorching heat. We here on the earth have nothing in our experience which can indicate the intensity of the heat which may radiate upon the side of Mercury turned towards the star which is our sun.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, you will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter that one's system collects.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets now and then just to keep in the pink of condition.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel—10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Lanes Give Last Cabinet Dinner to President.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—It rather looked as though Secretary and Mrs. Lane's dinner to the president and Mrs. Wilson—the last number on their official winter program, being the last of the cabinet dinners—already twice postponed, would have to be again deferred. It had been set for Tuesday night, and then the president was indisposed all day Sunday and Monday and no one quite knew Tuesday morning whether he would be in trim for a formal dinner on Tuesday evening or not. But he rallied and the dinner came off as scheduled.

With the Lanes' dinner the regular routine of their season came to an end. Gen. Scott had done the honors for the war department the previous week, the secretary of war figuring as one of the guests rather than host. It is barely possible, if Mrs. Baker gets settled here in time, that he may yet figure as host, but not at all certain. And if the president and Mrs. Wilson are detained in Washington late enough there will probably be a series of garden parties in the White House grounds. Outside of that there seems to be nothing that they have to do.

Last week Mrs. Wilson accepted the first purely personal, unofficial hospitality she has accepted since she came to the White House. Mrs. Reginald Fendall, one of the house of Galt whom she had found particularly congenial, gave a tea in her honor. The president honored it with his presence also, the first time he has attended such a function since he came to Washington. He not only went but he stayed and met many of the guests assembled in his wife's honor, most of them of the element of Washington society locally known as the "cave dwellers," the old resident, entirely unofficial set.

Koos Dinner Hosts.

Meanwhile, if the president's round of dinners is over, the vice president's is not. The Wellingon Koos are just starting down the cabinet line with dinners to the Marshalls and the Lansings, and there are others still in the offing. The Lansings have a whole lot of trouble in that line ahead of them, mostly among the lesser diplomats.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Vrooman gave the Lansings a dinner last Saturday, quite an elaborate one, and had a comfortable little one for Miss Lucy Burleson on Monday night followed by a theater party. They have been indefatigable dinner hosts all winter, but out of deference to Mrs. Vrooman's widowed sister, Mrs. Bromwell, who has been with them most of the winter, have given nothing that involved dancing, nor have they attended any functions of that sort. It has been rather a blow to the young people, for heretofore Mrs. Vrooman has had a good deal of young company staying with her, and has seen to it that it had a thoroughly good time.

Next week Mr. Vrooman is starting out on a semi-official tour, during which, as assistant secretary of agriculture, he will make addresses before several western agricultural colleges and kindred organizations.

Next week also, being D. A. R. week, Mrs. Vrooman will have with her her cousin, Miss Letitia Stevenson, and Lewis Stevenson, secretary of state of Illinois, and his 19 year old daughter, who is a student at Bryn Mawr. The occasion of their visit is the presentation of a portrait of the late Mrs. Adlai Stevenson to the D. A. R., she having been one of that organization's presidents general.

Mrs. Matthew Scott, also a former president general of the D. A. R., has been spending the winter with Mrs. Vrooman, but few outside of intimate friends realized it, as she has remained absolutely in seclusion along with Mrs. Bromwell. She is, however, interested in this presentation of her sister's potrait to the great organization to which each of them gave so much of their best effort.

Society Circus Great Success.

The Riding and Hunt club's society circus last Saturday night was a great success and is still the talk of the town. Also there are a number of usually agile young people who seem to be moving a bit stiffly and sorely these days, and who have developed a penchant for witch hazel and arnica.

Miss Alice Gertrude Gordon

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Alice Gertrude Gordon to Dr. Cary T. Grayson of Washington, D. C. Miss Gordon is a niece of Mrs. Wilson. Dr. Grayson is naval aid and physician to the president and is popular in Washington society.

Really it was a most amusing affair, in which every circus stunt known to the professional "big top" was duplicated by society performers, and a few features never dreamed of by Barnum were pulled off amid hurricanes of applause.

One of the hits of the evening was the traditional Roman chariot race in miniature, with tiny chariots, drawn by pairs of thoroughbred Shetland ponies and driven by two of the Devereux youngsters, little Miss Anne, apparently about 10, winning handily from her brother James, perhaps a couple of years older.

The scream of the evening was a burlesque bullfight, produced under the management of Scott Breckenridge, with Dr. A. F. Hopkins as toreador and a distinguished lot of capadores, picadores, banderillos, and clowns, including some of the best known of the capital's young men about town. And the scream of the scream was the bull, or rather the "cow," as the program had it, which was composed of Messrs. Breckenridge and Shea, and whose hind legs alone were well worth the price of admission, which was "some price."

Never before had cow such independent, original imaginative hind legs. Taken altogether that cow was a remarkable creature. Like Guy Wetmore Caryll's lamb, "it galloped in front when it ambled behind," and vice versa, and it retired victorious from the ring in spite of bombs, pistols, and the deadly spears of the picadores.

The circus was for the benefit of the Army Y. M. C. A., and it must have netted a pretty penny.

Some Coming Events.

This week there is the Washington Kennel club's dog show on, also for charity, and early in May the Washington horse show, with proceeds vowed to some worthy cause. Also there is a series of teas being arranged at the famous old Octagon house, to be held when the weather permits in its lovely gardens.

Washington just now is a delightful garden, when it isn't a snow drift. Last Friday's snow left all the little crocuses and the daffodils and the demure little grass hyacinths poking their poor little heads up through an inch and a half of the beautiful, and the forsythia blooming gaily over it, while the great pink and white buds of the magnolias were swelling into bloom in most of the many parks.

Among those who have betaken themselves to places where the weather knows its own mind is Mrs. Marshall Field. She has closed the "pink palace" up on Sixteenth street, which was unusually gay this winter, its mistress having been pretty steadily in residence and pretty constantly entertaining. Spencer Eddy has visited her quite a little, and Mrs. Albert Beveridge, nee Eddy, has also been her guest at intervals.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lindley of Lake Forest have returned from a trip to California.

Mrs. J. Allen Haines, who has been in California since early in March, has planned to remain in the west until the middle of May. She will visit Del Monte and other points after a stay at Pasadena, Santa Barbara, and San Francisco. Mr. Haines plans to open their country place in Winnetka within a few days instead of awaiting his wife's return.

Mrs. Nancy Cox MacCormick of 19 East Pearson street has gone to Tennessee to visit relatives and to fill a sculpturing commission.

FUTURE EVENTS.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers of 1100 Lake Shore drive announces that all of the boxes, fifty-three in number, have been sold for the "war song concert" to be given in the Auditorium on Tuesday, May 9, for the benefit of the Country Home for Convalescent Children. Since the demand for boxes has exceeded the supply, the box committee has arranged to build in twelve additional boxes. The boxholders are: Charles G. Dawes, Mrs. W. J. Chalmers, Mrs. Thomas Lyon, Dr. Arthur D. Bevan, Mrs. Norman Williams, Mrs. Charles G. King, Thomas S. Chalmers, George Porter, Mrs. George S. Isham, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Mrs. James Thorne, Mrs. Edward Morris, Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, Mrs. Eugene Pike, Mrs. Byron L. Smith, H. H. Porter, Mrs. George M. Pullman, E. D. Hulbert, Mrs. W. W. Kimball, Cyrus McCormick, Mrs. Watson Blair, Mrs. James B. Waller, Mrs. John Black, Mrs. E. J. Uihlein, James Simpson, John G. Shedd, Cyrus H. McCormick Jr., Victor Lawson, Frederick Haskell, Mrs. Reuben Donnelly, Mrs. S. E. Barrett, La Verne W. Noyes, Mrs. Joseph Fish, Finley Barrell, Mrs. Hugh McBirney Johnston, DeForest Hulburd, W. O. Goodman, Louis F. Swift, James A. Patten, Samuel Insull, T. E. Wilson, D. Mark Cummings, James Deering, J. Ogden Armour, F. D. Countiss, Ernest Hamill, R. T. Crane Jr., Mrs. Honore Palmer, Mrs. Potter Palmer Jr., Chauncey Keep, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. Henry Dibblee, Mrs. J. T. Harahan, Mrs. A. B. Dick, Alfred Baker, and Levy Mayer.

"Cousin Jim," or "The Mystery of the Stolen Fraternity Pin," is the enticing title of the serio-comic melodrama scenario written by C. W. Hitchcock, Kenneth S. Goodman, and John T. McCutcheon for the Casino Players and to be presented about the middle of May at the Casino, which will be made over for the event into a typical movie house—a miniature Strand, according to J. Allen Haines, general manager and chairman of the event. More than 200 persons will participate in the several hundred scenes of the three reels and two-thirds of the members of the Casino club will take part. C. W. Hitchcock, for four years with the Essanay company, will direct the making of the picture by the Vandee Producing company. The day following the premier at the Casino the film will be released, and already it is booked at more than fifty movie houses in Chicago and surrounding towns. Each time it is shown 25 per cent of the net proceeds will revert to the governors of the Casino, who will distribute the entire amount through the American Red Cross. John Alden Carpenter is writing the incidental music and will direct the orchestra. The cast will include the Aldis Players and members of the Junior league and the various scenes will be laid at the Onwentsia and Saddle and Cycle clubs and the Blackstone hotel. There will be polo and golf scenes, tea dansants, and many specialties.

The Canadian Red Cross fund is to benefit from a concert to be given on Saturday, April 29, in the Auditorium theater. All the war relief "regulars" and a few recruits are mentioned in the protracted list of boxholders. Charles G. Dawes, Rufus Dawes, James B. Forgan, David R. Forgan, Samuel Insull, Walter S. Brewster, Arthur Meeker, Charles A. Munroe, Frederick W. Upham, John Crerar, Roy McWilliams, Will Lyford, and some thirty others. A comprehensive program will be given by Frederick Daddi, Jenny Dufau, Evelyn Starr, Frederick Morley, the Macduff Kiltie band, Prof. Dewar's Scottish dancers, Arthur Beresford, and Sam Galbraith.

The Little theater is entertaining today Mrs. Roger Watts of Capri, author of "The Greek Idea in Art." Mrs. Watts will be joint guest of honor at the theater's reception from 6 to 8 o'clock with Laurence Housman, author of "The Chinese Lantern," "Prunella," and "Lysistrata," who will lecture this evening on "Moral and Immoral Influences in Modern Drama."

The University of Michigan Glee and Mandolin clubs will give a concert at the South Shore Country club next Tuesday evening. The forty Ann Arbor students included in the clubs are on their way back home after a trip to the Pacific coast. The Chicago alumni have planned a luncheon at the Morrison hotel on Tuesday for the musicians.

Mrs. J. Mitchell Hoyt, who made her debut with the American orchestra last Sunday and who added a sociable sequel by entertaining a party of fourteen at a "German pancake," is to do a solo—"Come With Me Into a Persian Garden"—on the Junior league Follies program. Miss Harriet Walton will do a solo with a spectacular chorus of 120, and Mrs. Edwin Lobdell will sing the "Song of the Roses," with twelve girls in white and silver gowns. Miss Anita Blair will appear in a pas de deux, slightly Russian in character.

A hat sale and musical tea is announced for May day in the home of Mrs. E. L. Hasler in Lake Forest. The stock to be proffered has come from London, and is shipped by Mrs. Hasler's sister-in-law, Miss Constance Hasler. Proceeds will be given to various philanthropies.

Patronesses of the Junior league "Follies" to be given on Tuesday evening, April 25, at the Auditorium theater for the benefit of the Rest Rooms for Self Supporting Girls, the Visiting Nurse association and other charities, will include: Mrs. P. D. Armour, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Mrs. Edward Blair, Mrs. Henry A. Blair, Mrs. Watson Armour, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. R. T. Crane Jr., Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy, Mrs. A. B. Dick, Mrs. Tracy Drake, Mrs William P. Conger, Mrs. Charles G. Fuller, Mrs. John B. Murphy, Mrs. Charles H. ReQua, Mrs. Edward F. Swift, Mrs. Louis F. Swift, Mrs. John A. Spoor, Mrs. Charles Holt, Mrs. Charles Garfield King, Mrs. William J. Bryson, Mrs. H. H. Porter Jr., Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, Mrs. Byron L. Smith, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mrs Elisha P. Whitehead, Mrs. E. B. Butler, Mrs. E. A. Hamill, Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs Charles L. Hutchinson, Mrs. George S. Isham, Mrs. William R. Linn, Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick, Mrs. R. D. McFaden, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. George Walker Meeker, Mrs H. S. Robbins, Mrs. Homer A. Stillwell, Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mrs. Thomas R. Lyon, Mrs. Arthur Dixon, Mrs. James B. Forgan, Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, and Mrs. Arthur G. Leonard. Rehearsals are being held three times daily in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel.

Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift Jr. has selected Mrs. Huntington B. Henry as vice chairman for her table at the Easter flower sale to be held next Saturday in the Elizabethan room of the Congress hotel for the benefit of the Home for Destitute Crippled Children. Her other assistants are Mrs. Lawrence Rockwell, Mrs. Springer Brooks, Mrs. Lowell Chapin, Mrs. James E. Baum Jr., Mrs. Oscar Johnson, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody. Mrs. Swift's flowers will come from the Edward F. Swift greenhouses in Lake Geneva, and Louis Swift, who has one of the largest greenhouses in Lake Forest, will send his flowers for the table of Miss Louise Burrows. Miss Burrows will be assisted by Mrs. James C. Ames, Mrs. Joseph King, Mrs. John C Pitcher Mrs. Bowman Lingle, Mrs. Harold Bodman, Mrs. Eugene de Bronkart, Mrs. Hobart Young, Mrs. W. L. Hodgkins, Mrs. James Harvey, Miss Dorothy Derby, Miss Dorothy Leonard, Miss Helen Clow Miss Mildred Swigart, Miss Erminie Matthews, Miss Gertrude Deming, Miss Gladys Bond, and Miss Josephine Chapin.

Miss Anna Morgan will present John Masefield's latest poem-play, "Good Friday," at her studio tomorrow at 3 p. m. and on Tuesday at 8 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker of 3030 Lake Shore drive will give a musical this afternoon in honor of their daughter, Mrs. Horace Gray of Boston. Mrs. Gray was formerly Miss Katharine Meeker.

Members of the South Shore Country club have already ushered in the outdoor season and the indoor festivities are a reflection of the club's outdoor sports. This afternoon there is to be a travelogue on Yellowstone National park given in the ballrom by Charles M. Hunt, followed by the club's regular Sunday evening supper in the great room overlooking the lake and driveway. The women's bridge tournament will be held Monday and Friday afternoons. Many of the noonday groups of women seen lunching in the dining room are those of committees making ready for the masked carnival ball to be held on Thursday evening, April 27, at which there will be a large number of special dancing groups. At the ball no one will be allowed on the floor except those in costume. The grand march will begin at 11 o'clock, just after the unmasking. Supper is to be served during the evening and dancing will continue until 1 o'clock. The joint chairmen of the ball arrangements are Mrs. Augusta D. Curtis, Mrs. Clyde L. Day, and Mrs. Fred A. Poor.

There will be an entertainment and dance at the Gladstone hotel on Wednesday evening for the benefit of the Scottish branch of the British Red Cross. Miss Nettie Macpherson will give a group of Scottish dances.

Take Hair Out Not Off the Skin

It is useless to remove hair from the surface of the skin. This result is all that can be accomplished with pastes, rub-on preparations and imitations of De Miracle. To rob hair of its vitality you must attack it under the skin as well as on the skin. De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory, does this by absorption. It alone contains certain ingredients which give it the power to devitalize hair. Well-groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under arms. Buy De Miracle by name and you will get the only depilatory that has ever been endorsed by reputable physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you, buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's six stores, or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. A-1, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

BLUE BOOK says "A sure remedy for this most humiliating and distressing affliction." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories.

SANITOL TOOTH POWDER OR PASTE

This is Your Opportunity to Supply Yourself with Two Splendid Toilet Necessities for the Price of One

We've got a double purpose in this offer.

We want those who have never tried Sanitol Tooth Preparations to put either one of them to the test of use—and to do it now. If you've said to yourself that you'll try Sanitol when your present supply is used up, we want to clinch your determination to do so by putting a package in your hands NOW, so you can't forget it. We want you to see by the testimony of your mirror and the taste and feel of your mouth and gums and teeth that Sanitol Tooth Preparations really do whiten the teeth, retard decay, lessen accumulation of tartar, bring health to the gums and make the mouth sweet and pure and clean. Antiseptic and antacid.

Our second purpose is to introduce to ALL—whether they do or do not now use Sanitol Tooth Powder or Paste—these two other excellent and efficient toilet preparations.

Sanitol Face Powder is a perfect face powder, a complexion beautifier that removes the oily and shiny appearance from the skin and brings nature's beauty to the face and neck.

Sanitol Face Powder is a natural finishing powder as soft as down, very adhesive and fine. Perfectly harmless to the tenderest skin, removing the shine and leaving it clear and velvety. Refreshing, dainty and fragrant. In three tints—Flesh, White and Brunette.

Sanitol Face Cream is the finest thing you ever put on your face and hands for soothing chaps, roughness and sunburn—acts over night. This is a white, vanishing cream—a skin nourisher and complexion beautifier—it contains no grease. Cannot grow hair.

MEN—if you want to know real face and neck comfort, use it after shaving.

For your convenience we list below the dealers who have a supply of Sanitol and will redeem your coupons to the extent of the stock they have on hand. Many other progressive stores, however, outside of these, can take care of your coupons.

Fashion's Guide Posts

With simplicity as its keynote, a tucked collar of organdy, with a fluted frill, scorns trimming other than a band of velvet at the neck, with streamers down the back and a flat tailored bow.

Charming little summer frocks may be made from the new voile robe patterns, with colored border designs in original patterns.

A Georgette crepe blouse attains distinction by the addition of a vestee and edging on the collar of Venise lace in an exquisite pattern.

Well dressed men are carrying out their sports apparel even to the handkerchief. Some of the newest ones, hand hemmed, have a cross barred border with an emblem of each of the sports embroidered in one corner.

A breakfast coat of French brocaded crepe has a deep collar of plaited chiffon, wee revers and facings on the sleeves of crepe de chine, and fancy buttons of the crepe de chine. There is a tasseled girdle of silver ribbon. With it are worn pantalettes.

There is a dainty new veiling in a filet mesh, with a flower design in shadow effect.

Novel and exceptionally attractive is a sailor of navy lisere straw, with the upper brim and top covered with moire gold cloth, broken by bands of straw. Blue and gold ornaments form the only trimming.

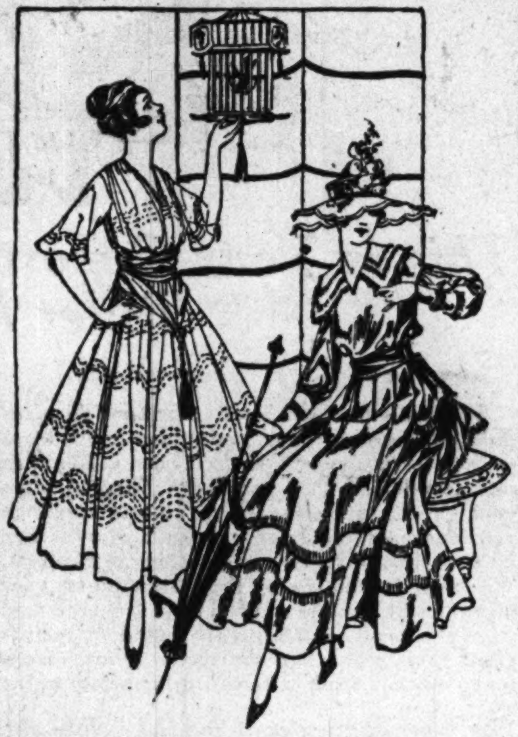
Some of the fine net blouses are combined with Valencennes lace, and beaded in floral designs. There are double link buttons of beads.

PICTURESQUENESS IS THE KEYNOTE OF THE

Easter Frocks at $25.00 to $250

WHATEVER their sources of inspiration—and of these there seems to be an endless number—the prime requisite is, that the Easter frocks be graceful and harmonious.

To the right—Afternoon Dress of Georgette crepe, embroidered with silver tinsel thread. Has a fluted Georgette collar and girdle of satin, with ornament and tassel of silver. Price, $50.00.



SOFT, dainty georgettes are combined with silk—striped, checked, and polka dotted in some of the cleverest little Afternoon Dresses—and so many of them are hand embroidered—smart individual tailored dresses of serge and sheer fabrics—$15 to $150.

The frock to the left is of taffeta, trimmed with fluted ruffles of self material and novelty braid in a contrasting shade. Price, $29.50.

New Easter Blouses Specially Priced

at $2, $3, $3.95, $5, $7.50, $10 and Up

NEW Blouses greet the Easter season with an added charm and attractiveness. Original modes in Georgette crepe, crepe de Chine, net, laces and striped silks feature many new style points.

$3.00 $2.00 $5.00 $5.00 $2.00 $3.95

Lingerie Blouses—Organdies, voiles and linens are especially good this season, and we have illustrated a few from our extensive assortment at $2.00 and up.

OUR SUIT SHOP IS ESPECIALLY PREPARED

Easter Suits at $25 to $150

HAVE you seen these newest Easter suits? If not, prepare to be delightfully surprised, for the clean cut tailored lines preserve Fashion's silhouette but modify its extremes most pleasantly.

Serges, gabardines, worsteds are shown in the much wanted blues, tans, checks and individual colors. Silk poplins and taffetas, both plain and fancy, are in abundance, too.

$35.00 $50.00 $39.50

No. 1. Taffeta suit, silk embroidered, with embroidered faille collar. Price $35.
No. 2 Novelty striped taffeta suit, trimming of serge. Price $50.
No. 3. Serge suit, trimmed with faille and rows of stitching. Price $39.50.

At $25.00 and $29.50 we are showing Suits which are not only splendid values but which have those distinctive touches which only an organization of specialists dealing with the finest suits can produce.

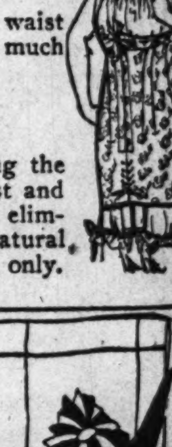
Novelty Silks Special $2 per yd.

2000 yards high grade Novelty Silks, for dresses, waists, wraps and separate skirts. This lot contains beautiful imported novelty silks as well as the best domestic makes. Many of them worth twice the price we ask. Come early Monday and see these wonderful silks. At $2.00 per yard.

Colored Chiffon Taffeta, a dependable quality, perfect in weave and finish. The popular grays, blues and browns in abundance, also evening shades; 36 inches wide. $1.75 per yard.

New Models in $5.00 Corsets

WE HAVE many new and attractive models in corsets that are distinctive in individual features. Our corset reputation was established through our wonderful values in popular priced corsets, and the assortment of original models this season is exceptional.



One illustrated is built for a figure large below the waist line, with broad shoulders and full diaphragm and not much actual bust fullness.

It controls the thigh and flattens the back below the waist line.

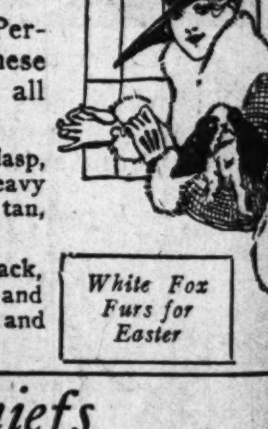
The shoulder is moderately high and full, allowing the flesh to settle flat to it. It is very low under the bust and higher directly in front, holding back a full diaphragm, eliminating the ugly line of space between the corset and natural bust. Made of imported satin finish broche, in white only. Price $5.

Newest Gloves from France

JUST received another shipment of Perrin's finest imported Kid Gloves. These are made of carefully selected skins, in all the newest shades.

Perrin's Belfort, with one large pearl clasp, pique stitched, medium weight, with wide, heavy embroidered backs, in white, black, navy, tan, champagne, African brown and mode, $2.00.

Perrin's light weight overseam Gloves, black, white, tan, gray, African brown, champagne and taupe, in a beautiful assortment of stitchings and bindings, pair, $1.50.



White Fox Furs for Easter

Easter Kerchiefs

Ladies' Colored Handkerchiefs with colored embroidery. Priced at 25c to $1.00 each.

Ladies' Linen Handkerchiefs, in solid colors or colored borders. 25c to $1.00.

Children's Handkerchiefs in various nursery designs. 15c and 25c each; box of three at 50c.

EGGS FOR EASTER

Real, large, fresh country eggs. If your neighbor should ask you about your Easter eggs will you tell them "I bought them from the grocer. Of course, I don't know how long he had them in stock nor do I know how long the jobber had them. Neither do I know how long the commission man had them or the railroad or country store. I don't know whether they came from Kansas, Oklahoma, or Texas." Or would you tell them "I bought mine direct from the country and I know they are not over three or four days old and it only takes a few hours to get them as they are shipped via express." Buy from me and you can tell your neighbor that your eggs are guaranteed to give satisfaction. We are shipping hundreds of dozens daily to Chicago families. Now, why not to you? Out cash with order, express prepaid prices are as follows:

3 dozen package, 28 cents per dozen.
6 dozen package, 27 cents per dozen.
12 dozen package, 25 cents per dozen.
30 dozen package, 23 cents per dozen.
2-30 dozen cases or more 22c per doz.

WAIT A MINUTE.

Here's a record that should interest a great number of people.

My business is the circulation of newspapers and magazines.

In a period extending over about four years I have increased the sale of two newspapers and one magazine somewhere in the neighborhood of 95,000 copies weekly and monthly. I at present am connected with a magazine where I have increased the sale about 40,000 in the last year. The magazine is going into new hands, men who have done everything but publish a magazine, their plans for the future would indicate that they thought about half the world to be squirrels and the remainder "nuts"—I know that the dear old public all comes from "Missouri," and has to be shown.

I have had no quarrels with any one and am not going to have any, but I am going to make a change, hence this advertisement. I want to hear from reputable concerns anywhere, and shall be pleased to go into detail with any one able to buy my services to advantage.

To those with GET RICH QUICK SCHEMES AND COMMISSION PROPOSITIONS: Save your stationery. Address D 186, Tribune.

Professions and Trades.

SITUATION WTD—"WHERE CAN I MAKE a good, permanent connection?" I asked a well known adv. sales mgr. yesterday.

"Don't advertise for it; look around," he replied, while O. K.ing proofs for $7,500 worth of space.

"But I want quick action," I told him. "A manufacturer who wants some one to handle his advertising and offering a future to the right kind of a man. 5 years' making type talk is some asset in your 24th year, and for once I should let it say something about myself. Why not try "The Sunday Tribune" classified? Just one reader out of that 600,000 is all that needs to see it."

"Well," said the W. K., etc., looking up, "you would be invaluable to a specialty—great for a nation-wide campaign. You know from the mfr. to the consumer like the proverbial alphabet. General publicity is sure your leader. Can you afford to sacrifice your exceptional income for opportunity?"

"Not all of it, but within reason," I said. "I just think that I'll Capitalize this Conversation."

HIGH GRADE POSITIONS FOR HIGH GRADE MEN.

Last week we placed a $10,000 man with one of our very best concerns. We have another $10,000 placement, which will go over this week. This is to show you that we do place the big fellows, as well as the medium priced men.

If you don't know how we operate, drop in and ask questions. We are always glad to explain our proposition, because it is eminently fair to the employer and the employe. You can't afford to stay away from us, because we are in touch with the very best positions in the country. You owe it to yourself to sell your services to the highest bidder, and while you can't afford to jeopardize your present position by looking for a better position, you can employ us to do it for you. That is the way we make our best placements.

If you are a young woman about 23 year of age and are looking for an attractive position where the best business conditions and environment exist, communicate with H S 385, Tribune.

The nature of the work is receiving orders over the telephone. Salary averages about $10 a week to start. Successful applicant must have high school or college training, be able to receive orders accurately, and possess a pleasant disposition.

Best character references required. Answer in own handwriting, giving all particulars and phone number.

VACATION WORK FOR WOMEN TEACHERS.
For the past twenty years we have employed a limited number of teachers in different sections of the country for temporary positions during the spring and summer and have made these positions permanent if those employed showed the necessary qualifications for making a success of our work. Applicants must be over twenty-two years of age, free to travel, and willing to learn and work hard. The position will give you an opportunity to travel in pleasant territory with agreeable associates. We will teach you at our expense, pay your railroad fare, a moderate salary and a fair commission. Address immediately E M 300, Tribune.

A HIGH GRADE REAL ESTATE firm can place a few high class, capable women in the sales dept.; all or part of the time; experience helpful but not necessary. Call afternoons, Room 847, 38 S. Dearborn-st.

VENETIAN BUILDING
[The Woman's Building],
15 E. WASHINGTON-ST.
Leases for one to five years.
Rent free to May 1. Immediate possession.

We are making extensive improvements in this building, and it will pay you to look over the space we have to rent. The service of the building is efficient in every respect and it will be the policy of the management to give entire satisfaction to every tenant.

The large windows and the fact that the maximum depth of space is only 23 feet make the offices light and well ventilated, and they will be decorated in white enamel or in any manner desired.

The occupancy will be carefully restricted to the highest grade of tenants. We now have many of the best known firms in ladies' lines.

Our office in the building in room 1009 is open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

BRYN MAWR HIGHLANDS

is the recent purchase by the Board of Education of a large school site convenient to this entire district.

Bryn Mawr Highlands is an exceptionally favored location for apartments. The property is directly south of Jackson Park, extends from 67th to 70th-sts., and from Jeffery to Paxton-av.

It is near the lake, has Illinois Central express and surface line transportation, and is being rapidly built up with high grade apartments, which are in good demand by an excellent class of tenants. Rentals in this district [owing to the low cost of land] make a better showing on the investment than in any other location of equal merit in the city.

There are only a few hundred feet of this property remaining, but it is being offered at prices that make it the best buy on the market for apartment sites. All improvements are in and paid for; you can start building at once.

Local office at northwest corner of Jeffery-av. and 71st-st., is open daily from 1 to 5 p. m., Sundays 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

FOR MAY 1ST

We can deliver a few more of those cozy bungalows on

LOCKWOOD-AV.,
AUSTIN,
Between Thomas and Division-sts.

There are many reasons why you should live in an established suburban home neighborhood, where children show the benefit from it in various ways from the start.

Living in an apartment hardly can be compared to it, and then that rent you are paying is often sufficient to pay for a home.

If the care of a garden is a pleasure to one, as the children's healthy growth is an object worth considering, there is no reason left why to live in a suburban bungalow is not the real thing.

Hogenson's Model Bungalows are sold on terms to suit or cash.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

Still Reasonable

[Special Car Excursion Tuesday, April 25.]

THERE IS ONE PLACE where the price of farm land is not beyond the reach of the average farm renter or working man and that is in the Swigart Tract in Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford Counties, Michigan. Here the prices are still reasonable enough and the terms easy enough for any man to buy who is willing to save a little; and no man is a success unless he can save a little against a rainy day.

THE BEST WAY to save is to invest in something that will increase in value. Nothing so surely does this as land. In the ten-year period ending with 1909 the value of all farm land in the United States, exclusive of buildings, increased 108.1 per cent. That is an earning of over 10 per cent a year on savings, as against 2 or 3 per cent in a savings bank.

VALUES in the Swigart Tract are rising more rapidly than in older sections. Here are new lands, near to big markets, with quick and cheap transportation both by lake and rail, electric power developed from our streams, dependable rainfall, good wagon roads, handy local markets, good educational facilities, and healthful and pleasant conditions for living. All of these things bring a steady influx of settlers, who with their work of development are making the lands more valuable every season.

WE EARN MORE per acre from potatoes and beans than is earned in Illinois on corn and wheat. Get the government figures and see for yourself. Growing grains, grasses, fruit, raising poultry and stock, and dairying in this general farming district is very profitable. Send for my free literature, which tells about the crops. Call for it if you can and get a large map of the district, and see samples of the products which we have on display in our offices.

ADVANTAGES we offer you: Selection from over 50,000 acres of land in center of Michigan's Fruit Belt; prices from $10 to $25 per acre; terms as low as $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres; insurance in contract after part is paid; assistance of farm experts and the benefit of a number of co-operative features. Ask about our privilege of exchange.

MY NEXT SPECIAL CAR EXCURSION will leave Chicago Tuesday, April 25. Round trip from Chicago, including railroad fare, meals and lodging, $12.50. Accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles free. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

FOR SALE—OWNER OF SUCCESSFUL HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE 1,000 ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM. WILL SELL

20-Acre Farm for Only $300

ON TERMS OF $10.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY, WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1,000 acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 acres in peaches, 136 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains, and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes, $300; tomatoes, $100 [$10 per ton at the canning factory], etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 1,000 acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 and 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of my land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm, and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains, and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded, brick bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs, and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables, and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth, and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery, and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death; money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

GET THIS FREE BOOK TODAY.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering, and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, soil, climate, water, rainfall, healthfulness, productivity, products, and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in Chicago and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

CORN LAND.
WHITE MAN'S COUNTRY.

80,000 acres, rich, mellow, alluvial, cutover corn land, free from hills, rocks and gumbo, both drained and being ditched out, acessible to towns, railroads and markets, in the very center of the United States, in southeast Missouri, the fastest growing territory in the country; not north, not south, but in the happy medium, having the advantages of each without their drawbacks; in tracts of 40 acres up; at low prices and liberal terms; 10 per cent cash; 10 annual payments; 5 per cent interest. Warranty deed backed by over $2,000,000 assets on the payment of only 10 per cent cash. During 1915 we sold 27,638 acres to 199 different people. Where else in the country is land selling that fast? Write us for sales record sheet, showing names and addresses of purchasers and let us tell you why they are buying. Land owned by the Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Company, who previous to 1915 sold off over 100,000 acres out of this same tract of land to hundreds of different people and has never foreclosed on a purchaser or taken back an acre once sold. Write us for booklet and full information. Address Department 4. HIMMELBERGER-HARRISON LAND SELLING CO., CAPE GIRARDEAU, MISSOURI.

BUSINESS MAN WANTED FOR PRESIDENT.

I WANT A MANUFACTURER, BANK DIRECTOR, OR OTHER GOOD BUSINESS MAN [either in or out of Chicago], with clean record and known integrity, to become president and director of a new company and select the other four directors for it. These five will control the business.

The company will sell an attachment to go on 200,000 machines now in use, which will increase their output 400 pct. with the same labor now employed. About 50,000 new machines are made and sold per year, and every one needs this attachment. It will be manufactured by specialty concerns; no dead investment in plant or machinery.

This attachment will be sold on ten days' trial. It pays for itself in a few months. It will sell for $500 and cost about $300, including all manufacturing and selling expenses, overhead, and royalty. Established sales organizations will take entire output on straight and moderate commission basis because of the long and insistent demand for a device of this kind. About 25,000 manufacturing concerns will buy from one to twenty devices.

Patent claims are broad and basic.

The five directors will advance up to $25,000 preliminary capital, if needed, but will be reimbursed from the $150,000 capital that will be provided by investors on completion of organization. The stock will be pooled, so as to insure re-election of same directors until all investors shall have been fully repaid from net earnings.

The company should earn at least 200 pct. per year on a liberal capitalization. A complete, full size device is now working; hence there is no doubt about its efficiency and success.

Please do not answer unless you can stand close investigation as to character and record. This is not a stock jobbing scheme, but will be a splendid organization, completed and financed in a dignified manner; and the five directors will make fortunes.

No inquiries will be made about you until you consent, and all communications will be treated in confidence.

Promoters and brokers are respectfully requested NOT to reply.

SMALL UNDERWRITING INVESTMENT, LARGE INTEREST IN GREAT CORPORATION.

A leading investment house in Chicago has undertaken the financing of a considerable corporation expanding the opportunities of a present business. A few original subscribers to the underwriting fund can join the present underwriters by investing from $100 to $500 and, as underwriters, receive all of their money back and a substantial interest in the new corporation. Only a few more can participate, as the entire underwriting fund will be limited to $3,000 and no individual member may acquire more than one-sixth of the profits. There are on hand now for the new corporation order inquiries, governmental and private, running into many millions of dollars. Confidential correspondence and inquiry is offered. Address H O 515, Tribune.

NOTICE

There are unquestionably many business men who would like to invest their money profitably if they only knew WHERE. A careful investor should only invest in a solid going concern, where stock actually is dividend paying and where past and present earnings positively warrant an investment. We invite immediate investigation. There is only a small amount of stock left. Money paid is placed in accordance with agreement in a responsible Chicago bank; principals only. Address K H 586, Tribune.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

INSTRUCTION.

LADIES' AFTERNOON CLASS IN ENGLISH BEGINS TUESDAY AT 2 P. M.
EVENING CLASS MAY 3 AT 6 P. M.
NO BOOKS. NO TECHNICAL TERMS.
BRIEF, INTERESTING, THOROUGH.
WORTH ONE HUNDRED TIMES ITS COST.

No parent need go through life speaking incorrect English in the home. The power of example cannot be overestimated. The young man or young woman who attempts success without a knowledge of that upon which real success depends is assuredly greatly handicapped.

When conversing in the home, reading the printed page, moving in social circles, giving or receiving dictation, or pleading before judge and jury, what a wealth of satisfaction in the thought—I KNOW! Just a little effort—just a little—and a knowledge of priceless worth can be acquired.

For particulars concerning afternoon and evening classes or private instruction, telephone ROGERS PARK 234.

RICH TERRITORY IS REACHED BY ALASKA RAILWAY

Kenai Peninsula Abounds with Fertile Valleys—Fish and Game Plentiful.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

Sunrise, Kenai Peninsula.—The Kenai peninsula is the first patch of our big territory to be opened by the new railway, and it is destined to be one of the thickly settled parts of the Alaska of the future.

The peninsula is almost uninhabited. The country has hardly been prospected, and there are part of the interior that have never been trodden by the foot of a white man.

My trip was over some of the best worn trails, and the information I have concerning the rest of the peninsula comes from the recent explorations of our government scientists, from the miners and prospectors I have met, and from the engineers, geologists, and agriculturists who have been gathering information in connection with the opening up of the peninsula by the new railroad.

The Kenai peninsula is in the heart of the south central coast, a great body of land that hangs down, as it were, from the coast range into the Pacific ocean. It is bounded on the east by Prince William sound and on the west by Cook inlet, from which, at the north, Turnagain Arm extends far into the land.

Peninsula Equal to Vermont.

It is only about ten miles or so from the end of Turnagain Arm across the country to one of the inlets of Prince William sound, and the end of that arm is almost directly north of Resurrection bay, on which Seward is situated. The Alaska Northern railroad, which the government has bought, connects these two points. The total length of the peninsula from northeast to southwest is about 150 miles, and its width in places is from fifty to seventy-five miles.

It is seventy-one miles along the line of the railroad from Seward to Turnagain Arm. The peninsula has altogether an area of 9,500 miles, being about the size of Vermont.

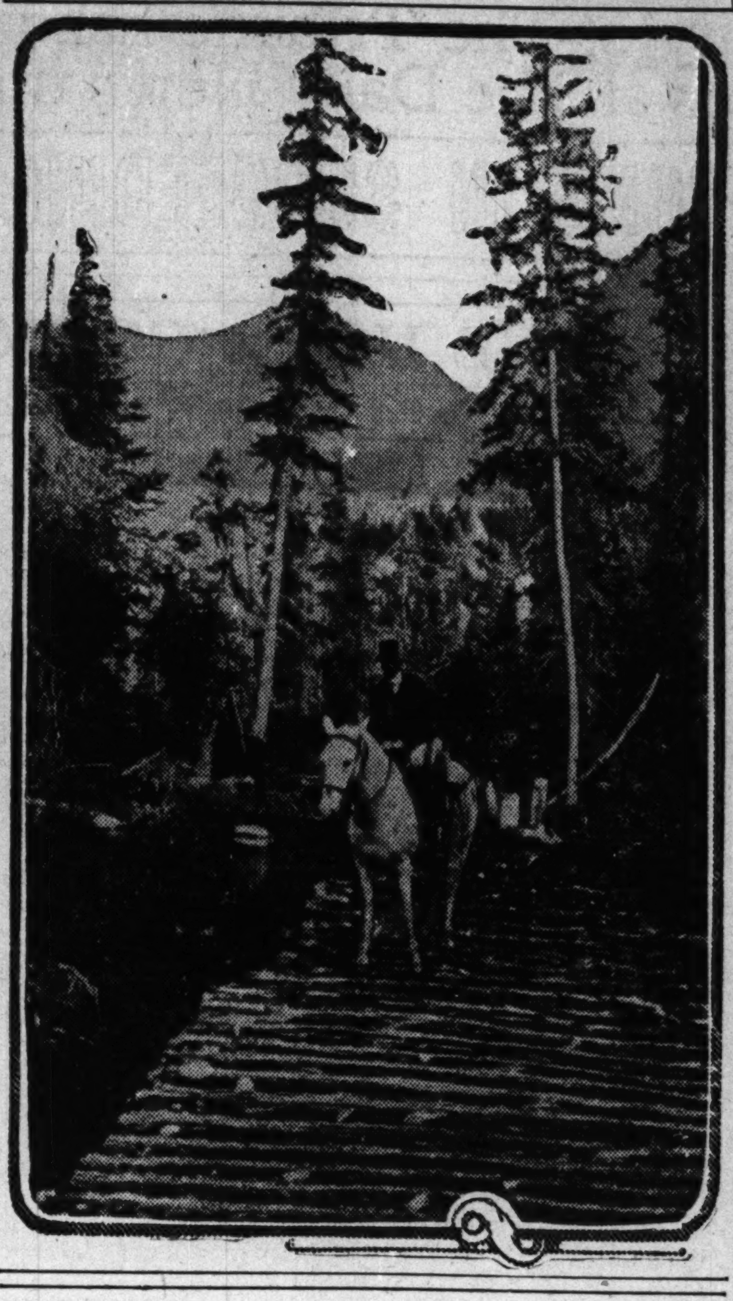
This region on the east is one of high, mountains and broad valleys; on the west is a great lowland plain that slopes down to Cook inlet. At Seward you are in the heart of the Kenai mountains. This range is about as high as the Alleghenies, with some peaks that pierce the clouds above the altitude of Mount Washington. Many of them are snow capped and some have magnificent glaciers.

There are a half dozen glaciers in sight of the harbor of Seward, and one sees many others on his way north by railroad.

Peninsula Is Well Watered.

The peninsula is well watered. The rivers rise in the mountains and most of them flow to the west into Cook inlet. The Kenai and the Kasilof, two of the largest, pass through lakes of considerable size and flow thence in an easy course down to the sea. They go over what is known as the Kenai lowland. This is a plateau from 50 to 200 feet high which runs from Cook inlet eastward to the mountains.

Crossing Kenai in Alaska.



A ride over the railroad from Seward north to Kenai lake is one of the wonder trips of the world. You go up the valley which ends in Resurrection bay amid most magnificent mountains. The mountains begin right at the sea. It is as though Switzerland came down to the ocean and you could ride under its glaciers and snows through valleys and hillsides of the greenest of green.

There are rushing streams and winding lakes. There are great cañons and forest clad cliffs. There are open parks made by nature and in them ferns and wild flowers and grass as high as your waist. The trees on the hillsides are largely spruce and the ozonic air of Alaska carries the sweet smell of the pines into your lungs.

Bear Lake May Get Hatchery.

The first body of water on the way is Bear lake. This is about a mile and a half long and a mile wide. It is filled with fish, and it is said the government intends to establish there a fish hatchery and experimental farm. The location is ideal. It is only six miles from Seward and is in the midst of a natural park surrounded by snowcapped mountains, on the sides of which hang glaciers of sapphire amid forests of emerald.

The place is now in the wilds. In the future it will have an automobile road into Seward, and one can then go back and forth in a quarter of an hour. That region is now known as Woodrow park, named after the president.

Going on to the northward you pass little homesteads which have have been cut out of the woods. They are few and far between and the patches of cultivation are kitchen gardens in size. At Mile 12 I saw an abandoned log cabin and was told that it had been occupied last summer by some city chaps who had come there to hunt. They had expected to stay a week or ten days, but they remained more than two months. Nevertheless, their actual cash outlay for food during that time was less than $10.

Lake Over 1,350 Feet Deep.

We stopped for a time at Kenai lake and then rode along its shores for four or five miles. The lake begins at Mile 19 and it winds through the mountains for twenty-seven miles. It is a mile or so wide, and no one knows how deep. Soundings have been made to 1,350 feet below the surface and the bottom not reached.

The scenery there reminds one of Switzerland. The mountains are snowcapped, and high up on the sides of the green, below the snow line, you can see the trails made by the mountain sheep. The lake is as clear as crystal, and it mirrors its surroundings.

A little farther on is Trail lake, which I should say is eight or ten miles in length and which, like Kenai lake, is full of salmon trout, bass, and grayling. The salmon trout of Kenai are caught by the thousand and dried for dog feed. They sell for 8 cents a pound.

At Mile 29 I left the railroad and took horses to go across country to Sunrise. At that place is Oscar Christiansen's roadhouse. Oscar is a Swede who has a half dozen horses, which he rents out for all that the traffic will bear. He charged me $16 a day for two horses and guide.

Moose Meat Is Alaska Beef.

Before leaving I dined at the roadhouse. The meal was moose meat or Alaska beef cooked over the coals by a 6 foot pioneer. His kitchen stove was a range made at Hamilton, O., and in the living room adjoining were chairs and tables and a rosewood Victrola with several dozen records on top.

There were flowers in the windows. Around the wall were spring beds. The stove of the living room was a section of hydraulic pipe as big around as a flour barrel, with legs of gas pipe. It was long enough to take in a whole stick of cord wood.

Leaving the roadhouse, I started out through the forest and spent the better part of two days in getting to Sunrise.

During the journey we thought we were lost. The guide failed to turn up, as expected, and when he did so he took us along the sides of cliffs, over a trail where the forest fires had made it exceedingly dangerous, and where we had to jump the logs in the darkness, with no telling what might be on the opposite side.

Fertile Valleys Between Hills.

The trip was through one little valley after another, with the grandest of mountains everywhere in sight. The valleys are from a half mile to three miles in width and are like great natural parks. They are often covered with woods, but the forest fires have cleared open spaces and it is easy to see that the whole could be turned into farms.

In going through the valley I wound my way along rushing streams in which great red salmon were battling against the current, making their way over the rocks and through the débris of dead trees and floating brushwood. These salmon were the color of beefsteak and they looked like streaks of raw meat flying along through the water. The streams were of the clearest crystal and here and there are waterfalls.

In other parts of the journey I skirted beautiful lakes so clear that the mighty mountains above them, with their wonderful vegetation and curious outlines, were reflected as though in a looking glass.

The valleys of the peninsula seem to be wonderfully fertile. About twelve miles from the railway I passed through a natural park of spruce, cottonwood, and birches rising out of grass which in the open places reached to my shoulders.

The Kenai peninsula has some of the best moose pastures of Alaska. It has hundreds of moose and the moose are increasing in number notwithstanding the hunters who come here to shoot big game and carry home the antlers as trophies. It is no trouble to get deer or moose horns in this part of the world. I have seen moose antlers that measure sixty-six inches between the tips of the horns.

TARIFFS ON LAKE SHIPPING WILL BE FILED THIS WEEK.

New Corporation, Which Has Taken Over Railroad Boats, to Announce Schedule of Rates.

The Great Lakes Transit corporation, the concern that took over thirty-six of the boats the railroads owned and operated on the lakes, probably will file its tariffs and schedules the first of this week. The corporation already has got special permission from the interstate commerce commission to file its commodity and terminal tariffs and make them effective on one day's notice. They will be known as series 1, 2, 3, and 4 on commodity rates and 5 as to terminal tariffs.

Only eight of the thirty-six boats in the fleet will be put into service immediately, it is said. Representatives of the shippers, however, believe if business warrants others will be added. In the meantime the corporation will use the larger part of the fleet in carrying grain from the head of the lakes, some contracts having been secured at premium rates of 5 cents a bushel.

TEACHER FOR STATE GUARD.

Springfield, Ill., April 15.—Adj. Gen. Dickson announced today that Capt. Cromwell Stacy of the United States infantry has reported here for duty. He will act as instructor for the Illinois national guard.

HOSTS OF D. A. R. MEET THIS WEEK AT WASHINGTON

"Off Year," but Plenty of Throes Expected—Stevenson Painting to Be Presented.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—The Daughters of the American Revolution are gathering for their annual congress, hotels are overflowing, peacock alleys are buzzing with D. A. R. politics, and blooming with handsomely dressed women, "wearing as many decorations as Austrian grand dukes," in the form of the insignia of ancestral societies.

Properly speaking, the congress opens at Continental hall Monday morning at 10 o'clock, but by way of anticipatory festivity the regent and directors of the Smithsonian institution are giving a reception tonight at the National museum in honor of the president general and officers of the D. A. R.; and tomorrow the bishop of Washington (Bishop Harding) has arranged a special patriotic service for them at the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul, at which Chaplain McGrew of the S. A. R. will preach.

Tomorrow's Proceedings.

The session Monday morning will be a business session, devoted largely to getting the delegates properly accredited and arranging the seating. The formal opening exercises, with addresses by the president general, D. A. R., the president of the United States, and divers other celebrities, will take place at the afternoon's session, after which the convention will get down to business.

Nominally this is an "off year" for the D. A. R. That is, they are not in the throes of electing a president general, but failing that supreme throe, they generally manage to create a few, and there is indication that this year will be no exception. There will be ten vice presidents general to be elected and a recording secretary general to fill the place left vacant by the death of Mrs. Julius Cæsar Burrows of Michigan, who did not long survive her distinguished husband.

Elect Officers Wednesday.

The nominations are to be made on Tuesday this year, and the elections will be held on Wednesday, which is shoving the business of election rather forward on the calendar. In previous years it has been deferred until Thursday or even Friday.

A feature of the congress in which the Illinois daughters are particularly interested is the presentation of a splendid oil painting of the late Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, who served the daughters for two terms as president general and was subsequently made an honorary president general.

The portrait is the gift of the Illinois daughters, and will be presented by Mrs. Page, the present state regent. It has already arrived and is a really noteworthy bit of painting, by Lawton Parker, said to be the only American who ever took the great gold medal at the Paris exhibition. Since his return from abroad he has located in Chicago.

Stevensons to Attend.

Mrs. Stevenson's daughter, Miss Letitia Stevenson; her son, Mr. Louis Stevenson, secretary of the state of Illinois, and his daughter, who is a student at Bryn Mawr, are coming to Washington to be present at the presentation ceremony. They will be the house guests during their stay of their cousin, Mrs. Carl Vrooman, wife of the assistant secretary of agriculture and daughter of Mrs. Matthew Scott, who had two brilliant terms as president general, D. A. R., and is now an honorary president general. Mrs. Scott has been spending the winter with Mrs. Vrooman.

WITH the possible exception of the sale closed late in the week in Randolph street, the week's real estate market was of an unusually uninteresting character, reflecting, it is thought, the cumulative and distracting influence of two consecutive election weeks.

The week's business was along narrow lines, and with few exceptions the transactions reported, as well as made matters of record, were of a commonplace character. If it were not for the fact that brokers generally report a good inquiry for most classes of property, with many deals in course of negotiation, the outlook would not be particularly encouraging.

However, there are some big deals about ready to break, some of which should be put over during the coming week.

Building on Large Scale.

As has been the case for some time, building operations continue on an amazingly large scale in the outlying districts—amazingly large in view of the vast amount of construction which has been going on there for the last year and a half, and which probably will continue so long as the mortgage loan market continues in its present condition, with builders able to borrow from 75 to 100 per cent of the value of the properties given as security.

Of course, this is not the rule, fortunately, but the fact remains that there are altogether too many excessively full building loans being made for the good of the market.

The Randolph street sale covered the property at 175-177, being 80 feet east of Fifth avenue, which was sold by Rudolph Migely for a stated consideration of $215,000, William A. Niles taking title for the purchaser, it is stated.

Valued at $176,343 by Board.

The lot fronts 40.4 feet, with a depth of 180 feet, north front, and is improved with a four story building which is understood to have been given no value in the transaction, making the sale at the rate of $5,321 a front foot and $29.56 a square foot. The board of review valued the property at $176,343, of which $16,000 is in the building.

The building is occupied by the Bismarck restaurant and hotel, owned by the Eitels, who hold it under a lease running to 1924 at a net annual rent of $10,000. It is interesting to note that the property has been in the possession of the Migely family for over fifty years.

The deal was negotiated by Albert H. Wetten & Co., who represented both parties.

I. C. Pays Stiff Price.

A sale of comparative insignificance so far as concerns the consideration involved, only $20,000, was closed late in the week, but it is of special interest as showing that the Illinois Central is having to pay a round price for some property it is acquiring in connection with its plans for the erection of an eight story fireproof office building adjoining its Sixty-third street station.

The property, which was acquired from Mary Ann Hamlin, comprises 25x130 feet, north front, in Sixty-third street, 100 feet east of Dorchester avenue, and 39 feet west of the road's right of way. For this parcel the road paid $20,000, which is at the rate of $800 a foot.

Seeks Another 40 Feet.

There is another forty feet adjoining which the road is seeking to acquire, and which it may have to resort to condemnation proceedings to secure, as well as 50 of the 150 feet on Dorchester avenue. In marked contrast to this is the price at which another nearby parcel on Sixty-third street sold, according to the deed filed for record on Friday.

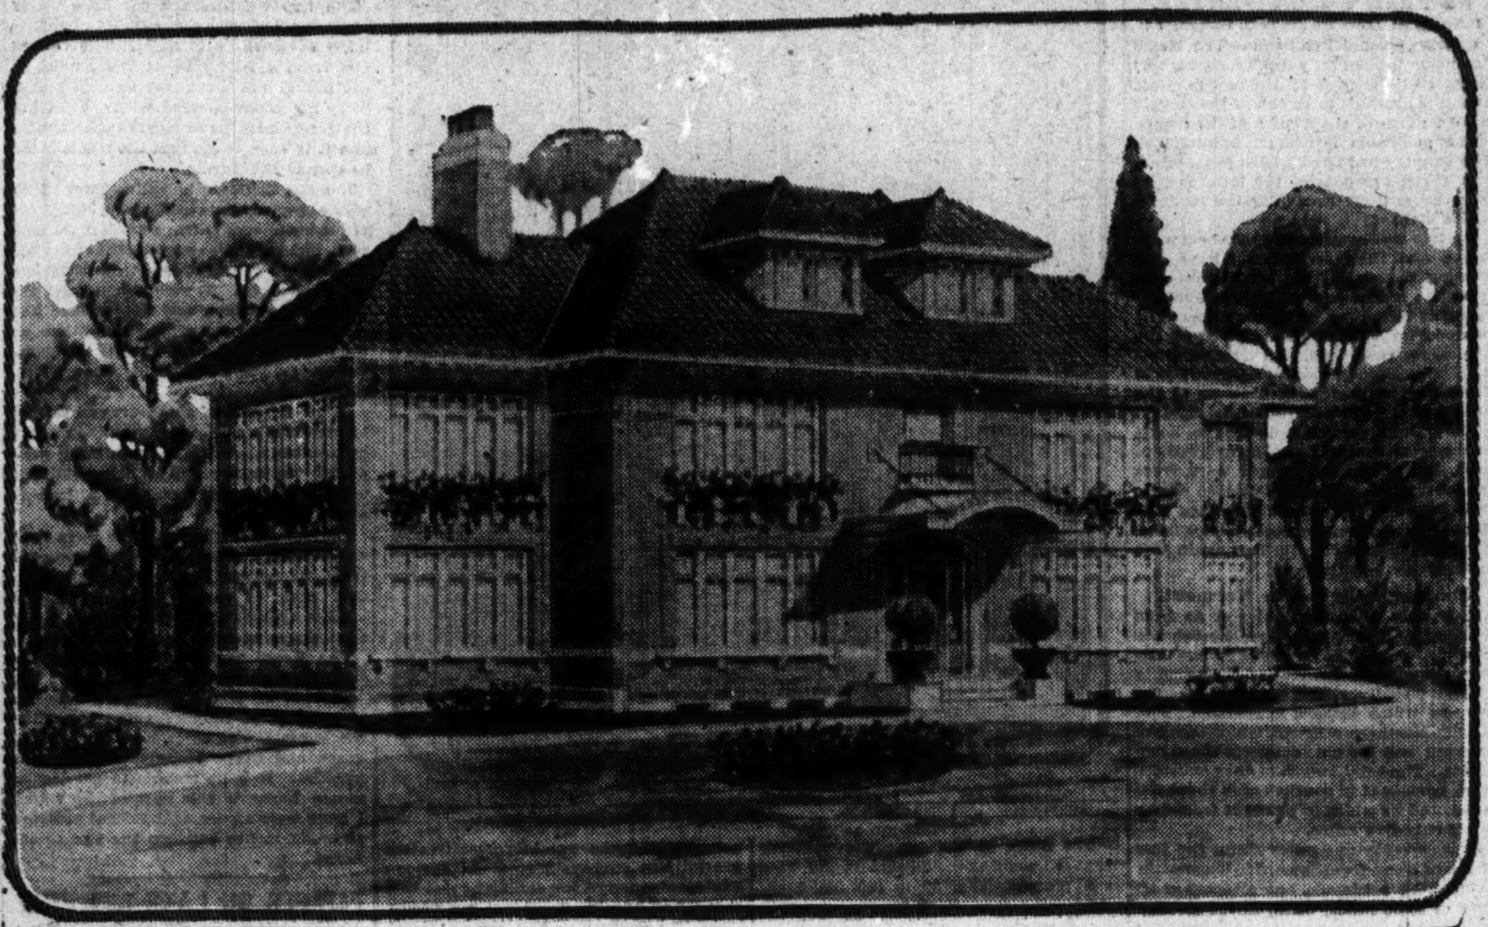
The property, which is 115 feet west of Stony Island avenue, with 50 feet north front and a depth of 150 feet, was sold for an indicated consideration of $17,200, which is at the rate of $344 a foot.

WANT STATE REALTY BOARD.

The Cook county real estate board, at its monthly meting last Tuesday, adopted a resolution favoring the formation of a state organization of real estate boards throughout the state of Illinois, and a resolution was adopted instructing President Robert E. L. Brooks to carry out the purpose of the resolution as seems best to him. The preamble recited that there is need of unity and coöperation among real estate brokers and owners throughout the state.

ATTRACTIVE HOME GOING UP

New Residence of W. T. Woodley in Highland Park Subdivision.



An exceedingly attractive residence is being erected by William T. Woodley on his new Highland Park subdivision, "Woodley." It was designed by Architect Roy F. France and is expected to cost about $50,000. The first floor is to have a living room 19x29 feet, with library, kitchen, servants' dining room, sun parlor, and breakfast porch. Four sleeping rooms, with three baths and two sleeping porches, will be on the second floor, while the third floor will contain servants' rooms. It will be of brick construction, with tile roof. A garage with room for three machines will be in the rear. It is in the immediate vicinity of several handsome homes, while Albert Pick is building a $100,000 home in the next block.

OUTSIDE STORE PROPERTY SLOW

Deals in Business Holdings Involve Only Medium Priced Sites.

There were no transactions of any particular importance in outside business property, the showing in fact being of an unusually uninteresting character.

In the outlying south side district Rupert J. Henry conveyed to Wirt W. Burch the property in Stony Island avenue, 200 feet south of Sixty-third street, 50x190 feet, east front, with three story business building, for an indicated $50,000, subject to $35,000. Mr. Henry acquired the property a short time ago.

The Marshall & Huschart Manufacturing company in the exercise of an option of purchase contained in a long term lease have acquired from Mrs. Mary Smyth Nelson et al. the fee in the property in Jefferson street, 110 feet south of Madison street, 78x79 feet, west front, for $45,000. They are now occupying the property.

Lawndale Bank Takes Up Option.

The Lawndale National bank in the exercise also of an option of purchase acquired from F. G. Hajicek, president of the bank, the property in West Twenty-sixth street, 25 feet west of Turner avenue, lot 28x125 feet, west front, improved with a bank building occupied entirely by the bank. The consideration is $50,000.

Edward M. and Charles W. Schaack sold to David and Alex Lucchesi for reported $18,000, subject to $8,000, the northeast corner State and Chestnut streets, 41.8x56.8, with old frame buildings. Emil H. Schintz and Crowe Bros. were the brokers.

The property in Milwaukee avenue, 80 feet southeast of West Ohio street, east front, 80.9x77 feet on the east and 116 feet west depth, with brick business improvements, has been conveyed by C. B. Heffenberg to Harry A. Sultan for an expressed consideration of $25,000.

Buys Komensky Avenue Corner.

John Liniger has purchased from Mary Shea the property at the southeast corner of Komensky avenue and W. Eighteenth street, lot 50x125 feet, with store and flat improvements, for an expressed consideration of $22,000, subject to an incumbrance of $9,500.

Record was made of the purchase by the Rogers Park National bank from Lela M. McDuffee of the vacant property at the southeast corner of North Clark street and Lunt avenue, lot 72½x110 feet, for an indicated consideration of $22,500, subject to an incumbrance of $7,500. Plans are being prepared for a bank building on the corner fifty feet.

An interesting transaction under the Torrens system was the sale by Peter C. Bruhn to Louis Lagorio of the property in Kedzie avenue, 50 feet north of Twenty-sixth street, lot 48x124 feet, east front, with store and flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $31,000 clear.

CROATIAN HOME BUYS SITE.

The Croatian National and Turners' home of Chicago has purchased from Joseph Souhrada the property at 1906-07 South Racine avenue for an indicated consideration of $17,500. The lot is 50x125 feet and is improved with a three story brick building with stores on the ground floor and halls on the upper floors. It is the purpose to remodel the building and use it for gymnastic, literary, and educational purposes for the benefit of the Croatian people of Chicago. The sale was negotiated by Frank J. Petru.

SCHOOL LANDS INSPECTED.

Members of the sites committee of the board of education visited school property in the outlying districts yesterday and inspected more than 1,000 acres owned by the board. No income is derived from the property and according to some board members some of the land is not desirable for school sites. The sites visited are in Austin, Cragin, Clearing, and at East Eighty-third street and Cottage Grove avenue. Sale of the property is opposed by some board members on the ground that some day it will be valuable.

SEVERAL GOOD VACANT DEALS

Purchases Made Principally for Speculation—Little Building Involved.

There were several interesting transactions in vacant reported during the week, wherein the purchases are thought to have been made as speculations and in which no building plans are involved.

Chancellor L. Jenks acquired an attractive parcel in the Lake View district. He purchased from Leo Heller the plot of 120x203½ feet at the northeast corner of Lakeside terrace and Rogers avenue for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. The property just previous to the transfer to Mr. Jenks was acquired by Mr. Heller from H. W. Anderson for the same consideration. Mr. Jenks purchased the property as a speculation and has no plans looking to its improvement.

Mayor Sells South Side Site.

Mayor William Hale Thompson and wife appeared as grantors in a transfer filed for record. The transfer covered the property in East Sixty-third place, 141 feet east of Maryland avenue, 140½x124 feet, south front, and the property in East Sixty-third street, 194 feet east of Maryland avenue, 24x125 feet, north front, which was conveyed by Mayor Thompson et al. to Nicholas Kyreakopoulas for an indicated consideration of $18,000.

Evanston Deal of Interest.

An interesting Evanston transaction was the sale by Dr. Gustav W. Kaufmann to Frederick W. Spaulding of the property at the southeast corner of Hinman avenue and Main street, lot 100 feet on Hinman avenue by 159 feet on Main street to an alley. The improvement consists of an old frame residence.

A nominal consideration is given, but the property is said to have been valued at $25,000. It is stated the new owner has no plans for building. Both parties to the transaction were represented by W. W. Wilson of Murdock, James & Co.

ELECTRIC LIGHT MEN TO MEET IN CHICAGO.

Thirty-ninth Convention of National Organization to Be Attended by 4,000 Visitors.

The thirty-ninth convention of the National Electric Light association will be held in the Congress and Auditorium hotels on May 22 to 26.

This association is composed of companies and individuals engaged in or interested in the electricity supply business. It is the representative society of the electric central station interests, having over 13,000 members.

The association was organized in Chicago in 1885 and since then six conventions have been held in Chicago. A Chicago man, E. W. Lloyd, general contract agent of the Commonwealth Edison company, is president. Several other Chicago men have filled the presidential chair, including C. H. Wilmerding, Samuel Insull, Louis A. Ferguson, and John F. Gilchrist. Mr. Insull is chairman of the local arrangements committee for the 1916 convention. An attendance of at least 4,000 persons is expected.

EDITOR COOLEY WILL SPEAK.

Stoughton Cooley, editor of the Public, will be the speaker at Tuesday's weekly luncheon of the Cook county real estate board at the Hotel Sherman, his subject being: "Is the Pending Tax Amendment a Good One." C. D. Goodman will act as toastmaster.

NEW BUILDING PLANS FIGURE BIG IN TRADING

Permit for a $700,000 Cold Storage Warehouse on North Side Is the Chief Feature.

In the way of new building projects and land sales involving important undertakings the north side cut a particularly prominent figure in the week's realty market.

In the way of permits issued the most important was that covering the proposed cold storage warehouse to be erected by the Central Cold Storage company at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Kinzie street, mention of which has been previously made. It will be fourteen stories high and will cost $700,000, according to the permit.

An attractive eight story building will be erected by Frank Cuneo of Garibaldi & Cuneo, at the southeast corner of Clark and South Water streets, on 22x90 feet of ground, with a three story structure on the 20x80 feet adjoining on the west, to cost $100,000. The building will be devoted to stores and offices for commission merchants. The present four story buildings will be wrecked May 1.

A nine story fireproof building in which each of the seven apartments will contain eighteen rooms will be erected by Charles B. Smith of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer company on Sheridan road, just north of Aldine avenue.

The lot is 71 feet, with a maximum depth of 150 feet, and the building will cost about $250,000. It was designed by L. G. Hallberg & Co. and the apartments will rent at over $5,000 a year. The building will be in charge of Paul Steinbrecher & Co.

Six Story Flats to Go Up.

Joseph E. Swanson will erect a six story twelve apartment building on Fullerton parkway, 57 feet east of Commonwealth avenue, to cost about $250,000. It will occupy a lot 100x160 feet, which Mr. Swanson purchased from Margaret Adams for a reported consideration of $40,000, which is at the rate of $400 a front foot. It is just west of the high grade sixteen apartment building which Mr. Swanson is erecting in conjunction with Ralph C. Otis and William G. Hibbard.

Plans for another big north side apartment building are being prepared by Architect Carl W. Westerlind. It will occupy a lot at the southeast corner of Pine Grove avenue and Surf street, 148x145 feet, and will contain fifteen apartments of six, seven, nine, and ten rooms, and will cost about $200,000.

18 Apartment Building Planned.

William Hill will erect an eighteen apartment building to cost about $70,000 on 47½x161 feet of ground, at the southwest corner of Dante avenue and Sixty-eighth street, which he purchased from Fanny L. Holmes for $7,500. H. G. Howard & Co., in connection with Baird & Warner, were the brokers, the former negotiating a loan of $45,000 at 6 per cent in connection with the construction of the building.

It is understood the establishment of a new large Catholic parish is involved in a sale reported during the week. The property, which is at the southwest corner of Sixty-second and Sangamon streets, 200x125 feet, has been sold by Lyman Lloyd and others, title being taken by Rodolfo Carrea of Brooklyn, N. Y., for an indicated consideration of $20,000. Herbert A. Harrell was the broker.

An interesting transaction reported in the Stony Island avenue district is the sale by Patrick McFadden to Phillip Blazer of the fifty feet of vacant at 6827-31 Stony Island avenue for a reported consideration of $10,750, which is at the rate of $215 a front foot. It is thought the purchaser will later on improve with a business building. S. H. Harrison of H. F. Norcott & Co. represented both parties.

FEW BIG RESIDENCE SALES REPORTED DURING WEEK.

There were few transactions in residence property of any moment. An interesting transaction on the north side, although hardly to be classed as residence property, was the sale by Dittman Sauer to Joseph M. and Victor Weil of the property at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Rokeby street for an indicated $32,000, clear.

The lot is 129x122 feet, improved with a large ten room frame dwelling, which has been occupied for some time for tearoom purposes. It is thought to have been a speculative purchase, as the Weils are said to have no plans for improving the property.

Bernard H. Brennan, president of the Brennan Packing company, purchased from Mrs. Rebecca H. Hanson the fourteen room brick dwelling on 75x297 feet of ground at 4737 Ellis avenue for a reported $25,000. J. Grafton Parker & Co. made the sale.

The same brokers also have sold for O. P. Powell, assistant general manager of the Pullman company, to Eugene L. Morse the residence property at 5113 Woodlawn avenue, the dwelling being a ten room structure, for a reported consideration of $15,000.

6 ACRE TRACT FOR $35,000.

An interesting small acre deal in the northwest part of the city was the sale by Katherine J. Ormonde to George R. Hotchkiss Jr. of the triangular tract of six acres bounded by Elston avenue, Logan boulevard, and Diversey boulevard, for a reported consideration of $35,000, which is at the rate of $5,833 an acre. The tract comprised a part of the large holdings of the late George Snow, and will be subdivided and placed on the market.

Leases and Loans.

A number of interesting business leases were closed during the week, Willoughby & Co. reporting several for Lyon & Healy in the building so long occupied by them at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Adams street. One comprises the store at 21-25 East Adams street, which was leased to Brown & McKinnon for restaurant purposes. The lease is for two years and ten months at a term rent of $34,000.

Another, to the Chicago Music company, covers the store at 204 South Wabash avenue and the entire third floor of the building, at a term rent of $17,234. The entire fourth floor of the building has been leased to the American Trust and Security company for two years and ten months at a term rent of $11,634. The store at 27 East Adams street was leased to Ella Hayes for a Betsy Ross Candy shop for two years and ten months at a term rent of $11,850.

A store at the corner was leased to the United Cigar Stores company for two years and ten months at term rent of $7,000. The store at 17 East Adams street was leased to George Mangos for shoe shining parlor for two years and ten months at term rent of $7,084.

John R. Magill & Co. leased for the Coca-Cola company to Magill-Weinsheimer company the entire fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth floors and south half of third floor in Coca-Cola building at 1322-30 South Wabash avenue for a term rent of $135,000.

Magill & Co. also leased for Mrs. Anna L. Sears to Raymond G. Hancock & Co., subdividers, the bank floor 31 and 33 North Dearborn street, in the Portland block, for a term from April.

For Mrs. Anna L. Sears to A. Pappas, the store at 37 North Dearborn street, in the Portland block, for a term of years from May 1, 1916, at a rental of $10,500.

For M. S. Rosenwald to George Arndt, 950 feet of space on the third floor of the Venetian building for a term from April 1, 1916, at a rental of $5,400.

Alexander Bauer has leased to the Lawson Manufacturing company a seven story and basement reinforced concrete building on 42x130 feet of ground, which he will erect at the northeast corner of Franklin and Superior streets. It will cost about $70,000, and the lease runs for fifteen years at an annual rent of $7,301, or $109,515 for the term. C. F. Durland & Co. were the brokers.

The feature in a loan way was that of $500,000 by J. L. Houghteling Jr., trustee, to Ira W. Cohn et al., twenty years, at 6 per cent, on the Kesner building and the leasehold estate in the 101x162 feet of ground on which it is located at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Madison street. It is subject to a prior loan of $750,000, bearing 5½ per cent, made a few months ago.

In another interesting loan made a matter of record, Thomas M. Smyth et al. have given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $160,000, five years, at 5 per cent, secured by the property at the northwest corner of Halsted and Adams streets, 95x125 feet, and other property.

An interesting loan on outside property because of the interest rate, 5 per cent, was made by Foreman Bros. Banking company to Fred W. Alwart, secured by the property at the northwest corner of Larrabee street and North avenue, 50x127 feet, with brick business improvements.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $165,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to Adolph Lauter, secured by the Cambridge apartments at the northeast corner of Diversey parkway and Cambridge avenue, lot 60x150 feet.

Frederick Becklenberg has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $85,000, five years, at 6 per cent, secured by the Biltmore apartments at the southwest corner of Kenmore and Catalpa avenues.

Henry E. Coonley, for many years the real estate and loan agent of the Berkshire Life Insurance company, will in the future take on the duties which heretofore have been handled by Frederick W. Harnwell at his office in the Borland block. Mr. Coonley will remove from the Boyce building to the eighth floor of the Lumber Exchange building.

H. O. Stone & Co. have underwritten a bond issue of $90,000 on the Hyde Park Boulevard Apartments, situate 5312 to 5318 Hyde Park boulevard (formerly East End avenue), for one to five years at 6 per cent per annum.

BUILDING PERMITS SHOW INCREASE OVER YEAR AGO.

A comparison of the permits issued by the city building department last week with the corresponding week a year ago indicates in a striking manner the great increase in building operations during the year. Thus, for last week there were 228 permits issued with a total cost of $3,595,200, as compared with 150 permits and a total cost of $989,725 for the corresponding week in 1915. The increase is particularly interesting in view of the fact that the cost of building materials is on an average about 15 per cent higher than a year or year and a half ago. The chief advance has been in structural steel, the price of which has advanced from $48 a year ago to $80 at the present time.

TRADING SLUMPS IN APARTMENTS ALL OVER CITY

Sheridan Road Sale for $87,000 Leads—Value Jumps $17,000 in Year.

The movement of apartment house property was on a smaller scale than for several weeks, and was without any notably important transactions, the top figure as to consideration being $87,000. It was the sale by Ruby R. Leffingwell, wife of George M. Leffingwell, to Fred C. Ehman of the fifteen apartment building on 98x125 feet at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Windsor avenue. It is said to have a gross annual rent of about $9,000.

In part payment Mr. Ehman conveyed the twelve flat building at 1468-72 Argyle street at a reported consideration of $40,500. Mrs. Leffingwell is said to have paid only $70,000 for the property less than a year ago. Krause, Beak & Co. in connection with H. W. Croxton & Co. were the brokers.

24 Flat Structure Sold.

A noteworthy south side apartment house deal was the sale by Charles J. Johnson to Morris Stopnar of the new high grade twenty-four apartment building on a lot 120x125 feet at 6820-30 Ridgeland avenue for an indicated consideration of $85,000, subject to an incumbrance of $52,500.

The building, which is in the court style, is said to have a gross annual rent of $12,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment a store and garage property on the west side. Baird & Warner were the brokers in the deal.

The twelve apartment building at 4028-32 Calumet avenue, with 50x150 feet of ground, has been purchased by Rankin C. Walkup of Crawfordsville, Ind., from Julius P. Friend for a reported consideration of $41,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,000. In exchange the buyer conveyed an improved farm of 320 acres in Beadle county, South Dakota, adjoining the city of Huron, clear. The transaction was negotiated by George W. Stewart and E. B. Woolf & Co.

Notable Deal on West Side.

A noteworthy transaction in west side flat property, made a matter of record, was the sale by S. B. Galbraith to August F. Groth of the property at the southwest corner of Lamon and Park avenues, lot 60x125 feet, east front, for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $28,000.

Walter G. Young has purchased from M. S. Plotke the property in Beacon street, forty-one feet north of Montrose boulevard, lot 58x150 feet, with six flat building, for an indicated consideration of $29,075, subject to an incumbrance of $20,075.

Charlotte D. and Richard D. Lyman have sold through James Patton of Lyman & Patton to Nicholas Wolf the six apartment building at 4140-44 Clarendon avenue for a reported consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of $3,960.

The property in Dorchester avenue, 200 feet south of Fifty-sixth street, lot 50x150 feet, west front, with apartment house improvements, has been conveyed by Richard Curran to Genevieve Kaynor for an indicated consideration of $23,500, subject to an incumbrance of $15,500.

ONE REASON WHY LITTLE PROGRESS IS REPORTED ON THE ISONZO FRONT—Austrian soldiers climbing one of the almost perpendicular routes of the Alps. Much of the fighting between the Austro-Hungarian and the Italian armies has been carried on in the Alps mountains, where commanding positions are reached only through great difficulties and where it is impossible to draw up and emplace large caliber guns. RATS

RAT TAILS WORTH A PENNY APIECE IN THE TRENCHES—To reduce the number of rats that swarm the French trenches a penny is paid for every rat tail that is brought in. The photograph shows a soldier rat hunter delivering his harvest of rat tails to a noncommissioned officer.

AN OFFICIAL RAT CATCHER, with his dog and their quarry. Hordes of rats infest the trenches on the western front, and rat hunting has become one of the popular sports with the British and French troops. The French hunt the rats in their trenches with terriers, and men have been officially appointed rat catchers. Hundreds of ferrets have been sent over to the British lines in Flanders to abate the rat nuisance. The photograph shows an official French rat catcher and the results of his day's work.

NO BANDAGED FEET FOR HER—Princess (or Mrs., since China is again a republic at the time of going to press) Chen Chi, wife of the commissioner general for China at the Panama-Pacific exposition, has looked upon American footwear and found it good. She is going to try to make the custom more prevalent in China. The shoes she has on are size 1. Unlike many Chinese women visitors to the United States, she does not wear trousers.

THE SON OF THE SON OF HEAVEN—Prince Sumi, fourth son of the "heavenly lord emperor," was born Dec. 2 last. He is shown here with his nurse, Mrs. Torimo Nogahi, successful among a large number of Japanese women who entered the competition in Tokio for the honor of nursing the royal infant. In accordance with the ancient Shinto custom it was 120 days after the birth of the prince before his father saw him. On that day, Jan. 23, the child was taken in state from his own palace of Aoyama, first to the shrine of Korsida to pay his respects to his imperial ancestors, and then to the palace of the mikado. The mikado at the conclusion of the ritual of presentation of the prince gave his son a sword, which the prince will retain through life as his most sacred possession. This little cherry blossom will begin his military education at the age of 5.

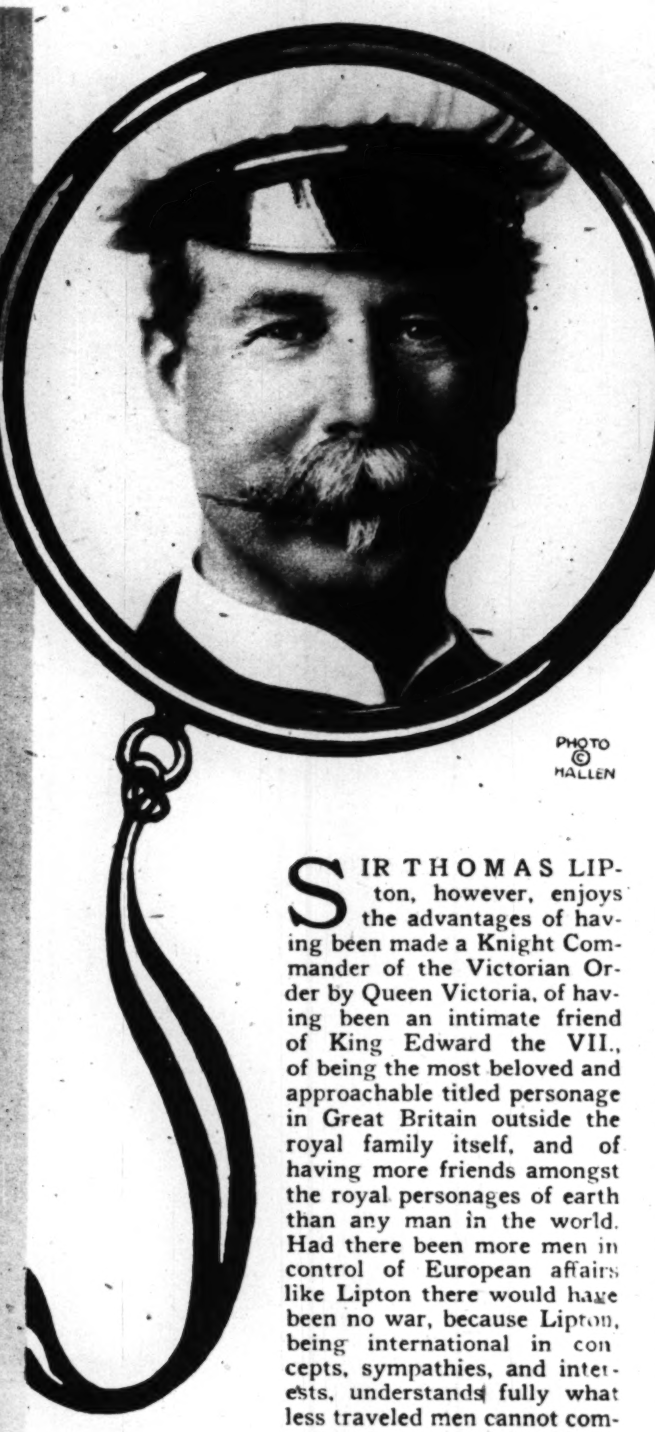
J. H. OSTRANDER and SIR THOMAS LIPTON, K. C. V. O.,

both created nobleman by natural endowments and personality.

J. H. Ostrander, Chicago's famous refractionist.

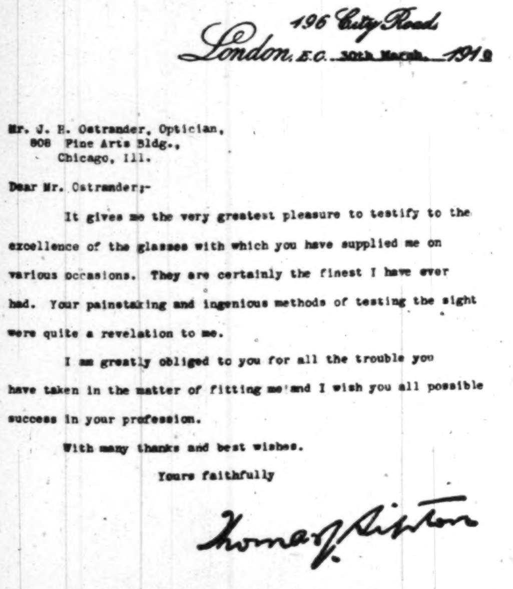


SIR THOMAS LIPTON, however, enjoys the advantages of having been made a Knight Commander of the Victorian Order by Queen Victoria, of having been an intimate friend of King Edward the VII., of being the most beloved and approachable titled personage in Great Britain outside the royal family itself, and of having more friends amongst the royal personages of earth than any man in the world. Had there been more men in control of European affairs like Lipton there would have been no war, because Lipton, being international in concepts, sympathies, and interests, understands fully what less traveled men cannot comprehend—namely: that all the peoples of the world are alike in elemental characteristics, love of native heath, of offspring, parental love, courage, self-sacrifice, social instincts, and reciprocity: and that were it not for the intervention of man-made institutions all the peoples of earth would be loving instead of hating each other today. For, after all, is not the sight of a babe flattening his tiny nose against the ample breast of a young Spanish mother as beautiful as though she were French, German, Russian, Dutch, Italian or English? All babes suckle alike in all tongues. Maternal love knows no boundary lines, no national flags; it is universal. Some day the minds of all men will develop up to the mighty truths of nature and humanity. Then we will have universal thinking, universal interests, universal sympathies, universal love, and, as a result, universal peace. For the kingdoms of earth are not at the various capitals as some suppose, but in the hearts and in the minds of the people.

Lipton's discovery and unqualified praise of Ostrander's inimitable skill are characteristic of this great man. He endorses Ostrander not because of birth, wealth, social or political status, but solely and only because of his ability to deliver the goods professionally.

He might have taken his glasses and have enjoyed them quietly and selfishly, but this would not have been like the impulsive and generous Lipton. He must call from the house-tops that all men might know of the unusual qualifications of Ostrander; might enjoy with him the comforts of perfect vision, as a result of perfectly fitted glasses.

A Letter From Sir Thomas Lipton



196 City Road.
London, E.C. 30th March, 1919

Mr. J. H. Ostrander, Optician,
808 Fine Arts Bldg.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Ostrander;-

It gives me the very greatest pleasure to testify to the excellence of the glasses with which you have supplied me on various occasions. They are certainly the finest I have ever had. Your painstaking and ingenious methods of testing the sight were quite a revelation to me.

I am greatly obliged to you for all the trouble you have taken in the matter of fitting me and I wish you all possible success in your profession.

With many thanks and best wishes.

Yours faithfully

Thomas J. Lipton

Lipton's letter to Ostrander is indeed commendatory of the wonderful work performed by this skillful man, but he is not alone in his praises. From all parts of the world men and women of every walk in life consult Ostrander because of his intuitive ability to diagnose and correct troublesome and complicated errors of vision.
